SENTRY SERMON

Every man has his ambition—that which he is set upon attaining. If you think, the same is true of our children. With much pride, they rush forward, in the cut of each other's ankles, and try to break away. This is the spirit of competition. But there is also a healthy ambition to do good, to be better than others. Let us, then, make the ambition of our children to do good.

A Black Cloud Now Threatens Our University System of Georgia

There is real danger to be apprehended. Not only are we threatened with the loss of our universities, but also with the loss of our colleges. The latter are more important than the former, but both are threatened. The universities are the foundation of our civilization, while the colleges are the superstructure. We must therefore, work for the preservation of both.

Jim Writes from SEACTC, Maxwell Field

Maxwell Field, a large and beautiful airfield, is now in operation. It is the largest airfield in the state, and is, therefore, of great importance. The airfield is owned by the government, and is operated by the army. The object of the airfield is to train pilots for the army. The airfield is also used for the training of civilians.

A Job Well Done

As the people of Georgia turn on their bright lights again and get back to the business of earning a living, many of us are finding that our electric bills are higher than ever before. This is due in part to the fact that we are using more electricity than ever before, but also because the cost of electricity has increased. The Georgia Power Company has announced that it will be increasing its rates by 10% effective January 1, 1943. This increase is necessary to cover the higher costs of operation and maintenance.

The Georgia Power Company has been working hard to improve the reliability and efficiency of its power generation and transmission systems. It has invested millions of dollars in new equipment and technology to increase capacity and reduce outages. The company has also been working to reduce the amount of energy lost through transmission and distribution losses.

In addition to the rate increase, the Georgia Power Company is launching a new program to encourage customers to conserve energy. The program includes a variety of incentives, such as rebates for customers who install energy-efficient appliances, and tips for reducing energy use at home.

We encourage all of our customers to take advantage of these programs and to do their part to conserve energy. By reducing our energy usage, we can help to keep costs down and ensure a reliable supply of electricity for all.
