THE NEWS.

Published at Statesboro, Ga., EVERY FRIDAY By The Statesboro News Publishing Co.

British ships carry a little more than 52 percent of the imports into the United States and 43 tons out of every hundred that enter Russian ports.

The International Dental association has decided to hold its fourth international congress at St. Louis in 1904. Every civilized country on the globe is expected that from 300 to 4000 members will attend the St. Louis World's fair meeting.

Science has just received a hard jolt out in Kansas. The bones of the "prehistoric man" dug up not long ago at Lansing, and pronounced by various learned university professors to be about 35,000 years old, turn out to be those of a convict who was buried in an abandoned coal shaft in 1871.

Iowa has a law which provides for the confining of habitual drunkards in insane asylums. It is popularly known as "the old top law," and its enforcement is reported to be having a wonderful effect. Many men who for years clung to the habit of getting drunk regularly have reformed and become more or less useful as citizens.

By the will of the late James Osborne the city of Seattle, Wash, was made the legatee of the testator whose property was to be sold and the funds held in trust until the city should agree to appropriate a like amount for the erection of a municipal building. The estate has just been settled, and the amount which the city will realize is estimated at $65,000.

"I had 100 or 1000 children," says E. Benjamin Andrews, chancellor of the University of Nebraska, in a recent lecture. "I would want every one of them to play football, if they were strong enough, and to play it hard and strenuously. Boys ought to be trained in strenuousness. That is the great value of football; it is a school of endurance, courage and resolution."

No one can now hesitate to admit says the London Hospital, that the elementary schools of England are the great central exchanges at which diseases of diverse kinds are distributed from house to house and from street to street. A medical officer found, in one school forty-three percent of the pupils afflicted with pellagra and contagious diseases, such as scarlet fever, "the prevalence of which at ready threatens to bring education to a standstill in some towns."

The oldest working locomotive in the world is employed in hauling coal at the Helton colliery, England. It was built in 1822 by George Stephenson for the opening of the Helton railway. Some of its parts have since been renewed, but the general design of the engine, excepting the cab, has been preserved. The engine weighs fifteen tons and has a hauling capacity of 120 tons at a rate of ten miles an hour. It is now about to be retired and deposited in the Durham College of Science, Newcastle-on-Tyne, to be preserved as one of the most interesting mechanical curiosities of the nineteenth century.

If William Shakespeare had read of the crimes committed in one week in this land of liberty, he would have shown intelligence, under the impulse of ferocity, he would have put more red ink, if possible, into the warnings against the "green-eyed monster," Madness and folly! Folly and madness! Will human beings never outgrow their barbaric and senseless passions? With the world full of women ready to be wooed and won, and of men waiting to be captivated, why voluntarily become food for worms on account of one? Why this enormous well-thought-out egotism which shows a girl to death because she doesn't think an unweptful savior is the only pearl in the ocean of humanity? quies the New York World. What sort of sensibility is it, coarse than that of a horse or a beast of the fields, which demands an unwilling mate at the pistol's point? Of course there is no use in looking for ethics or reason in jealousy. It is essentially a blind, mad, unreasoning and unreasonable passion.

The person unwilling to admit he makes mistakes towards himself and invites ridicule.

BILL ARP'S LETTER

Barrow Man's Championship of the Bad Boy is Approved.

COMMENT FROM A SCHOOTEACHER

Solomon Was Probably Joking When He Wrote: "He that Spareth the Rod Hateth His Son, and the Practice is Almost Obsolete Now.

In a recent letter I took the part of the bad boys and said they must not be given up. That letter has provoked a most intelligent comment from a western school teacher who has been monthly reports of conduct in his school. He says that his so-called bad boys almost invariably turned out to be his best boys, best scholars, and best men, and he never punished one with the rod. His illustrations are very apt, entertaining and instructive, for he is no ordinary teacher, but a highly cultured gentleman, and writes a beautiful letter. His letter contained several pages and was eagerly perused. He says I am a believer in the rod, but it has been my lot to have to use it mostly, but lightly, on mamma's pets—the good boys who never seem a human being who would not at times perform some kind of office for another, never expecting a reward. Once upon a time, the story goes, a little girl was watching a sculptor as he put the finishing touches upon an angel he had chiseled from a block of marble, and she exclaimed: "Oh, what a beautiful angel I have made!" "No," said the sculptor, "the angel was raised with his marble. I have only chipped away the rough stone that hid it."

So it is with every man—there is an angel there, though too often hidden by the story covering. The skillful sculptor could find it. This reminds me of an incident that happened many years ago in Rome while I lived there. It was on Sunday while a great festival was in undating a portion of the town. A poor boy, the son of a widow, had rowed his little boat out in an eddy to catch some wood that was floating down. By some mischance his boat was caught by the current and he was carried rapidly down the stream. His mother had seen it all and ran down the bank screaming for help. Many people ran along with her, but could do nothing. It was near a quarter of a mile to the junction where scores of men and boys were watching the surging waters. The little boat nearly struck the bridge pillar and capsized and the boy disappeared with the boat. In an instant it came to the surface again and the boy was seen clinging to the chain at its end. "Save that boy, somebody!" said one. "I'll give $5 to save that boy." Said another, "I'll give $10." "I'll give $20," said another, but nobody dared to venture. The mother cried in piteous accents, "Save my boy, my boy." Just then a young man was seen rushing wildly down, throwing off his coat and shoes as he came and parting the crowd, he ran down into the water and struck the little body of the boy. He got him, and carrying one arm around his waist swam with the other and laid him at his mother's feet. He was limp and speechless, but alive. Putting on his shirt and coat, the young man walked quickly away. He was known to most of those present. He was a barber and his moral standing was not good, for he was profane in speech and his associates were the sports and drinking men of the town. He was under the ban, but there was an angel in him somewhere. He knew the poor widow and he knew the boy—and he acted to accept an award. I have often ruminated over that heroic deed and wondered.

Chief Executive Journeyed Home to See His Little Boy. President Roosevelt reached Oyster Bay Monday evening in order to cast his vote in Tuesday's election. He was met with a surprise. About the station a thousand persons were gathered, with a band. Big bonfires blazed and fireworks were discharged. When the president appeared at the door of his special car he was greeted with cheers, and in reply only raised his hat.

GRAND DUKE IN DISGRACE. Uncle of Czar Cut Out because of Sensational Marriage. The dismissal from the Russian army of the Grand Duke Paul Alexandrovich, uncle of the czar, which was officially announced at St. Petersburg Monday, was due to his recent marriage to the Baroness Pistoloff, who got a divorce from her husband in order to marry the grand duke. It is said that the grand duke has been banished from the Russian court for ten years.

JAPANESE SAILORS RESCUED. Transport Cork Arrived in Time to Save Them From Flames. Forty-five Japanese, powerless to escape from a burning steamer, were rescued by the transport Crook on her outward voyage from San Francisco. News of the rescue was brought by the transport Sheridan.

The Crook left San Francisco on September 16, bound for Manila. It is believed that the use of the rod in our public schools has been generally abandoned. The punishment of refractory pupils is now just what it is in our colleges. Expulsion, suspension, monthly reports of conduct, and press. Patrons seem satisfied with this and the general verdict is that Solomon was joking. My friend Fort was hostile to whipping children as was Dr. Holderyer of Atlanta and when Dr. Solomon, who said, "He that spareth the rod hateth his son," he said, "Well, Solomon was mad when he wrote that. With all the whips that must have had three or four hundred children, and the little rascals were always tagging after him and begging for candy, or a knife or a doll, or something, and they climb up his legs and felt in his pockets and pulled his hair, and it was pappy this and daddy that, until he got desperate and wrote that verse. I don't take anything for granted that Solomon says, anyhow. A man who was as big a fool about women as he was, needn't tell me about whipping children. He didn't know how to raise Robinson, who succeeded him, for he said to the children of Israel, "My father chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions." That's the kind of a boy he raised with his rod. But after all and before all it is the home influence that moulds the child, for that is constant and enduring. The angel that was within Bob was uncovered by his mother's love. Some mothers send their little children to school as to a nursery, to get them out of the way or because they cannot manage them at home, while others put up their own nice lunch and kiss them a sweet good-bye and fondly watch for their return. Our children had to go more than a mile to school when we lived on the farm. They had to cross the creek on a foot log and then through a field up a long hill and then down the hill until out of sight. It was my daily pleasure to watch them go and come, and feel that they were safe.

And now our eldest daughter is going to leave us, going to Winstonsboro, Carolina, to live, where her husband has found profitable employment. They have five children, some of whom were our daily visitors and made us happy when they came. What shall we do now? We thought that this exile of our children was a good thing, and I am growing old, and it grieves us to lose our children and grandchildren. But this is the common lot. There is nothing true but heaven.—BILL ARP, in Atlanta Constitution.

MURDERED AND CREMATED. Horrible Fate of Wickington Family in Wisconsin.

What is supposed to have been one of the most diabolical murders ever committed in Wisconsin occurred Thursday, when the home of William Wickington, three miles southeast of Palmyra, was burned to the ground. It is thought, the three occupants had been robbed and murdered. The names of those whose charred remains were found in the ruins are as follows: William Wickington, aged 42 years; Albert Wickington, aged 40 years; Julia Wickington, aged 26 years. Evidence secured points to murder.

AFTER FAITH HEALERS.

Three Christian Scientists to Be Tried For Manslaughter in New York. Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Quimby and John S. Lathrop, a Christian Science healer, gave bond in $2,000 at New York Friday for their appearance for trial. They were indicted at White Plains for manslaughter in the second degree, being charged with having caused the death of Esther Quimby, 7 years old, by neglecting to provide medical attendance.
