Our Congressmen Didn't Bolt

There has been much ado lately about the alleged bolt of certain Democrats, including six members of the Georgia delegation, in the battle over amending the rules of the house of representatives in Washington last Monday.

Certain newspapers and political agencies have been busy stirring fire in the grass all the week hoping to start a flame which they hope will grow into a conflagration.

The truth of the matter is, the Georgia members, along with other Democrats who supported the Fitzgerald resolution in preference to the one agreed upon in the caucus, were practical enough to obtain some results and the rules of the house are reformed to a very marked degree; whereas, if they had stuck to Clark and his crowd, standing out for that which they knew they couldn't get, there would have been nothing accomplished.

The caucus gave its members the right to support on the floor of the house any general measure which would bring reform to the old rules. A resolution covering that ground was introduced by Mr. Fitzgerald, a Democratic member from the state of New York, and six Georgia Democrats, viz: Edwards, Brantley, Griggs, Lee, Livingston and Howard, standing upon their rights as members of the house and as guaranteed them in the caucus, voted for the Fitzgerald resolution, which was passed.

Representative Champ Clark of Missouri and his followers rose up in arms and denounced the twenty-three Democrats, including six from Georgia, as bolters and, as stated in the opening of this article, certain newspapers, led by the Atlanta Journal, have been spreading all the poison possible. With a hope of engineering all the strife possible, the Journal has its hired man, Ralph Smith, in Washington to dish out the medicine to them, and now we find the little Hardwicks and the other little "billies" standing back on their dew claws and pawing the earth just as if something terrible had really happened.

The Journal crowd has long since lost all love and affection for Brantley, Griggs, Lee, Livingston and others, and in fact everybody else who don't sit on the tail end of their hand wagon.

We notice by the dispatches that "Little Bill Hardwick" threatens to gird his loins and invade the districts of the offending congressmen. If we mistake not the rumblings that have been going up around in the tenth for some time, "Little Billie" will have his hands full around home when the next campaign opens.

Billie is next on looking after people's affairs you know, he stuck his nose in down here once upon a time, and pitted himself against Brantley. The Hoke Smith people here regard Billie's coming as one of their mistakes that forever settled the Governor's chances in Bulloch. These folks know how to attend to their own business and the fellow that calls in Hardwick or any other of the "Little Billies" to advise them from without, will have reason to set aside a pag for political mistakes. If we mistake not Gov. Smith has a whole day filled with the mistakes of "Little Billie" strutting over the State, posing as a boss and political leader, among men who have sense enough to do their own leading.

Of course leader Champ Clark flew into a rage, the fact that any other Democrat than himself could get through a resolution was an unpardonable sin. He is the minority leader, coming from a state where his party is in the minority, Missouri going republican during the last two presidential campaigns. It seems that under Champ's dictation there has been sufficient bolting up in Missouri until she has long ceased to be classed among the Democratic states. Let those who criticize hesitate to condemn our congressmen until they have something better than they have now to base their condemnation upon.

NEAR DEATH IN BIG POND.

It was a thrilling experience to Mrs. Ida Soper to face death. "For years a severe lung trouble gave me intense suffering," she writes, "and several times nearly caused my death. All remedies failed and doctors said I was incurable. Then Dr. King's New Discovery brought quick relief and a cure so permanent that I have not been troubled in twelve years." Mrs. Soper lives in Big Pond, Pa. It works wonders in Coughs and Colds, Sore Lungs, Hemorrhages, La Grippe, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough and all Bronchial affections. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by W. H. Ellis & Co.

Feeding or Turning Under.

The question of whether or not it was best to turn under the green crop, or cut and feed it to the stock, was for a long time in dispute. Experiments clearly indicate that the correct plan is to cut the crop and feed it to the stock during the winter. Cowpea hay contains about sixteen per cent. of protein, or twice as much as the hay from grasses. Protein is a most expensive stock element. If leguminous crops are fed, much less cotton seed meal and corn will be required to keep the cattle and stock in good condition.

If the cowpea is the greatest of all nitrogen feeders for the soil, and supplies the largest amount of protein in its food for stock, it appears that it must be the best friend the farmers have. The great trouble is in properly saving and curing the vines for feeding purposes. If the vines are cut when the peas are in the milk stage, they are extremely hard to save except in a season of fine weather. If, as a measure, from the farm animals fed on the leguminous crops are carefully preserved and returned to the soil, unquestionably nothing is lost by the adoption of that plan. If, however, no attention is to be paid to the saving and curing of the manure, the best method is to turn under the crop of peas when matured.—Cotton Journal.

Catch Crops.

There is no quicker or surer plan of building up a field annually devoted to a field of cotton than by broadcasting it in crimson clover at last plowing or laying by of the cotton in July or August.

The clover will grow rapidly through the winter, and by spring will be just right for turning under. It will tend to preserve the soil and as a "catch crop" during the winter, on a clearly cultivated field, nothing is superior. Winter rains deplete our soils by leaching. Whatever fertilizers may be left unused by the cotton crop, if allowed to be drained out by winter rains, are of course lost the next year. Crimson clover and such crops will prevent waste of good material, stop washing and add to the elements of plant food by their thorough system of soil renovation.

Let the thought become firmly fixed in our minds that the farm can be made self-sustaining by the use of the resources at our command alone. That these resources, if intelligently handled, are superior in every respect to anything that can be bought in the open market. Success on the farm can be had without crossing its boundaries for help, if the owner will only study, think and realize the extent of his independence.—Cotton Journal.

The Telephone And its Relation to the Country Doctor.

By Mr. M. S. Allen before the County Medical Association of Emanuel County, Georgia.

The role of Country Doctor has always been an interesting one, but it has always been an exceedingly difficult one, with many hardships and few rewards outside of the friendship of the families attended. As conditions in the open country have improved, however, the country doctor's labors have been lessened even though his rewards may not have increased in like ratio.

A few years ago the country doctor settled in a small town where a practice was assured because there was no one else to aid the afflicted. Usually there were many more who had little money or property and who could pay small fees only by denying themselves the necessities of life. Into such a community came the young physician, and his life-work began in earnest. Calls came slowly at first, but ever faster as his skill became known, and where one horse and buggy had been more than enough to make his calls, two were necessary, especially in the winter and spring when the roads were heavy.

Communication was difficult and when there was an accident or some one was taken suddenly ill, the only way of summoning aid was by harnessing a horse, and driving or riding miles perhaps, for a doctor who might be equally as far away in another direction. When he was found, it mattered not how tired he was, what time of night, how bad the weather, he must jump into his buggy and hurry to the bedside, sometimes reaching it too late to be of service. This is a phase of country life which has kept many people living in cities when they would have preferred life on a small farm.

In these days a factor has been introduced into country life which has done a great deal to relieve this isolation, and to bring the dwellers in the open country into closer contact, not only with whom he does business. That factor is the telephone, and the first people to realize its possibilities were the country doctors. All over the South there are Doctor's offices, with from one to ten telephone lines radiating from them, with any number of telephones from one to twenty-five connected to each. In many cases these telephone lines connect with no exchanges or long distance lines, the only purpose they serve being to afford their owners the privilege of talking with one another or to summon aid in emergencies.

When several such lines center in a doctor's residence, he usually has some kind of switchboard, so that he can connect any of the lines together, thus bringing all the people on the various lines into closer touch. The lines are operated in two ways. One is where the doctor himself builds the line and furnishes the telephones, renting them to his patrons, on the same principle as a city exchange is operated. This plan frequently results in the doctor's finally operating a telephone exchange with several hundred stations, necessitating the employment of operators and a man to take care of the accounts, switchboard, and so forth.

The other, and usual plan is where the people themselves get together, organize a mutual company, build their own lines, install their own telephones, and terminate the line in the doctor's office, where he installs a switching device, charging the people on the lines a nominal sum of 25 cents or 50 cents per month for connecting the lines together. Frequently the doctor himself instrumental in getting such a scheme started, and acting as the agent for the telephones, sells them and the line material to the people building the lines making a commission which is a welcome addition to his income.

Nothing in the way of a Cough is quite so annoying as a tickling, teasing, wheezing, bronchial Cough. The quickest relief comes perhaps from a prescription known to Druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. And besides it is so thoroughly harmless that mothers give it with perfect safety even to the youngest babies. The tender leaves of a simple mountain shrub give to Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy its remarkable curative effect. A few days' test will tell. Sold by W. H. Ellis Co.

Where such a system exists the beneficial effect not only upon the community at large, but upon the country doctor also, can hardly be expressed. No matter how far from his office he may be, he is at ways in touch with it, and can be reached in less time than it takes to saddle a horse. Often he can prescribe for his patient saving himself a visit, and always in case of accident, can give advice which perhaps will save a life which would have been lost had he not been located so quickly.

Good roads make the practice of a country physician very much easier, and enable him to extend it to the more remote parts of the district in which he lives, but they come slowly at great expense to the community and only the main arteries of first rebuilt, leaving miles of side roads in as bad condition as ever. Rural free deliveries that bring him closer to the great centers of life and industry and to those with whom he comes in contact in a professional way, also come slowly, and extend along the highways, leaving the byways almost as far off as before. The junction of several roads with an R. F. D. route, with a score of mail boxes perched on posts with only one or two houses within view, is a common sight these days, and indicates that the owners of the boxes have to come several miles for their mail.

The telephone is the agent which most tends to increase his practice and his income, to make his calls, and to save his time and the wear and tear on himself and his teams. How much simpler it is for him to call up his patients ten or fifteen miles away and learn whether a change in their condition makes a visit necessary, than to drive that far to learn the same thing! Even if there is not a telephone in the home of every one of them, there is one in the vicinity of each from which the doctor can be notified of his condition and called if a change makes it necessary.

Unlike good roads, it costs little money to build telephone lines, and unlike rural free deliveries, they may be extended along highways and byways, along good roads, across fields, over hills and streams. They are flexible, they are cheap, they give good service and they are always ready, day or night, to perform their duty. Once connected up, they require no further attention save to renew the batteries once or twice a year and to keep the lines clear. Their construction is so simple that any group of farmers can build them. Poles, particularly in the South, can usually be cut on the farms and can be distributed and set into the ground at slight expense. The wires, brackets and insulators for a mile of metallic (2-wire) circuit, which will give the best service, costs approximately only $15 per mile, while the best telephone instrument with all the material necessary for installation costs approximately $14 each.

A failing tiny nerve—no larger than the finest silken thread—takes from the heart its impulse, its power, its regularity. The Stomach also has its hidden, or inside nerve. It was Dr. Shoop who first told us it was wrong to drug a weak or failing Stomach Heart or Kidneys. His prescription—Dr. Shoop's Restorative—is directed straight for the cause of these ailments—these weak and faltering inside nerves. This no doubt clearly explains why Dr. Shoop's Restorative has so long grown so rapidly in popularity. Druggists say that those who test the Restorative even for a few days soon become fully convinced of its wonderful merit. Anyway, don't drug the organ. Treating the cause of sickness is the only sensible and successful way. Sold by W. H. Ellis Co.

BOWEN'S Guano Distributor

Is the most successful machine of its kind ever used for distributing Commercial Fertilizers.

In covering the fertilizer it makes a bed any width from 9 to 25 inches, and any height desired.

The machine is low in price; Simple; Strong; Convenient.

Read these Testimonials from those who have used it.

The Adabelle Trading Co., of Adabelle, Ga., used one of the Distributors in 1904; the year following they used 14, and last year (1907) they used 24 on their various farms. This should sufficiently express their opinion of the Distributor.

Statesboro, Ga., November 18, 1907.

This is to certify that for several years I was employed by the E. E. Foy Mfg. Co., in this county, as their superintendent, and that they were exclusive users of farm machinery, and that they used a good many makes of guano distributors, and that the Bowen Distributor, used with a Planet Jr. cultivator was one of the best they used and gave better satisfaction for general use, and did not cost as much.

I consider them the very implement for the farmer, as he can detach the Distributor and have a good plow for almost all purposes in the cultivator.
