Cast Over Them a Great Mantle

THIS MORNING nearly a thousand children from six years of age to the eldest teenagers, were on the streets of Statesboro, on their way to school.

This afternoon those nearly one thousand young people will return to their homes—in family cars, on bicycles, by school bus, and on foot.

Every one of the children is the very life of some father and mother.

And, beginning today, every citizen of Statesboro should silently vow to himself to exert every effort within his being to protect every step that school child takes, every block that child walks, every street intersection that child crosses, every sidewalk along which that child runs, every car in which that child rides, every bicycle that child pedals.

Every citizen of Statesboro must keep before him constantly the fact that that child is free of care, free of responsibilities, and that because of that child's very childishness he must surround him with a protecting cloak of profound caution.

Every policeman—city, county, and state patrol—who walks or rides his beat in Statesboro and Bulloch County must hold to an alertness for racketeer drivers, drunken drivers, mechanically deficient vehicles, that the youth of Statesboro and Bulloch County be protected.

The responsibility is ours.

We cannot lightly shift it to the school child.

We must take time out at home and instruct him and his sister on the proper safety measures upon which their lives may depend.

Tell them to stop at the street curb, look both ways, and watch for turning traffic before crossing.

Warn them that they must never "hitch" a ride on another vehicle when they ride their bicycles to school.

Urge them to wait until they get home to play—tell them that playing in the street, alley or driveway is dangerous.

And in those sections of Statesboro where there are no sidewalks point out the necessity of walking with extreme care, facing traffic.

Picturing to them the dangers of "jaywalking" crossing streets in the middle of the block.

Our youth is our very greatest resource.

Protect them... love them... hold them close to your heart... that they might live and grow into the citizens you hoped you might be.

And say to yourself: "All this I must know, and I would have you do unto me and mine as I would do unto you and yours."

Writer Observes Russians First Hand In Austria

By VIRGINIA RUSSELL

HE WAS MAD ENOUGH to cry. A prominent Bulloch county cotton grower, anxious to get his cotton picked and finding the local supply of cotton pickers insufficient to fill the great demand, drove his truck to Augusta and recruited a truckload of pickers.

He drove them back, happy in the knowledge that he had his own pickers. He stopped at a filling station at Register, went in for a few moments.

While in the station, another cotton grower, anxious to get his cotton out, and finding the local supply short, saw the truckload of pickers there. He approached them, made a deal, loaded them on his truck, lock stock and baggage, and took off.

Yet the man who thought he had a truckload of cotton pickers was pretty mad.

AND JOE TILLMAN is no less mad. He had been getting a couple of truckloads of cotton pickers from Black Bottom. He was making headway in getting his cotton out, and was right happy about it.

Then one morning last week when he went to pick up his cotton, he found nobody—nobody at all—where before he had dozens of them.

How did you fare on Labor Day? Did you plunge in the surf or keep your feet dry? Did you ride just for fun or to see Mom and Dad?

There are those who'd give a lot for a time you had. Some worried and anxious, or in hospital beds; Others tormented by thoughts of "Piazzas"; some who think for themselves.

Well, this paragraph of Orme's made us concerned with the hope that the Russian youth, much more than "centuries," realize his capacity for independent thought, but it also, and more immediately, made us think of us Americans. Certainly our country was founded by independent-thinking people. We have acquired people, or produced people, over the years who think for themselves. Our democratic way of life presupposes independent thoughts. But independent thought cannot be stored up for later use. It is more dynamic than that. Like electricity, it must be constantly generated. When only a few do the thinking for the masses, independent thought no longer exists.

So as we thought about Americans of today, we began to think how difficult it is for our people to think for themselves in the face of all that is fed to them by the news commentators who cry out their biases every day, and the news columnists who ink out their opinions on the newsprint.

We made this drive one day last week. We were impressed with the amount of traffic using College street and there seems to be a possibility of relieving traffic on South Main street from town to the college—if this section of South College were developed.

We know of the labor situation in our city engineer's department. We know that to do all the work that needs to be done requires, time, money and labor.

We know that the Central of Georgia Railroad has spent a lot of money in Statesboro developing the terminals of the old G. & F.

But something must be done, and soon, then at the crossing—it's dangerous. It's unsightly.

To put it briefly—it's disgraceful. And ours is a pretty city.

Bloodmobile Time Again

THOUSANDS of Americans are giving their time and blood through the Blood for Defense Program of the American Red Cross in order that our wounded troops in Korea might live. We hope that when the Red Cross bloodmobile unit comes to Statesboro Tuesday, September 11, citizens of this community will also prove their willingness to help in this vital program.

An Asiatic doctor said recently that the most remarkable thing he had seen during his visit to America was the sight of Americans giving their life's blood for use by others. The doctor did not make this observation without point. To him, the giving of one's blood to an unknown recipient is evidence of the high cultural level the people of this nation have achieved. The same spirit of unselfish giving would not be possible in his part of the world, he sadly commented, because of the fears and superstitions of the people.

The spirit of giving has always been synonymous with the best traditions of this land of ours. It is true we still have fears and superstitions, but we have faith born of our love of freedom and democracy. Our fears and superstitions come to naught in our desire to preserve our way of life.

Remember, when you donate your blood, there is no greater reward than the thought that one of our troops may live because of your unselfish gift!

Editor's Uneasy Chair

HE WAS MAD ENOUGH to cry. A prominent Bulloch county cotton grower, anxious to get his cotton picked and finding the local supply of cotton pickers insufficient to fill the great demand, drove his truck to Augusta and recruited a truckload of pickers.

He drove them back, happy in the knowledge that he had his own pickers. He stopped at a filling station at Register, went in for a few moments.

While in the station, another cotton grower, anxious to get his cotton out, and finding the local supply short, saw the truckload of pickers there. He approached them, made a deal, loaded them on his truck, lock stock and baggage, and took off.

Yet the man who thought he had a truckload of cotton pickers was pretty mad.

AND JOE TILLMAN is no less mad. He had been getting a couple of truckloads of cotton pickers from Black Bottom. He was making headway in getting his cotton out, and was right happy about it.

Then one morning last week when he went to pick up his cotton, he found nobody—nobody at all—where before he had dozens of them.

How did you fare on Labor Day? Did you plunge in the surf or keep your feet dry? Did you ride just for fun or to see Mom and Dad?

There are those who'd give a lot for a time you had. Some worried and anxious, or in hospital beds; Others tormented by thoughts of "Piazzas"; some who think for themselves.

Well, this paragraph of Orme's made us concerned with the hope that the Russian youth, much more than "centuries," realize his capacity for independent thought, but it also, and more immediately, made us think of us Americans. Certainly our country was founded by independent-thinking people. We have acquired people, or produced people, over the years who think for themselves. Our democratic way of life presupposes independent thoughts. But independent thought cannot be stored up for later use. It is more dynamic than that. Like electricity, it must be constantly generated. When only a few do the thinking for the masses, independent thought no longer exists.

So as we thought about Americans of today, we began to think how difficult it is for our people to think for themselves in the face of all that is fed to them by the news commentators who cry out their biases every day, and the news columnists who ink out their opinions on the newsprint.

Bulloch County's Application For Rural Telephone System Approved

Bulloch county's application for REA loan to build a rural telephone system has been approved by the loan division and legal department and now is in the hands of the engineering division, Eugene E. Britt, fieldman for REA, stated the West Side Farm Bureau recently.

Mr. Britt predicted that REA engineers would be in the county soon to clear the project for actual construction.

A barbecue supper was served at the meeting. R. P. Mikell, county Farm Bureau president, enumerated several reasons why farmers should organize to build their organization.

He reviewed the cotton situation and stated that if all the cotton-producing counties had the organization Bulloch county has that the price of cotton would not have been permitted to drop more than 10 cents per pound in recent weeks.

There is a dire need for every acre of the 1951 cotton crop, according to Mr. Mikell's review of domestic and foreign need, for some 16 to 17 million bales to even the supply for this marketing year.

Another major problem facing peanut growers, especially those who are growing runners, is trying to keep the present support program active by keeping peanuts in the special crop list. Mr. Mikell did not go into details of the peanut story, but did say there was a serious effort being made to kill the present program.

Mr. Mikell pointed out as another reason for building a strong Farm Bureau the farm family review program technical workers are being asked to present to farm people. This is an effort on the part of Secretary of Agriculture Brannan to bypass farm organizations in this country and to eventually get his type of subsidized farm program into effect. Mr. Mikell pointed out.

Farm organizations have gone on record a number of times as being opposed to such a farm program, he declared. They are still against it.

Extension Service poultry leaders advise that it is wise to move the old hens out of laying houses when young pullets begin laying. The old birds may be put in temporary sheds or sold.

Young pullets should be moved into the laying house before they start heavy production, according to Extension poultry experts.

Poultry Chain Show Is Sept. 6

The 1951 poultry chain show will be held September 6 under a shed behind the city hall in Statesboro, it was announced last week.

There are ten 4-H Club boys and girls in the 1951 chain. They started with 100 New Hampshire chicks each and have raised 100 percent of them. The clubsters will each put up 12 pullets, now seven months old and in production, for sale. The pullets will be auctioned off following the show.

These New Hampshire birds are from one of the heaviest producing flocks in the country and should lay on through the winter months. The chain is sponsored by Sears, Roebuck and Company. The organization bought the chicks in the spring and will provide the prize money for the clubsters. The two top pens will be taken to the state show in Macon in October.

Clubsters in the chain this year are Wilbur Waters, Waldo Waters, Clarence Miller, Paul Rushing, Jimmy Rigdon, Frankie Deal, Martha Sue Smith, Gail McCormick, Shirley Groover and Shelby Dean Frawley.

Financing Is OUR Business

Important Features Of The John Hancock Farm Loan

1—Low Interest Rates
 Interest rates are as low as safe business practices will permit. Rates must yield a satisfactory return to the investor and yet must not be an unnecessary drain on your farm's production. Your interest rate is guaranteed—it will remain the same for the life of your loan.

2—Liberal Prepayment Options
 The John Hancock prepayment policy is liberal. The Company is always ready to consider prepayment if its refusal should force financial hardship on the borrower.

3—Long Terms
 Terms are available over a long or short period of years as your needs may dictate. You select the number of years you wish.

4—No Commissions, Stock, Or Appraisal Fees
 There are no brokerage or appraisal fees, no stocks to buy. You do not need life insurance, either, to cover your loan. The John Hancock offers an excellent Mortgage Redemption Policy to all borrowers; you may buy or not as you see fit. You receive the full amount you borrow, except for the actual legal fees necessary to close the loan. You do not pay interest on money you never see nor do you penalize yourself by trying to carry a loan at heavy cost.

5—Flexibility
 The John Hancock loan is flexible. It provides the borrower with needed funds which are to be repaid according to the ability and land-use program of his farm.

6—Rush Closing Service
 When you need money in a hurry, the prompt closing of your loan is available through the rush closing service at no additional cost.

7—Fair, Courteous Appraisal Service
 Fair and experienced appraisers are thoroughly qualified to give you the full loan value of your farm. Their service is prompt, courteous, and free.

8—Confidential Handling
 Your Loan is handled confidentially at all times. Only loan officers know the status of your business affairs.

9—Safe, Sound Handling
 The John Hancock has been lending money to farmers for over 60 years. For you, this experience means unsurpassed handling of your loan—treatment that is courteous, sound, safe—safe for you the borrower and owner of home and farm, safe for the Company as an investor.

10—Prompt Service

When a loan is closed, it is not forgotten; experienced men are always available to assist you with any problems that may arise in connection with it. Their advice is yours for the asking—another free service of the John Hancock.

T.C. to Open With Less Students; Expanding Building Facilities

Georgia Teachers College will open the 1951-1952 session with fewer students but with expanding facilities.

Georgia Teachers College will open the 1951-52 session with fewer students but with expanding facilities.

This will be a reversal of a pattern the college generally has known since it began awarding degrees in 1929, that of an increasing student body but little, if any, additional equipment.

Total resident enrollment in the college, President Zach S. Henderson says, may reach 600, with an additional 210 students in the Extension Division and 300 in the Preparatory School.

Potentialities for growth are significant, however, in an outlay of more than a million dollars for a major construction on the campus since 1939. Work on an annex to the Laboratory School building, costing $340,000, should be completed by January.
