Cotton Farmers Can Aid Program

Bulloch county farmers can help strengthen the market for cotton by making the market for cotton wide use of the 1951 Commodity Credit Corporation cotton loan.

By placing cotton in the loan farmers can spread the marketing of this year's crop over a longer period of time and prevent market glut.

"Cotton farmers must realize, however," Mr. Taylor said, "that a loan under the market will not increase the price of cotton."

Peanut Farmers Need To Check

As in 1949 and 1950, it is possible for a producer, who is overplanted, to sign an agreement to receive a within quota or excess all marketing card, whichever is applicable, to market his peanuts without paying penalty. This year, however, due to a change in the 1951 Marketing Quota Regulations, a marketing card cannot be issued at the same time an agreement is signed. Therefore, if producers intend to sign an agreement for 1951, it will be to the growers' advantage to call by the office at least two weeks prior to the time they expect to market their peanuts in order that necessary arrangements can be made for the timely issuance of a marketing card.

Mill Street Now Belongs To Public

MILL STREET is now a public street. Mill street is being cleaned up.

The attorneys of the F. W. Darby Lumber Company last Friday morning asked Judge J. L. Renfro to dismiss the injunction they had filed against members of the city council enjoining them from taking any action to clear up Mill street between South Main street and South Zetweter.

Then on Monday morning of this week Mr. Darby notified Mayor Gilbert Cone that he had had the over pass at the mill site torn down and that the city engineer could move his equipment in and clear up the street.

The hearing before the city council called for Tuesday morning of this week was called off. It was at this meeting that the F. W. Darby Lumber Company was to have been asked to show cause why the "nuisance and menace to the public safety you are maintaining on Mill street in Statesboro, Ga., should not be abated."

With Mr. Darby's notification that the city engineer might move in equipment and clear up the street, the city council was notified by its attorneys that the scheduled hearing became unnecessary.

They're of Great Stature

MOTHERS with sons now fighting in Korea, or with sons who are home on rotation after fighting there, can be very proud of those sons.

Colonel William Quinn, home from the fighting in Korea, was guest speaker at the Rotary Club meeting Monday.

In his talk to those businessmen of Statesboro, he paid high tribute to the American infantryman.

He described them as men from all walks of life, from all types of families, with all degrees of education... men from cities, men from the country.

"They're really tops," Colonel Quinn said.

He said of them that, once properly trained, with complete confidence in their leadership, and once the combination is tried, they become of great stature. "It is something I'll carry with me as long as I live," he said.

It is reassuring to hear leaders like Colonel Quinn bring us these facts. We need more of it.

We only hope our leaders in Washington can be made to know it and, knowing it, will follow their example.

Cooperation Nets Results

THE CITY'S CAMPAIGN to make the sanitation department's work more efficient is producing excellent results.

James Bland, city engineer, and Bill Bowen, chairman of the city's sanitation department, say that, for the most part, they are securing excellent cooperation in their attempt to relieve the pressure on trash and garbage collection.

They cited the case of a citizen who spent a lot of time cleaning up his yard. The one trash can was filled, and the balance of trash was placed beside the can. When the collection was made the collectors picked up the trash in the can but left the trash piled beside it.

That citizen phoned in and protested. On the surface it would seem that the complaint was justifiable.

But trash piled on the ground is apt to be scattered by the winds, by stray dogs, and litter up a neighbor's yard. And that is bad.

It was explained that the ordinance which governs the collection of trash and garbage is distinct and specifies that a home owner must have "enough containers" to take care of all the trash, garbage, litter, etc. that is to be collected by the sanitation department.

And another matter which the city authorities charged with collection of garbage wishes understood is the size of the can. The ordinance does not specify the exact measurements and size of container. But it does state that it must be one of a size manageable by two men.

A 55-gallon oil drum being used for trash can be handled by two men if it contains only papers, cardboard boxes and other light trash. But if weeds, grass with dirt still in the roots, heavy trash and heavy garbage is dumped in such a can, it can become heavy—and in the absence of a lid when it rains, it can become unmanageable.

The drivers of collection trucks state that there are many new trash and garbage cans in Statesboro. They express their appreciation.

Before 9 o'clock Monday morning the city engineer had moved in the city's equipment and was standing by, ready to prepare Mill street for safe use by the public.

We commend the Darby Lumber Company for its action. We believe that out of it will come a better understanding in the future. We believe that it is entirely possible that the lumber company will rebuild its mills and conform to all the requirements to give citizens of Statesboro unrestricted use of Mill street with complete freedom from fear of their safety.

The Darby Lumber Company has been a part of Statesboro for many years at its present location.

It now has a wonderful opportunity to build public goodwill.

In planning to rebuild, it would be an asset to that community if the plans were drawn up to make it a part of the community. Let it fit. Let it consider the desires of citizens who live in that community.

Make it clean, and an industry of which Statesboro can be proud.

Woods Burners Warned

There are still many places which need new cans. If Statesboro is to be the clean city we boast of, then let's continue our cooperation with the sanitation department in making their work more efficient.

Along with Mr. Roberts' statement comes another from Guyton DeLoach, director of the Georgia Forestry Commission.

"Stiffer fines and longer sentences behind bars may be the order for those who continue wanton burning of Georgia's forestlands."

And it's about time.

There's no need to remind citizens of Bulloch county that our forests and timber lands are part of the greatness that is ours. They are not only one of our greatest sources of wealth, but also one of our greatest sources of delight.

And so the state forestry commission is increasing the emphasis on strict enforcement of the state's forest fire laws.

The commission has doubled its staff of law enforcement officers in the past two years. These are trained and experienced men using the latest and most modern crime detection methods to focus the responsibility on those who maliciously violate our fire laws.

Landowners planning to burn their own land must notify all other landowners whose acres the fire might reach if it got out of control. This notice should be given 24 hours in advance of burning.

Landowners, according to the forest fire law, must also plow firebreaks about the area on which they plan control burns. The Georgia law says no matter whether a person intended to let a fire get to another's land or whether the breakaway fire was an accident, that person is guilty of at least a misdemeanor.

Any person who willfully and maliciously sets fire to woods of another without permission is guilty of a felony. Conviction of this crime carries a sentence of one to two years in prison.

This summer season has been particularly dangerous and the "fall fire season" coming on is something to dread.

Stiffer fines and longer prison sentences are the answers.

Let would-be woods burners be warned.

Some natures are too good to be spoiled by praise, and whenever the vein of thought, reaches down into the profound, there is no danger from vanity.—Emerson.

Real joy comes not from ease or riches or from the praise of men, but from doing something worthwhile.—Sir Wilfred Grenfell.

Few persons have sufficient wisdom to prefer censure, which is useful, to praise which deceives them.—Rochefoucauld.

My Children.

Your Children The Bright Ones

By VIRGINIA RUSSELL

Dear gentle reader, or any kind of reader—just let there be one:

Your writer has returned to her youth or reached dotage, and turned co-ed at Georgia Teachers College this summer.

For the past ten years, the gifted children have caused increased and widespread interest. There are two reasons; one is that they are also the neglected children, and the other reason is that they are the gifted children.

In our democratic country, education of the masses has unintentionally set a standard or level whereby all children were educated. The average children were taught with this level in mind.

The below-average children required a great deal of the teacher's time and sympathy in trying to bring him up as nearly as possible to the standard. But the exceptionally bright children have been sorely neglected because they demanded little of the teacher's time so they learned quickly and easily.

The teacher today, already overburdened, has added responsibilities such as lunch room money and Red Cross money, etc., and she simply felt grateful for a few children who learn their lessons and were, in fact, joys to behold.

As one writer stated, this is exactly what happens unless the very bright child gets too bored and becomes an emotional problem, otherwise he will in no wise trouble the teacher, but the emotional problem will demand immediate attention.

As a matter of fact, it is generally conceded by the serious thinkers of today that we can least afford to neglect these gifted children, who, if well directed, can be our able leaders of tomorrow; our researchers, our scientists, our doctors, our writers, our musicians, our preachers, our teachers.

In short, these exceptional children must be helped to develop to the fullest their gifts and talents that they must share in making the world about them a happier and better place for all of us to live.

As we have already mentioned, the overlooked teacher has a vital task. She must first discover who the mentally gifted children are, and intelligence tests are the best help in this discovery. Then she must provide activities for these boys and girls beyond the classroom requirements, such as projects in creative writing, original research, guidance in reading, putting added responsibilities on these children, allowing them to plan excursions and trips.

But above all else, these children need character training, since we know that character is learned and not inherited. For, if these boys and girls are to be our leaders of tomorrow, they must be trained to develop strong characters—some of our worst criminals had brilliant minds, they simply lacked the good character that would have directed them in another channel.

The school, the teacher, the community, all need to watch for these particular children and help them as they can.

Editor's Uneasy Chair

THIS WEEK we wish to thank the Georgia Power Company for an extra hour's sleep on Monday morning. Even if it did cost the company about $20,000.

Because we belong to that great number of people who have little use for Monday mornings, we found that extra hour wonderful. We enjoyed it thoroughly. We felt no qualms about it for was it not almost providential? Could we help it if the power company's capacitor burned out near Joe Tillman's home, resulting in our clock losing an hour?

GENE CONNER, former employee, came a-visiting Monday morning. His father is in the hospital and Gene, a corporal in Uncle Sam's army, secured leave to come home to visit his family.

WE HAD a yard man working for us all day Friday. He worked 10 hours and we paid him $7.00. Then on Saturday we were our own yard man and worked about the same number of hours.

Our man on Friday earned every penny of the $7.00 we paid him.

ALL'S FAIR By Jane

I still like a lot of horseplay at weddings. I was told that when Pete Rushing married Emogene Bruner that someone smacked both his and his bride-to-be's suit cases from his car, which he thought was securely locked, and hid them.

A long chain was locked under the door. When the baggage was stolen the second time, Pete was so upset that he went to the church without his coat. Why had someone smacked both his and his bride-to-be's suit cases from his car, which he thought was securely locked, and hid them.

RUSSELL-LEGETT

Miss Binky Russell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Simmons of Metter, became the bride of Walter Edward Leggett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Alvin Leggett, of Macon. The wedding was solemnized August 12, at 3 o'clock in the Metter Methodist church with the Rev. Bernard L. Brown of Vidalia performing the ceremony.

The church was decorated with greenery and white gladioli against a background of palms with garlands of ivy. Candelabra with burning tapers completed the decorations. Mrs. William Lanier, organist, presented a program of music and accompanied Mrs. C. Baggett, soloist.

The bride's attendants wore identical gowns of ermid marquisette, made strapless, and fashioned with satin girdles. The matching marquisette capes had collars edged in satin. They wore head bands and carried nosegays of pink asters and chrysanthemums.

Mrs. James Hensley of Cobbtown was mother of honor and bridesmaid were Mrs. Ralph E. Russell of Decatur, sister-in-law of the bride, Miss Caroline Smith and Miss Mavis Baggett, with Miss Kay Laneford as junior bridesmaid.

Ivory duchess satin styled on lines of simplicity fashioned the gown worn by the bride which had a fitted bodice, with calla necklace and long pointed sleeves and bouffant skirt extending into a train. The fingertip veil of blue tulle was attached to a satin band adorned with orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of fleur d'amour and tuberoses, centered with a white orchid. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

James A. Leggett, brother of the groom, served as best man and the ushers were Ralph E. Russell of Decatur, brother of the bride; Dick Sanford of Macon; Bradford Newcomb of Macon, and Tom Gibson of Decatur.

Rev. H. E. Overstreet, pastor of the church, performed the impressive double ring ceremony in the presence of a large assemblage of friends and relatives.

Mrs. William Lanier of Metter played the wedding music. Mrs. C. W. Baggett sang "Beauteous" and "I Love You Truly."

Smilax, plumosa fern and fern trees were used as a background for white gladioli in altar baskets. Tall cathedral tapers interspersed in the arrangements.

Family pews were marked with graceful white satin bows with interlocking fern.

The candles were lighted by Herbert Bruner, brother of the bride, and Freddy Rushing, brother of the groom. Other ushers were John Ed Brannen and Delmas Rushing Jr. Darwin Williams was best man.

Miss Mildred Bruner, sister of the bride, and only attendant, wore light blue tulle with sweetheart neckline and full ballerina skirt. She carried a nosegay of pink asters and wore a coronet of pink asters in her hair.

The bride was lovely as she entered with her father, who gave her in marriage. Her wedding gown was halter length. The top was close fitting with long sleeve lace jacket fastened down the front with small buttons of the same material. The skirt was bouffant. She wore a large lace picture hat. She carried a white purple throat orchid on a white ribbon showered with tuberoses.

The bride's mother, Mrs. Bruner, wore a beige cape dress with white accessories.

Mrs. Funderburk, the groom's mother, wore a yellow voile dress with black and white accessories. Both wore corsages of pink asters.

Uppers of their return, they will make their home in Register.
