from the beginning to bring about harmony of feeling in the district. I wish to add in this connection that many of the most prominent Populists in the several countries were my friends and supporters. They rose above the general projudice. I am deeply grateful to all my friends throughout the district for the loyal support they gave me.

Grady hospital, where he died three hours later.

The shooting was the outgrowth of an attempt made to have the home of Mrs. Biggers and Mrs. Goza declared a disreputable house by the police. Simpson lived at No. 490 Crew street and the women resided next door, at No. 488 Crew street. A short while ago Simpson presented a petition to the chief of police asking that the women be made to move from the neighborhood. The case was called in the recorder's court and withdrawn before there was a trial.
