The Statesboro News

(INCORPORATED.)

J. R. MILLER, Editor and Gen'l. Mgr.

Statesboro, Ga., Feb. 6, 1906

Published Tuesday and Friday by THE STATESBORO NEWS PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Entered at Statesboro, Ga., Post Office as second class mail matter.

In a big elevator fire in East St. Louis this week, more than a million bushels of wheat was burned. This may have some effect on the price of flour.

Judging from reports from all over the state we are fully satisfied that the Hoke Smith boom has been punctured and is out of business from now on.

Dr. Nunnally makes this pledge to the people: If elected he will give them an honest effort at a clean government. Now that's a pretty good platform.

The town was in the hands of the candidates yesterday. We now have a full array of those patriotic citizens who are willing to serve the county.

Sam Jones writes that he is hurrying home from the west to make the candidates for governor speak out on the liquor question. Now this looks pretty hard on Hoke Smith and the Piedmont Saloon.

Politics are getting warm in Savannah. The approaching campaign bids fair to be the warmest they have had in several years. It has already reached the flaccid state.

Clark Howell says let the present election laws stand, let the white primaries be held just as they have been held in the past, and let every white man who will support the nominees vote in the primary unchallenged. Yet the Hoke Smith crowd says he wants all barred except his own friends. Well the most of the crowd we named in the foregoing are his friends.

In Memoriam

Died, at her home near Elders, Mrs. Mary Purvis, in the seventy-eighth year of her age. She was born in Emanuel county, August 18th, 1828. At an early age she united with the Baptist church in that county, of which she remained a consistent member till 1896, when she united by church with Fellowship Baptist church. In 1892 she married Mr. J. L. Purvis, of Emanuel county, and two years later they moved to Florida, where they lived fifteen years. The 1st of January 1870 they returned to Georgia and settled in Bulloch county, where they lived the remainder of her life. She was a devoted wife and mother and a kind neighbor and friend. During her last illness, though she suffered much, she was patient and resigned and on Sunday evening, January 21st, she sweetly fell asleep. From which none ever woke to weep.

Her remains were interred in the cemetery at Fellowship church. Her husband, two sons and three sisters survive her. To the bereaved ones we tender our heartfelt sympathy, and may God comfort them in their great sorrow. A FRIEND.

Fifteen Cents Cotton.

The man-moth cotton convention held at New Orleans, Jan. 11-18, 1906, without a single dissenting voice, unanimously endorsed the resolution to hold the balance of the uncollected portion of the present crop for fifteen cents per pound, basis middling at the ports.

The executive committee of the Southern Cotton Association, in annual session at New Orleans, January 15th, 1906, also unanimously endorsed the action of the convention relative to the fifteen cents resolution. Representatives of Southern bankers, assembled at New Orleans during the cotton convention, passed strong resolutions guaranteeing the moral and financial support of Southern banks in the present effort of the Southern Cotton Association to secure fifteen cents for the balance of the crop. The fight is now on to a finish between the spinners and friends of higher prices, backed by Southern bankers, and the "bear" speculators, spinners and enemies to fair and equitable prices. The lines are plainly drawn, and friend or foe will be quickly recognized by the voice, pen or position taken.

We are dealing with a product worth many hundreds of millions of dollars annually, distributed in its raw and manufactured form, throughout the entire civilized world. The producers of this most valuable product of southern soils have been the slaves and serfs of the consuming world for nearly half a century. Southern cotton growers, financed by their local banks, are gradually working a revolution in the old system of marketing their staple.

Short crops and fairly good prices from 1900 to 1904, freed the southern growers generally from the lash of mortgages and credit. Increasing the food supply crops has been an important factor in developing that independence and thrift which should characterize every farm. For these reasons it made possible the handling of the great crop of 1904, on a profitable basis to the growers against the combined organized brain and money of the world.

It is for these reasons, together with advance of thought, study, and a better knowledge of legitimate supply and demand of cotton, that will enable the spot holders of cotton in the south to demand and enforce higher prices for the balance of this crop than are at present prevailing. It has not been denied that spinners could have paid twelve cents for the farmers for the entire crop of 1905, and declared good dividends on their investment, at the prevailing high prices of yarns and dry goods. It cannot be denied that "bear" speculators, backed by the spinners, took advantage of the necessities of the farmers in September and October, and forced prices down to 9 1/2 cents per pound, buying in fully one-half of the crop around ten cents. If the balance of the crop now held, and which does not exceed 1,500,000 bales, is sold at fifteen cents per pound, the whole crop will go to the buyers and spinners at an average price to the farmers under 12 cents per pound. Where is the exorbitant demands of the farmers? If the cotton is worth 14, why should not the producer be entitled to receive its full value? Those gentlemen who are raising such a howl about 12 cents and 15 cents cotton, were as silent as the grave when cotton was selling at 6 cents.

Stand firm for fifteen cents. Sell your cotton at that price and do not attempt to force the market still higher. Our position is based upon equity and fairness, and no effort should be made to go beyond that. Let us be fair to the spinners, and in making sales let it be distinctly understood that the buyer will ship the cotton direct to the buyers and not to the speculators who are not to be bought for the purpose of loading on speculative contracts in the cotton exchanges of the country. For Thin Babies

Fat is of great account to a baby; that is why babies are fat. If your baby is scrawny, Scott's Emulsion is what he wants. The healthy baby stores as fat what it does not need immediately for bone and muscle. Fat babies are happy; they do not cry; they are rich; their fat is laid up for time of need. They are happy because they are comfortable. The fat surrounds their little nerves and cushions them. When they are scrawny those nerves are hurt at every ungentle touch. They delight in Scott's Emulsion. It is as sweet as wholesome to them.

tors that this rule must be strictly adhered to. Let the speculators who have been "bearing" the market and who are short on their contracts, get out of their perilous positions the best way they can. We must confine our dealings with the legitimate cause of consumption, and protect the spinners and our own interests from abnormally high or low prices brought about by speculative influences. It is now an established fact that the present crop will not exceed 10,000,000 bales, of 500 pounds weight. There will not be enough cotton to meet the enormous demands for consumption. These are facts which cannot be denied, except by misrepresentation and juggling of figures for speculative purposes. Those farmers who recklessly rushed their cotton on the market and sacrificed it at 9 1/2 and 10 cents, ought not to complain if their neighbors are still holding a portion of theirs for higher prices. If the spinners bought the bulk of this crop at from 9 1/2 to 10 1/2 cents per pound, when they could as easily have paid 12 cents, they should not now complain if the small balance is sold at 15 cents in order to average the price as near 12 cents as possible. The price of cotton has advanced $2.50 a bale since the New Orleans convention, and is daily advancing on its merits, and in the face of the strongest combination to hold down prices that ever existed. Wall street and Liverpool have lost their power of fixing the price of the great American staple. The southern spot holder is now the dominant factor in the cotton trade of the world. His cause is a righteous one, and will receive the endorsement and support of every loyal Southerner, who believes in fair play in the great fight that is now waging. The South can and will win.

Universal peace can be achieved as soon as the people who are at the head of all governments show unmistakably that they want it, above the Baltimore American.

Full many a man is born to live unknown and waste his manhood struggling all alone, foredoomed to failure in that curious strife which ends with death what was begun with life.

A railroad engineer is permitted to take a forty-minute-hour run after five years of preparation. An automobile chauffeur can do it whenever he is foolish enough, remarks the Pittsburg Gazette.

With one senator fined $1000 for contempt of court and another sentenced to six months in jail, nobody can say that the members of the United States senate are not winning fame at the bar, declares the Baltimore American.

Let's be thankful after all that our life insurance presidents have never been so badly overpaid as the czar of Russia with his salary of $675,000, or the emperor of Germany with his $2,525,600 for his labors as king of Prussia, to say nothing of other perquisites. These sums, continues the Boston Transcript, together with the big allowances given to princes and grand dukes, make even the McCordys look like petty grafters.

Perhaps Africa will hereafter be referred to as a "new world," suggests the Indianapolis News. In part it is one of the oldest continents in history, but there are still large undeveloped and practically unknown areas in Africa. The United States is competing commercially in the development of this new world, but Great Britain, Germany and France have advantages of their own and are making tremendous efforts to utilize their opportunities.

The oil fields that have been discovered in South Africa are proving to be vast and rich, states the Indianapolis News. The American consul predicts that the dark continent will furnish the world's largest oil producing areas. The present there are few oil experts in the country, but doubtless the Standard Oil Company will soon correct this condition, and even if it doesn't the Inhambue Oil Syndicate of London, will furnish the necessary capital and labor. Oil in this field is found at comparatively shallow depths and in great quantities.

Edward S. Martin in the Atlantic, says great riches, carrying with them enormous possibilities of self-indulgence, may fairly be considered as a sort of poison which ruins a certain proportion of those who are exposed to it, though strong constitutions survive. As men grow richer, says, so wealth tends to destroy persons—especially young ones—whom we are trained to believe that it is not. It is a reality, he noticed in observing the effects of newly won wealth on the families of the winners. It is a rare and usually one very much blessed in his wife, who can combine with the family that wins him riches the capacity to train children born in comparative poverty so that they will benefit by a rapid and radical improvement in his circumstances.

Original Model of Nelson Column. We wonder how many of the thousands of people who pass within twenty or thirty yards of it know where the original model of the statue on the Nelson Column stands? asks a London exchange. This writer passed it about three hundred years ago for ten years, until the other day, in a fit of curiosity, he stepped inside the courtyard of the old Admiralty Building and looked into the doorway. There stood Nelson, railed around and labelled, with his sleeveless arm tucked up. Only the steelplanks which decorate the column and those who peep into the Admiralty doorway can realize what the statue really looks like.

Won on Points. The animals were playing football. The fox snatched the ball back to the perimeter. The porcupine started around the end with it. Whereupon the other animals fell on it. But they didn't do it a second time. The game ended right there—Chicago Tribune.

CHURCH BATTERED

Opposition to New French Law Precipitates Trouble.

GUARDSMEN CALLED OUT

Government Starting Out to Make Inventories of Church Property is Met by Resistance from the Catholics.

A Paris special says: A socialist deputy, M. Allard, interpellated by the government in the chamber Friday afternoon relative to the measures which it was intended to take to protect the government commissaries in carrying out their instructions to make inventories of the property of the churches.

Premier Rouvier replied that the authorities had orders to take and moderation during the operations, but the government was determined to do its duty at any cost, even employing armed force if necessary. In the meantime the opposition of the clergy to the taking of inventories is becoming more formidable. While the minister was being interpellated in the chamber, scenes of extreme violence were transpiring at the Church of St. Clothilde, near the chamber of deputies.

The church had been filled since early morning. Before the government commissaries appeared, a police official attempted to induce the clergy to permit an inventory to be taken, received severe maltreatment, while outside the policeman and mounted municipal guards were compelled to adopt the sternest measures in order to disperse the turbulent crowds.

Repeated charges occurred, leading to fifty arrests. Among those taken into custody were two priests. The crowd eventually became so violent in the Rue de Grenelle that the police drew their swords, which, however, they did not use. Many persons, including some priests, were injured during the fighting. The prefect of police, Mr. Lepine, personally supervised the maintenance of order, but, despite the fact that he repeatedly commended calmness, was unable to restrain the riotous crowds.

Equivalently the fire engines were ordered to take up a position near the church so as to be able to intervene to drench the crowd, which obstinately refused to move. The women showed the greatest determination, opening umbrellas for their protection and in the meanwhile chanting psalms.

M. Lepine ordered the municipal guards and police to enter the church, under a shower of broken chairs the officers broke down the railings in front of the entrance, while the crowd rained heavy blows on them. The firemen burst in the doors and inside the church the congregation, the police and municipal guards entered the buildings. One of the principal officers was severely wounded. Inside the church the congregation had erected a barricade which had to be taken by assault while men and women fought. After the church had been cleared the commissaries proceeded to take an inventory. The Catholics outside singing canticles. The prefect of the department of the Seine has issued instructions to the clergy to give up the keys of the churches, and added that in case of refusal the commissaries are instructed to call on the armed force for assistance.

FIGHT WON BY FARMERS.

House Demands That Census Director Produce Figures of Gainers—Rate Bill Debated at Length.

GUARDSMEN CALLED OUT

Government Starting Out to Make Inventories of Church Property is Met by Resistance from the Catholics.

A Washington special says: The house at Friday's session called for the estimate of cotton yet to be ginned, which the director of census has compiled, but which he has no authority to make public until March. This action precipitated a lively discussion in which petulance was expressed that the house should participate in furnishing information for the benefit of the speculators.

On the other hand there were numerous members, who stated that the substantial interests of grower, spinner and merchant made it imperative that such information should not be allowed to be bottled up. There was no opposition to the resolution on its passage.

The discussion of the railroad rate bill was taken up and prosecuted with vigor throughout the day. So many speakers have come to the front on this measure that the house agreed to meet at 10 o'clock, hereafter until the debate is ended. The feature of the debate was the lengthy speech of Mr. Sibley of Pennsylvania, who arraigned the legislation with arguments of various character. All of which tended to give the reasons for being unopposed to the bill.

When he charged that the legislation was socialistic in its nature, and was a step towards government ownership and the dream of Bryan and Hearst, Mr. James of Kentucky asked what the reason was for the right about face of the republican party in the direction of the Bryan leadership.

"I will gracefully place the responsibility on my colleagues of broader shoulders," retorted Mr. Sibley, and set down shaking his head. Mr. Sibley remarked to the great amusement of the house: "Don't shake your gory locks at me."

"Oh, the gentleman's hair is nearly as absent as my own," responded Mr. James.

Mr. Sibley said he would advocate larger salaries for the members of the interstate commerce commission, and would contest him with voting against the bill.

A speech by Mr. Heflin of Alabama also favoring the bill concluded the day's debate.

Director of the Census North was promptly notified of the passage by the house of the resolution of Representative Sims of Tennessee, calling for statistics of the census bureau on the amount of cotton remaining in the states on January 15. In anticipation of such action, he had already been preparing the figures.

RATE BILL ON TAP

Beginning of Extended Discussion in House.

DEBATE TO BE UNLIMITED

Messrs. Townsend, Adamson and Richardson Start the Ball to Rolling. Everybody in Good Humor.

According to special order, the house Tuesday took up the Hepburn railroad bill.

In making a request that speeches be confined to the subject matter of the bill, Mr. Hepburn stated that requests for time on the bill have been so numerous that it seemed proper to confine debate to the bill. Mr. Townsend, minority leader, objected to this restriction, whereupon a discussion followed as to whether this request could be enforced by a vote. Mr. Williams remarked: "We are a body now that can't do anything but talk, and if this precedent is made we will even have that privilege cut off."

"Not wishing to abridge any of the gentleman's prerogatives, Mr. Hepburn, good naturedly, he observed further that while no time had been set to close debate, it had been his idea that a vote might be taken on the bill one week hence.

In taking up the bill in committee of the whole, Mr. Vreeland of New York was selected to preside over the debate.

Opening what promises to be a week's discussion on the railroad rate bill, Mr. Townsend of Michigan addressed the house for more than an hour, touching on and elucidating practically every phase of the rate making problem, and describing in detail the terms of the Hepburn bill.

Regarding the question as one of the most important ever before congress, Mr. Townsend advocated the bill as the consequent remedy for the evils which exist and predicted that notwithstanding the protests of the roads, greater prosperity would come to them under its provisions than otherwise.

Judge Adamson of Georgia and Mr. Richardson of Tennessee also spoke on the measure. While Mr. Townsend's opening speech, the two southerners attracted most attention, and the deep interest felt in the issues they discussed was manifested by the many interruptions from other members and the running discussion that ensued.

Judge Adamson reviewed utterances of the democratic platforms and showed that democratic newspapers and democratic leaders have for years been demanding this method of securing the correction of the evil of interstate rates. He gave to President Roosevelt "the ablest, most honest and fearless republican president we ever ever had" the credit for repudiating the republican platform which was "stand pat" on railroad rates, and coming to the position of the demand for rate making.

Both Roosevelt and Cannon Against Reducing South's Representation.

"THE SUN OF HIS LIFE."

Nick Longworth Makes Public Declaration of Love for Miss Roosevelt in Banquet Speech.

DEBATE TO BE UNLIMITED

All Washington is smiling sympathetically at the manner in which "Nick" Longworth displayed his love for Miss Alice Roosevelt when they were in Philadelphia a night or so ago. Before 200 guests at the Quaker dinner, Mr. Longworth called Miss Roosevelt the sun of his life, and, smiling upon her as she watched him from an adjoining room, said that from where he stood he could see the sun in his home or the reflected radiance he had a momentary prominence.

"As his excellency, the ambassador from Brazil," began the future son-in-law of the president, "I am a lucky man and I know it."

A general laugh and applause greeted this remark, and Miss Roosevelt blushed.

"And, in fact, I realize," continued the congressman, "that this kind of a phrase with which you have greeted me is not because I deserve it, but because I stand here shining in reflected glory. I might not be like it as long as I have come from the Japanese lanterns or the electric lights which I see here, but when the rays come from the sun, then I am indeed glad."

Another burst of applause and another blush from Miss Roosevelt. It isn't often that a girl has the opportunity of hearing her fiancé talk such glowing love lyrics in public.

"And though," "I think I see the sun shining behind the palm trees in the other room," Wild applause and many blushes.

General Grosvenor, who attended a dinner party given Tuesday in honor of Miss Roosevelt, commented openly on their mutual exhibitions of affection and gave many interesting details of their courtship.

"Alice and Nick," he said, "are two splendid examples of all that is best in young American manhood and womanhood today, and I think Nick is doing exactly right in making no secret of the fact that he is deeply in love with the charming girl who will soon be his wife."

The old general takes a fatherly interest in "Alice and Nick." He always calls them that. He was a member of the Taft party during the trip to Japan, Korea and the Philippines, during which Mr. Longworth wooed and won Miss Roosevelt.

"Alice and Nick" have been greatly favored at the great interest aroused in the announcement of their engagement. "The fact of the matter is that no idea it was going to be such a public affair as this, finding that the people of the country are inclined to make a public affair out of it, both in the east and the west."

"Mr. Longworth's frank statement in a crowded banquet hall, which by its very nature is most unusual in ordinary circumstances, was to my mind just the right thing. He resolved to leave no vestige of doubt in my mind that to him Alice is all in all."

WONT STAND FOR CUT.
