This Week's Sermon

A Source of cheerfulness to a good mind is the consideration of that Being on whom we have our dependence, and in whom, through we behold Him as yet but in the first faint discoveries of His perfections, we see everything that we can imagine as great, glorious, or amiable. We find ourselves everywhere upheld by His goodness and surrounded by an immensity of love and mercy.—Addison.

Are Our Police Consistent?

This week we have two stories to tell. We believe that the point we hope to make will be obvious. The events of the first story happened at the bus station here one night just before the New Year. A young man who had been drinking his Christmas cheer was on his way home, in Savannah, to spend the New Year with his wife. Now this young man was not drunk. He was just feeling fine. No pain at all; not mad with anyone, just pleasantly inebriated. Just as he stepped on the bus, the city policeman stopped him and carried him to the calaboose.

Investigation revealed that the lady in charge of the bus station had called the police. It further developed that the lady at the bus station had been trying to get this young man to leave his present boarding place in Statesboro and to move to her place. He explained that he was satisfied with the place where he was staying. It also developed that the bus driver did not think the young man to drunk to ride on the bus and is generally known bus drivers must use discretion in allowing drunks to ride their buses.

When the policeman stopped the young man, the young man didn't put up any argument at all, but went peacefully to the calaboose where he spent the night and next day he put up a $7.50 bond. The policeman explained that because he had been called he was forced to arrest him. So the young man spent the night in the cooler for being drunk, but not bothering anyone. He is now working in Statesboro and gives no one any trouble at all.

The events of our second story occurred one night last week in front of the Rushing Hotel. A man, also of Savannah, who has relatives living here, was drunk, ran his car into another car which was parked across the street from the hotel. He hit the car hard enough to knock it upon the sidewalk and did considerable damage to it. His own car was pretty well wrecked.

Afterwards the man wandered into the Rushing Hotel and was in a pretty mean mood. He began cursing, and raising Cain in general. Ladies in the hotel were warned to go to their rooms. Mr. Jones, the manager of the hotel called the police. While he was calling the man managed to get out of the hotel and was weaving up South Main street when the police arrived. They picked the drunk up in the city police car and carried him to the home of relatives here.

The next day the owner of the car found his car in pretty bad shape and learned the name of the man who had hit it. He found the man's car in a local garage. Hoping to have the man pay for the damage done to it, the owner went to the police to learn the drunk's name. But no one seemed to know anything about it. There was no record of any arrest of a drunk on South Main St.; no record of a man driving a car under the influence of liquor and hitting another car. The man then learned from the hotel man the name of the police who answered the call. This policeman offers no reason for not locking the offender up nor for carrying him to the home of the man's relatives.

Now to sum up our stories: Here we have two drunks. One drunk in a jovial mood, not causing anyone any trouble at all. He is locked up. Another drunk who is driving a car, wrecks it, at the same time damaging another car, raising Cain in a hotel, and causing a disturbance generally, is picked up by the police and escorted to the home of relatives.

We conclude our little stories with the question—Upon what grounds does our police base such inconsistency? These two incidences are ones with which we are familiar. It now develops that there are other cases.

Reports are being made of similar inconsistencies in the enforcement of the two-hour parking law. Certain violators are given tickets, report to court and pay their fines; others are warned in time to move their car, to avoid being given a ticket.

If we are to have law enforcement let it apply to all with no discrimination.

The Coastal Empire Paper Festival.

At a meeting held at the Jaecel Hotel last Thursday afternoon, Statesboro and Bulloch County were given an opportunity to participate in the Coastal Empire Paper Festival to be held in Savannah April 1-6.

"Fiesta" modernized to "Festival" mean, "an event whereby everyone in a community — and all who care to visit the community — may join in a Universal cause—namely, having a good time."

Such an event is the annual Coastal Empire Festival, held in Savannah. The 1940 Paper Festival will be a barrage of festivity, hilarity and enjoyment—a week of presenting youth and beauty, fun and frolic—an array of thrills featuring spectacular parades — numerous free entertainments, street dances, Mardi Gras revelry, a huge amusement zone, amusement and amaze-ment—barrels of fun for everyone."

So reads the advance notices of the festival to be held this year. The editors of the Bulloch Herald, Mayor R. L. Cone and Commissioner Fred W. Hodges met with the committee to plan for Bulloch County to be represented at the Festival. It is expected that the Junior Chamber of Commerce will sponsor a county prince and princess to send to Savannah.

The purpose of the Festival are to create a general feeling of good will and optimism through educational and recreational features. To educate the public in the importance and manufacturing significance, to the Coastal Empire, of pulp, paper and other timber products. To stimulate and advance the use of the products of Southern timber Statesboro and Bulloch County, "Where Nature Smiles and Progress Has the Right of Way," should be represented and we feel sure that the Jaycees will do a fine job of putting them before the Festival in a big way.

Thanks to the Western Union

Two weeks ago the Herald complained on behalf of the business men of Statesboro of the Western Western Union here. A copy of that editorial reached the company's officials in Atlanta. Last week we were informed by Percy Rimes, manager of the local Western Union Office, that his company had changed the office hours here and believed that it will relieve the inconvenience caused by the previous hours.

Beginning immediately the local Western Union office will open at 8:30 in the morning and close from 12 noon to 1:30 in the afternoon for lunch. It will reopen at 7 p. m. and remain open until 7 p. m. These hours give the business men three and one-half hours service in the morning and five and one-half hours uninterrupted service in the afternoon and evening.

We want to congratulate Mr. Rimes upon his cooperation with us and the business men of Statesboro securing these new hours. We want to thank the officials in Atlanta for their sympathetic response to our complaints.

We hope that the new hours will prove satisfactory to all. We of course realize, with the officials of the Western Union, that it is hard to please everybody all the time. But we do feel that the new hours are an improvement over the previous ones.

Paying Taxes on the Installment Plan

We notice that in Ware County the Tax Collector is urging all the people of that county, to get in the habit of paying their taxes in installments. He is stressing that he will be glad to accept part payment of taxes. He is convinced that a habit of part-payment of taxes will do more than anything else to keep people from being burdened with back taxes. Now we believe that this tax collector has something there. Paying taxes on the installment plan. It works in paying for our automobile, our refrigerator, our home, our radio, our tractor, our toys or our taxes.

Such a plan would entail some additional work on the county officials, but then they are paid to work. It would necessitate the rearrangement of their bookkeeping system but it would mean a steady inflow of cash into the county treasury every month. In a few years we believe that every tax payer in the county would be caught up with his taxes, and free of the tremendous burden, and annoyance of back taxes. Such a plan is worthy of examination and study at any rate.

It is too bad that Dr. Marvin Pittman and the student council at the Teachers College could not agree, or see fit to combine their Presidents Birthday Ball with the official Junior Chamber Ball last Tuesday night. It would have been a wonderful opportunity for the young college group to have met all the people of Statesboro. We should all know each other better. Then too, Statesboro could have had one of the best dances in the state. We could have spent in a great big amount of money for the Warm Spring Foundation. Come on Dr. Pittman, let us meet your young boys and girls. You know best how to run your school, but we still believe a combined President's Ball would have been the right thing to have had.

Time to Get Up

Barbs of the Brier Patch Philosopher

Dear Editor,

This weather has about got your philosopher down. It's hard to be a philosopher when I have to take a ax and cut the ice out of the water trough so ole Jake can get meter out on the back porch has stuck at about 18 degrees for so long that it will be the middle of summer before it'll thaw out. But they say 'tis a ill wind that don't blow somebody some good. So I reckon I oughtn't to complain for this kind of weather will shore play on the boll weevil and the screw worm and that's something to be thankful for.

I got the letter you got from your friend "Geeches." He's got some pretty good ideas about trucking. And he is right, every farmer in Bulloch county ought to plant at least a half acre in a garden. Me and ma have always had a garden and have plenty of fresh vegetables the year round and ma cans a lot of stuff too. The writer of that letter makes out like there ain't nobody in Bulloch that plants gardens like he says. Screven county, he must not get around much. There are lots of pretty gardens in Bulloch county. Ask that pretty Miss Maxwell, the county home demonstration agent. She knows. She comes out here sometimes and helps ma. Ma is a member of her home demonstration council, too, and all those women folks have gardens and good gardens, too.

I want to say that you and your paper did a mighty fine job helping save the health department and Miss Maxwell's job. Why I'd never knowed about it you hadn't put it in your paper. Nobody in this community knew about it and don't reckon there would have been nothing done about it if it hadn't been for you. The people of the county shore oughta appreciate it. And you are fixing to get the dander up of the police there in town if you don't look out. Ma says to write you that next week she is going to send you one of her receipts. She is telling some of her neighbors that has been pesering her for her receipts that she can get them from out of the Herald. You ought to let ma sell you paper for you out here. I bet she would make you a good one.

Ma has been worrying me to death about taking her to Savannah to see that picture Gone With the Wind. I wish you would see Mr. Macon and find out if he is going to get it there in Statesboro. If so I can tell ma and maybe she'll wait until it comes there. (Editor's note: We talked to Mr. Joe Wookcode, Mr. Macon's man Friday, and Joe tells us that G. W. T. W. will be here in Statesboro sometimes in February, he hopes.) There is a lot of flu about here. I'm glad you are up. We all been lucky so far. Drove by your pa and ma's place last Sunday. I started to stop and set a spell with them but I was in kinda a hurry. They sure got a nice looking place, when they fix

Our Termites, we say our, for the Termites have made us and our brother Jim, sponsors of their club, have been making all the big newspapers in the last week. Last Sunday, Olin Miller in his column in the Atlanta Journal ask what the termites are. Our contemporary, Dave Turner, in last week's Times lets Olin have it right between the eyes with a definition of termites as taken from Webster's, and then let it be known that he too had wondered what the Termites Club was.

Now if Mr. Miller and Mr. Turner had read the issues of the Bulloch Herald beginning with a story of the organization of the Termites and in each issue thereafter they would not have to acknowledge an ignorance of what the Termites Club is. Since the Termites have made us sponsor of their club they have given us the title "Big Termites Eagle" and Jim our brother and advertising director of the Herald, the title "Big Shot Termites Jim." We think these eight girls who make up the Termites are swell. We are proud of them, making the Atlanta Journal and the Bulloch Times, all in one week.

This week's best story concerns Dr. Pittman at the college. One morning recently in chapel, Dr. Pittman was talking of the "good old days" when he, as a child, ran around in dresses. "Times have changed," said Dr. Pittman, "and now all the girls wear pants...." Why Dr. Pittman, your face should be red. Everybody knows that the girls all wear pants. The newspapers carry page after page of advertisements of girls pants and department stores would have to close their doors if pants wearing was confined to us men.

Outside thermometers this morning registered in the neighborhood of 20, which is little below the average for this week. Beginning with Monday morning, when winter returned for a surprise visit after only a brief respite, the temperature has hung between 20 and 40 — sometimes falling below the lower point, but rarely above the higher point.

A Chevrolet passenger car stolen from the streets of Statesboro on Monday night, December 31, belonging to J. Frank Olliff, is today reported to the custody of officers at Columbia, S. C., who have held it since January 7, exactly one week after its disappearance.

Statesboro today had her first fall of snow for the winter, which began about the middle of the forenoon and continued with considerable regularity for an hour or more. While the fall was quite brisk, due to the rain last night which left the earth damp, the snow melted as fast as it fell. However in protected places it accumulated to a depth of half an inch or more.

Edward W. Nance, Statesboro's centenarian, is manifestly nearing the end of an unusual life at his home in this city. If he lives till February 28, he will be 107 years of age. For most two weeks he has been prone upon his couch, not entirely helpless yet unable to recognize those friends who call to inquire after his condition.

Immediate relief is being given to the flood sufferers in the vicinity of Dover and Geechee through the instrumentality of the Statesboro chapter of the Red Cross acting for the Atlanta headquarters.

Out of Statesboro the railroads were put back on regular schedules Wednesday after an interruption of more than a week, caused by the recent floods.

Bulloch county waked this morning to find itself enshrouded in a blanket of ice following a rain which began Wednesday morning and continued through most of last night. Ice began to form late in the afternoon and by 10 o'clock night trees and shrubbery were bending under their load. In Statesboro the light plant was put out of commission long before midnight by the falling limbs from trees about the city. Parties coming in from the country today reporting much obstruction to the roads by broken limbs sagging the way. Adequate Health Services One of Nation's Problems

Editor's Note: Further light on the means by which prosperity in Georgia may be advanced is thrown in this, the first of two new releases of the Citizens Fact Finding Movement dealing with health problems and their relation to economic betterment.

"One of the great problems before the whole nation, is the extension of adequate health services to all the people."

This declaration is contained in the summary of findings as to Georgia's problems of health prepared for the Citizens Fact Finding movement by a group of experts under direction of Dr. T. F. Abercrombie, director of public health, assisted by Dr. Guy G. Lunsford and Dr. Charles R. Watson.

"Appalling economic and human losses will continue until this is done," the report insists. "Disease does not recognize social or economic distinctions, and no part of the population can feel secure unless health protection is extended to all."

"Furthermore, the losses from ill health are, one way or another, passed on to every member of the community."

"Our people cannot have complete health security until their economic status is improved. The program would not only safeguard the community, but would give the individual security in the knowledge that—

"Water supplies are safe— "His food is free from medical and hospital care when he is ill— "Epidemics cannot spread in his community—

"A major problem before Georgia is one of obtaining revenue so as to provide adequate health facilities sufficiently trained personnel."

"This problem grows out of the low per capita wealth of our people, which in turn makes so great the need for provision of such health facilities."

"It cannot be too strongly stated that the financing of an adequate health program at this time requires extensive federal assistance."

"However, local governments cannot lay the whole burden on the federal government. Our cities, counties and state must share an equitable part of the cost."

In its factual study supporting these findings, the report learned that no less than three calves during the week in Atlanta, having been called there because of the death of his aunt, Mrs. Lambert.

Loose Screws In the News

A London fog is a mere bagatelle to citizens of Lexington after the frozen phenomena they experienced recently. Amazed early risers were greeted with an unusually dense mist, which froze as it formed and sprinkled vegetation with a powdery ice. According to witnesses, the density of the ice-fog was so great that automobile traffic was virtually prohibited, several motorists managing to creep along at 5 miles per hour.

Wanted—the back part of an iron shoe, used in War between the States, Revolutionary, or Spanish War days. The front section of the crude boot-like boot was discovered recently near Madison by W. R. Holbert, of Oakman; and despite the efforts of several boys to find the rear section at a reward of $10, no success has been encountered. The ancient piece of footwear contains hexagonal hobnails, and braided pins line the upper rim to hold the leather around the wearer's foot. According to the owner of the relic, the break in the shoe is straight and at about the point of the front instep.

Last year was an eventful one for the white-faced Hereford cow belonging to Dr. Harry Bradford, of Cartersville. Boxy gave birth to no less than three calves during '39—twins on January 1 and another offspring December 18. The bovine will be seven years old next month and has had seven calves.

Muscogee Coop Market Does Big Business

Columbus, Ga. — In 1932, during the height of the depression, farmers of Muscogee county opened up a co-operative wholesale produce market here on a very small scale. Today, it has a yearly output of approximately $150,000 and can accommodate as many as 100 growers at one time.

The market, operated by the Muscogee County Agricultural Association, was started at a time when farmers needed help the most. They were pessimistic and yet eager to find some place where they could sell their produce at as cheap a marketing cost as possible, and get as much as they could out of it.

The market is operated on a wholesale basis, the farmer bringing in his produce and selling it direct to the merchants out of his truck. According to Felix Jenkins, Muscogee county agent, both the farmers and merchants are well satisfied with the operation of the co-operative enterprise.

"Farmers seem to be well pleased with the market," Jenkins declared, "because they can sell their produce each day at one central point without having to peddle it all over town. Then, too, the market opens at 3 a. m. and the farmer is able to dispose of his products and then get back to the farm in time to do a day's work."

UGF Hears Talk Symphony Orchestra On Pastures At T.C. February 7

Pastures should be established on some of the best producing lands on the farm, E. D. Alexander, extension agronomist, told Bulloch county farmers at the U. G. F. meeting Saturday.

Mixtures of carpet grass, dallis grass or Bermuda grass and lespedeza together with white dutch clover is a desirable combination for this section, according to Mr. Alexander.

He urged that these grasses be planted during the next 45 days on a seed bed that was firm and settled. Fertilizer at the rate of some 500 to 600 pounds per acre of a balanced formula is also profitable on pastures, it was pointed out. Pastures should be mowed about twice each year, along in early summer and again in late summer or early fall.

Homer S. Durden, administrative officer in charge of AAA, was in the county Saturday and attended the Better Beef Cattle program. Mr. Durden urged all farmers to plant the permanent pastures now while they could procure the co-operation of AAA at the rate of $3 per acre for establishing the needed pasture lands.

W. Hill Hosh, an agricultural agent for a railroad, stated that the foundation of a fence was good corner post with a few post on the line strong enough to pull the wire on. He did recommend the use of wood post between these points.

The motion picture was shown on the value of pastures and how to develop them. In the afternoon the pasture exhibits were on display in the special train at the Georgia and Florida depot.

Special Meats Deserve Important Place on Nutritional Bargain List

Strangely enough, some of the most nutritious meats are found at the bottom of the butcher's price list. Kidney, brains, heart, and liver have a distinctive flavor and an attractive appearance when they are properly cooked. Yet, all these meats organs, except calf liver, are inexpensive. Even if their cost were much higher, these special meats would deserve an important place on the nutritional bargain list. They are considered economy headlines because they furnish so much food value. Like other meats, they are good protein foods. In addition, they are rich in the vitamins. Although the food value varies, all make important contributions toward a good diet.

Dyer Says Top Dress Small Grain in Spring

Experience of farmers and experiment station tests show that a top-dressing of some quickly available nitrogen fertilizer in early spring is most profitable for small grain. County Agent Byron Dyer said, according to these tests, the best time to apply fertilizer is about the time active growth begins in the spring. From February 1 to March 1 is the best time to apply top dressing, he advised. Rate of application will depend on the value of the grain, the need for food and feed, and the general fertility of the soil, the agent said. "Seventy-five to 150 pounds of nitrate of soda or its equivalent in other quickly-available nitrogen fertilizers has proven to be practical applications."

John Farmer Buys a TRACTOR!

When John Farmer's grandfather drove his claim stakes in the four corners of the homestead, he dreamed of a big barn to shelter the mules he'd need as power to farm his acres. Those were the days before advertising--when farming meant hard labor for every member of the family--every day of the year. Now, John Farmer has just bought a new tractor to do the work of many mules. And the tractor performs myriad tasks that mules couldn't do. It runs the buzz saw, powers the feed mill, fills the silo. Without the service of advertising John Farmer still would be farming with mules--using fertile acres to raise food for them; devoting valuable hours every day caring for them. How has advertising affected life on the farm? Without advertising, few farmers could afford tractors--few would have radios, electrified homes, automobiles, automatic refrigeration, motorized washing machines--and many other devices to save time and labor. Advertising has brought about nation-wide sales, large-scale production and lower prices. Due to advertising the American Way of Living is not restricted to a fortunate few, but is open to all.

is necessary. Remove the outer membrane and fat from kidney; trim the gristle and veins off a heart; and take any blood clots off the brains. Calf and beef livers require no special preparation, but lamb and hog livers are usually sealed to improve the flavor. The venter tender organs--liver, kidneys from young animals, and brains--are cooked at a moderate temperature and no longer than necessary. To keep the meat tender and to retain the delicate flavor, be careful not to overcook it. Broiling is one of the common methods for cooking the tender calf or lamb kidneys and tender liver. The flavor is best when they are cooked only until the red color has disappeared. Both the kidneys and liver make a welcome addition to the mixed grill meal so popular at this time of the year. Tender kidneys and liver also may be panbroiled on top of the stove Crisp bacon or browned onions make a satisfying accompaniment. Or, the broiled or pan-broiled liver may be made into a number of other appetizing dishes when the meat is ground or chopped fine. Try baking the ground liver in a loaf or in patties, with bacon and tomato sauce added as a finishing touch. Brains, broken into small pieces, may be panbroiled. After browning the brains, scramble them with eggs or add them to an egg omelet. If the brains are to be kept firm, as for use in a salad or a creamed dish, simmer them for about 15 minutes in water with a little vinegar and salt added. The less tender organs--the beef kidneys and the muscular hearts of all animals--require longer preparation. To make them tender, cook them long and slowly with some liquid added. To cook a beef kidney, cover it with cold water and heat slowly just to the boiling point. Discard the water and rinse the pan. Repeat this process about three times, or until there is no scum left and any strong odor has disappeared. Careful preparation for cooking

Electric Hotbeds Help Early Market Production

Whenever possible, electrically-heated hotbeds can be used to advantage in producing plants for early production of truck crops for market. County Agent Byron Dyer said this week. Mr. Dyer said earlier-marketed vegetables command higher prices on the market. He also pointed out that there has been a trend toward more widespread use of supplementary or artificial heat for plant beds and propagating benches. "The plant bed should be located on a well-angled southern slope, free from trees and other obstacles that might shade the plants," the agent explained. "Proximity to a source of electricity are important factors to consider. "From the standpoint of cost and heating efficiency, the hotbed frame should be constructed of wood two inches thick," he continued. "Wind strips should be provided on the sides, between the sash, and along the outer edge of the high end of the frame. Higher operating efficiency can be obtained by banking the frame on the outside with soil or some insulating material. "For heating electric hotbeds, a special, flexible cable can be placed on the surface of the soil or suspended in the air. The cable must be cut in 60-foot lengths for operation on 115-volt service.

Plenty of Potash!

POTASH supplies are adequate. The situation concerning this necessary plant food is very different from that brought about by the last war, when this country was dependent upon importations which were suddenly and completely terminated. During the intervening years, discovery of potash deposits in this country has led to the development of a domestic industry capable of expansion to meet the requirements of American farmers. Therefore, wherever profitable yield and quality of crops demand plenty of potash, the proper amount should be used. Consult your county agent or experiment station about the fertility of your soil and what fertilizer you should use. See your fertilizer dealer. You will be surprised how little extra it costs to apply enough potash to insure good yields and high quality. Write us for further information and free literature on growing profitable crops.
