Overstreet's

Are Getting Active

That the campaign for Bulloch county and in the first congressional district is going to reach fever heat is now fully apparent.

On Friday morning it is understood that fifteen men, friends of Col. J. W. Overstreet left Savannah for a tour of all the counties of the First District. Two of them came to Bulloch viz: Judge Horace A. Boykin and Col. A. B. Lovett. That Bulloch county drew two of the strongest members of the army of invasion is a compliment to the importance of the Bulloch county vote. Col. Overstreet himself is very much in evidence in Bulloch, attending the meetings, meeting and shaking hands with his friends. In addition to these there are a number of local men who have thrown themselves into the fight in favor of the gentleman from Savannah.

While all this is going on Congressman Edwards is at his post in Washington, having been back by important legislation on which his vote was needed. As soon as he can

Card From Dr. Parrish

Mr. Editor: Please allow me space in your paper to express myself as to how I stand in regard to the creation of Candler county. One year ago I opposed the passage of that bill because there was strong sentiment in this county against its creation, and as I was elected to serve the people as best I could, explains my position at that time. But since I came home from Atlanta I find public sentiment has changed and but little opposition now exists. I have been assured by representative men of the proposed county that the county line, as it now stands, has been set back from their proposed county map lines so that it is now about one mile in Statesboro's favor. That is the nearest point involved.

Now, with this assurance, and as I have said with public sentiment as strong as it is in favor of the creation of Candler county, and with the bill now pending in the house, if it passes the house and comes to the senate I feel that it will be my duty to give it my support.

Yours respectfully,
C. H. PARRISH.

Senator Parrish Comes Out For Candler County

In this issue will be found a card from State Senator C. H. Parrish in which he states that if the Candler county bill passes the House and reaches the Senate it will be his duty to cast his ballot for it. Senator Parrish gives as his reason that the people are in favor of the creation of Candler county by a large majority and he feels it his duty to serve the people.

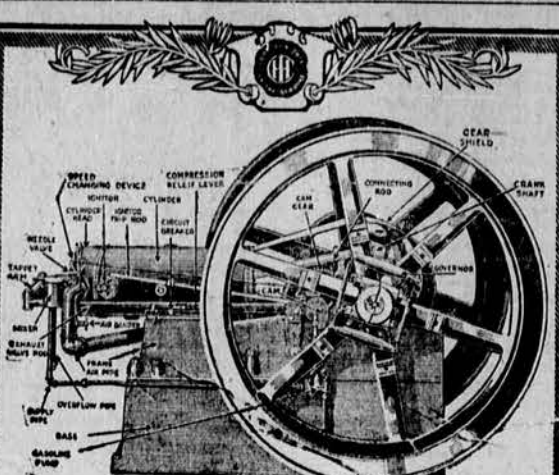

We believe that Senator Parrish is justified in this position. The Statesboro News has been taking this position for some time and our information is that there is practically no opposition to the Candler county bill in the territory embraced by the old county from which it is cut.

The sooner the people of Mator get their new county the better it will be for all concerned. Candler county will be one of the best counties in Georgia from the very first, and its creation will be of great benefit to the people in that section and will hurt no one else. The News is glad to endorse the position taken by our senator.

Let This I H C Engine Do Your Work

NINE years ago I H C engines first appeared on the market. Men who bought them at that time report them still doing an honest day's work. They are always ready to run, they have more power than you pay for, and they develop that power on very little fuel.

When you buy an I H C engine, it is set up and tested on your farm by experts. If anything happens to it any time, we have repair parts right there. The longer life and lower up-keep expense of I H C engines makes them cost far less per year of service than inferior engines. That's why we sell I H C engines.

No Issues in Campaign.

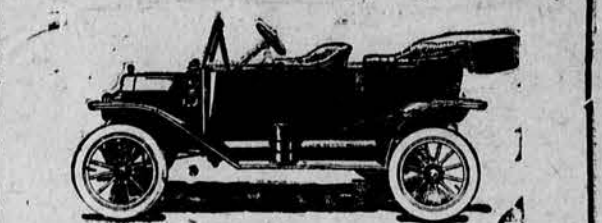

It has been several years since the people of Georgia were as little interested in a political campaign as the present one, says the Dawson News. There is a reason for this. There are no new issues and there is no question in the public getting excited over nothing—Darren Gazette.

EDWARDS MAKES EMPHATIC DENIAL

Statement of the Condition of THE BANK OF STATESBORO
Located at Statesboro, Ga., at the close of business June 2nd, 1914.

My opponent's last article in which he engages in "mud slinging," "criticisms," "personalities," "misrepresentations" and "abuse," is in keeping with the character of speeches he has been making for months and is an illustration of the methods he has employed to further his ambition. I shall not reply in the same spirit. His "poem" upon which he is trying to ride into office is a tangle of falsehoods. The statement that I promised "On bonded paper" not to run again is absolutely false. I am using below in answer to his poem, one written by Mr. J. C. Solomon, which reflects quite a different sentiment.

My heart's wildest cry in the stormy night,
When justice is heaped upon me,
Is help me, Good master, to do the right
And lean lovingly upon Thee.

Do not let the words hot and bitter fall!
But hold tight the crushing tide,
For thou alone can keep me all in all,
Oh, walk Thou, Master, by my side.

Good Lord, if another should treat me ill,
And should provoke my soul to wrath,
Then say Thy peaceful hand upon me
Till I find again the quiet path.

And do not let me, Lord, another hate,
But give me softer words to say,
And though I suffer let me learn to wait
For the coming of the glad day.

So ever hold me, Lord, ever lead me,
Till the wrong shall yield to right,
And then my soul shall rise in victory,
As the day leaps out of the night.

Mr. Overstreet predicted in his card, I would miss the vote on the Anti-Trust Bill. The Record shows I voted on them. Another of his predictions "gone wrong" and "wide of the mark."

Since it is apparent that Mr. Overstreet has lost his temper and is going to the mire with his campaign, I must decline to be drawn into further newspaper controversy with him. The people should not and will not tolerate a campaign or abuse. Nor will they approve of a grandstand appeal to hard justice. We should stand for hard money, peace and good-will instead of "class-strife" and "class hatred." The certain fruits of the latter are discord and bitterness.

Yours truly,

Confederate Veterans Admitted Free

On Wednesday evening, July 1, all Confederate veterans wearing crosses of Honor will be admitted to the auditorium free of charge to hear the historical lecture by Mrs. LaSalle Corbell Pickett (widow of General Pickett, the famous Confederate leader) subject, Battle of Gettysburg. Mrs. Pickett is one of the brilliant women of the Old South who is keeping alive and burning the camp fires of patriotism which filled the breasts of thousands of brave men who gave up their lives on the battle field for the principles contended for by the Southern Confederacy. She is carrying the story to the rising generation teaching them that our forefathers were right, though overpowered in the four years of bloody war between the states. Both old and young will enjoy this lecture, and those who miss it will miss something they may never again be permitted to hear. The old veterans are passing away and this good woman, the widow of one of our great generals who led the memorable fight of one of the brigades in the battle of Gettysburg is one of the few women of that day on this side of the Great Divide.

While here Mrs. Pickett will be entertained by Statesboro Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

Express Office Burglarized

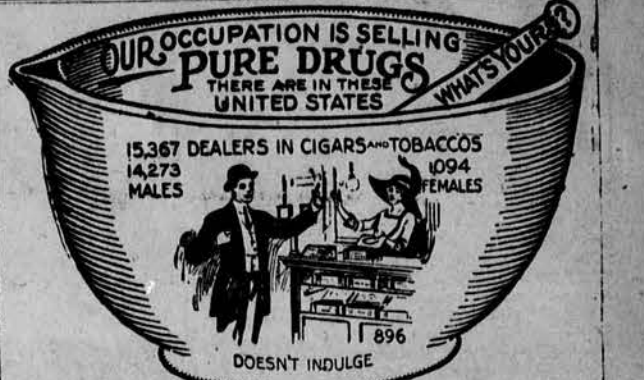

On Saturday night about midnight, during the shower of rain, the office of the Southern Express Company, at Statesboro was burglarized. The burglar effected an entrance through the side window next to the Central depot, using a brick bat to break the glass. The cash till was torn open, but finding only a small amount of small change it was passed up, burglar taking from there a key to the room which held the express shipments of whiskey, several of which was in the office, two gallons of whiskey was stolen and two suits of clothes and a pair of pants. The robbery was not discovered until early Sunday morning.

Bride Badly Hurt in Runaway.

On Sunday afternoon Mr. Lee Stewart and Miss Mabel Jenkins, accompanied by a few intimate friends, drove over to Enoka where they were united in marriage. While returning home the horse driven by the happy young couple became frightened and ran away, overturning the buggy and throwing them out. Mrs. Stewart was pretty badly bruised up. Her wounds, while painful, we understand are not serious.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Jenkins and the groom is a son of Mr. S. G. Stewart who lives near that place.

Mrs. A. A. Moore Dead.

Yesterday evening about 8 o'clock the spirit of Mrs. A. A. Moore took its flight to the regions beyond after a stay on earth of 87 years. Her passing away was largely the result of advanced age, her body succumbing to the weight of years.

She was the widow of the late Judge S. L. Moore who preceded her several years ago. She had been a consistent member of the Methodist church for a good many years.

Mrs. Moore leaves several children, Miss Jane Ann, Messrs. M. G. and S. L. Moore. D. G. Lee and Mrs. J. Z. Kendrick to mourn her death.

The funeral and interment took place this (Wednesday) afternoon at 3 o'clock at the family burying ground near the old home and was conducted by Revs. W. K. Dennis of Statesboro and T. I. Nease of Brooklet.

The News extends sympathy to the bereaved family.

Elsewhere in this issue will be found the announcement of Col. F. T. Lanier who announces himself a candidate for representative, in the August primary. Mr. Lanier is a strong man and will make a good race, and if elected will represent the county in a creditable manner.

SHARE THE CALVES AND SAVE LIVING COSTS

EVERY man, woman and child in the United States would benefit from eating veal, the meat problem in this country would be solved within ten years. Every year there are 10,000,000 calves killed in the United States. It requires two years for a calf to become a marketable beef. If Uncle Sam were to bring about a two-year recess in the veal-eating habit of his subjects, there certainly would be a reduction in the cost of meat. If every person in every land were to deprive themselves of this luxury for a period of ten years we would have the greatest supply of meat in the history of the world.

The United States census of 1909 shows that 6,500,562 calves were killed that year. The Shoe and Leather Reporter of Boston, which is an authority on the number of calf skins used by the tanners, and the skins from all calves killed in the United States must eventually reach that end, estimates that the increase each year in the number of calves killed in the past ten years amounts to from seven per cent to ten per cent. Therefore, the number killed in 1912 would be 9,000,000, and in 1913, or last year, 9,800,000. These figures are obtained from statistics from all killing points in the United States.

Of course, for every calf that is killed it means one less full-grown steer or cow, and for each of these that we lose it means approximately 800 pounds of meat.

In 1907 the United States census reported 72,000,000 cattle, including calves, in this country, and in 1912 the figures show 55,000,000, a decrease of 10,000,000. With an increase of from seven per cent to ten per cent in the number of calves killed each year, resulting in 3,000,000 in 1913, it is evident that this is the largest factor in bringing about the decrease in our cattle population, and one can only guess what the results will be in a few years more if the present conditions are continued.

The causes for these conditions are many; the principal one, however, is the demands from the dairy districts which require milk for butter and cheese, as well as for daily consumption, and the farmer must naturally get rid of the young calf as soon as possible if he expects to obtain the mother's milk for these purposes. As soon as the calf is old enough it is sold to the butcher.

The average weight of a veal calf is 140 pounds, which it permitted to live and attain its full growth at, say two years, would weigh 1,000 pounds, a gain of 860 pounds, and if we were to save half of the calves that are now killed it would be a saving of 4,000,000,000 pounds per annum, and after figuring the loss in by-products this would produce about 2,000,500,000 pounds of beef, or about twenty-eight pounds to each person in the United States, by saying nothing of the natural gain in money value.

Therefore the economic question involved, and it is one that affects our whole population. The pathetic side does not appeal to many, but to his adherents. There are thousands of calves killed weekly in this city, all under one year old. After that they are classed as cattle.

The usual age of a calf is about four to six weeks, and the little four-week-old calf in the picture was taken away from its mother, expressed to the commission man and was sold to the killers.

A national law which should prevent the killing of calves in order that they may grow up into beef animals, thereby increasing the supply of beef, was advocated recently by Dr. L. H. Bailey, formerly director of the New York State College of Agriculture, in the course of an address on the subject which he delivered at Ithaca, N. Y.

"It is the common assumption that we are now suffering under a shortage of beef," said Dr. Bailey. "There have been many suggestions looking toward the increasing of the supply. To a certain type of mind, the simplest way of regulating or overcoming an economic law is by an act of the legislature. Therefore it is proposed that congress shall make it a misdemeanor for a farmer to kill his calves thereby allowing them to mature into beef animals. It becomes a most interesting problem as to whether congress would be successful in compelling a man to do so, or when the keeping of it would not combine with his plan of farming. I think that there ought also to be a law compelling farmers to have their hens lay eggs in November and December."

"The reason why farmers kill their veals is wholly economic. It does not pay them to raise the animals to maturity. Food is too high-priced in the main dairy regions. The feeding season is long. It may pay a man better to put his feed better to his calves at birth than to try to feed them even to the vealing age. No legislature can compel a man to conduct his personal business operations at a sacrifice or a loss. It is possible in some cases that a reorganization of a farming business might enable a farmer to raise more animals to maturity, but this is a matter that lies without the province of law."

"For myself I wish that there was less eating of veal and that the people would regulate their desires in this regard. Years ago there was a season when we ate veal. This season was perhaps two months. There was also a season when we ate oysters, and fresh codfish, and green peas, and tomatoes. Now we want anything or everything every month in the year. We are forgetting what the year means to us, and we are also losing the great economic advantage of buying in season and of buying intelligently. Probably veal is usually inferior to mature meat in nutritive value; but I am less concerned in this aspect of the case than in the fact that we are losing the meaning of the months. Less demand for veal would do more than any law toward correcting some of our difficulties; but even so, a farmer will not raise the mature animal unless it pays him to do so.

"I think that much could be done to stimulate the production of beef by providing for local manufacturing and manufacturing establishments. We have developed local co-operative creameries, co-operative grain elevators, shipping associations, evaporating establishments and others. I should like to see the development of local slaughter houses, in charge of the raisers of meat, in all the localities in which it can pay to raise beef and other meats. The industry can't raise it to do so."

"The usual age of a calf is about four to six weeks, and the little four-week-old calf in the picture was taken away from its mother, expressed to the commission man and was sold to the killers."

A national law which should prevent the killing of calves in order that they may grow up into beef animals, thereby increasing the supply of beef, was advocated recently by Dr. L. H. DEVELOPING THE HEIFER

PROF. J. A. MCLEAN,
Department Animal Husbandry,
Massachusetts State Agricultural College.

Improvement in the dairy can be achieved only by raising and developing heifers into cows that are superior to their mothers. The proper selection of the sire is one of the greatest influences in the improvement of the herd, but of equal importance is the growing and developing of the young heifer after they are born, for the best bred calf may develop into a scrub cow if it receives scrub treatment.

Granting that the calf is born right, due care must be taken particularly during its first three months. For the first twenty-four hours, let it suck its mother. This is better for both the cow and the calf. After the first day remove the youngster from its mother for at least ten days feed upon whole milk. If the calf is doing well at the end of that time skim milk may gradually be substituted for the whole milk, till by the end of three weeks the calf is entirely upon skim milk. As soon as the calf will begin to eat grain feed a mixture of bran, corn and crushed oats mixed in equal parts by weight, allowing it to have as much as it will clean up twice a day. The skim milk should be continued until six months of age, although the amount should never greatly exceed 15 pounds per day.

At about six weeks of age calves generally begin to eat hay and it is very important to furnish them with as much roughage of excellent quality as they will eat, for hay or grass is necessary for the proper development of the calf. We want our dairy cows to have great digestive capacity; to get this they must begin early to eat good hay. There is no better hay than alfalfa of high quality. Where it is not obtainable mixed clover hay or timothy will be found most excellent. To the above feeds add healthful conditions such as comfortable, moderately warm quarters, fresh air, cleanliness, sunlight, clean feed pails and feed troughs or buckets are absolutely essential.

Don't stand that itching skin humor one day longer. Go to the nearest druggist and get a jar of resitol ointment (25c). Rub the eczema patches with resitol soap and hot water, dry and apply a little resitol ointment. It's almost too good to be true. The torturing itching and burning stop instantly, you no longer have to dig and scratch, sleep becomes possible, and healing begins. Soon the ugly, torturing eruptions disappear completely and for good.—AdV.

Some men don't need money in order to spend it.

Where a steel-frame harrow is used it will be best to slant the teeth slightly backward. The ground will not be so much chance of tearing the young plants out by the roots.

Most of us plant our cotton thickly enough that the loss of a few plants will not hurt the cotton's chances. The damage appears to be much more than it really is. Keep it up, though, for it will do the cotton a world of good.

Everybody who has tried the experiment of harrowing cotton and noted the results is sure to agree that the plan, writes R. C. Wilson of Arkansas in Farm Progress. It must be used from the beginning, however, if it is to do much good. Where the ground has been plowed and harrowed, the farmer should use a harrow and driving a spring that will walk steadily, the row may be straddled by the harrow and the row turned up within a couple of inches of the cotton without injuring it.

MANNER OF WATER-PROOFING CONCRETE

Cement is becoming more used and valued in the country. A fine example of Cement Porch and Pump Stand.

Again, a very simple preparation, one that has often been used, is a mixture of alum water and lye. This is mixed in about the following proportions: To five pounds of alum, add two gallons of water and one pound of lye; after this has been allowed to stand for a little time it thickens and should then be applied to the surface of the concrete with a brush, several coats being used. I can recommend this as a preparation which will be serviceable for water-proofing concrete.

been prepared in a haphazard, careless manner, it will be better not to try to run a harrow over the field.

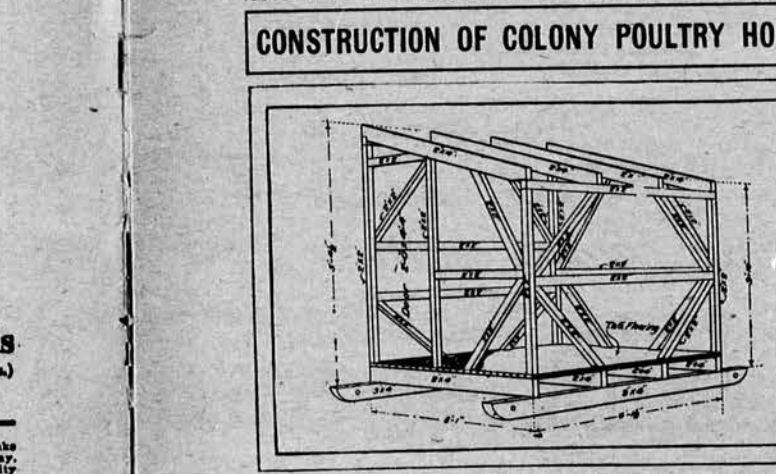

Where the ground is cloddy, clumped up with corn stalks, cotton stalks, grass clumps and other trash, this stuff will drag and pull, and the result will be that harrowing will pull too many cotton plants out of the ground. Where there is much of this trash the harrow will collect it and drag it along, lifting the harrow teeth out of the ground and doing no good whatever. The harrowing should not be attempted just after the plants come up as the rolling clods will do a lot of damage to the tiny plants.

I sometimes harrow a field after it is planted and just before it comes through the ground. This is advisable when used to break up the crust that forms after a heavy rain. Either of these two reasons is enough to justify its use.

The man who is afraid of the harrow should do a little experimenting this spring. He might take a few rows in the middle of the field and try the harrow on them. Let him harrow the rows as soon as the plants get well up and continue this as long as his good judgment dictates. Of course, cotton seedlings get too large to be cultivated in this way, but common sense will tell the owner when that time arrives.

A trial of this kind is usually all that is necessary to convert the doubter to the wisdom of the harrow's use.

Locomotive Engineer Made Quite Plain What Had Caused Argument Between Travelers.

Two commercial travelers while in a train got into an argument over the action of the vacuum brake. "It's the inflation of the tube that stops the train," declared the first traveler.

"Wrong, wrong!" shouted the second. "It's the output of the exhaust."

Then when the train arrived at the station they agreed to submit the matter for settlement to the engineer. That gentleman, leaning condescendingly from his cab, listened with an attentive frown to the two travelers' statements of their argument. Then he smiled, shook his head and said: "Well, gentlemen, you're both wrong about the working of the vacuum brake. Yet it's very simple and easy to understand. When we want to stop the train we just turn this valve and then we fill the pipe with vacuum."

RINGWORM ITCHED TERRIBLY

1545 Alquist St., Baltimore, Md.—"My children were afflicted with what they called ringworm of the scalp contracted from a house-cat they were playing with. The ringworm formed on their scalps about the size of a silver dollar and their hair fell out, leaving a round scale or crust on their scalps. Their hair fell out in round spots. There was terrible itching, and they scratched till the blood came. They were very fretful and could not sleep at night, and they were very cross."

"They were treated for several months with no improvement whatsoever. I was told they would never have any hair and would always be bald. Then I began using Cuticura Soap in connection with Cuticura Ointment and the first week I could see the wonderful remedies were doing all they were claimed to do and, in six weeks' time they were entirely cured. They all have a beautiful growth of hair. (Signed) Mrs. Sadie Pollock, Jan. 1, 1913.

303 Congress St. W., St. Paul, Minn.

J. W. Overstreet Replies to Congressman Edward's Last Card.

A very short time ago, Mr. Edwards was complaining because I had availed myself of the privilege inherent in every man, of going to the voters of the First District face to face and meeting them in my campaign for Congress. He protested loudly that he was "the man on the job" in Washington, and could not leave. He even sent out a post card with a picture of himself as if sitting on the capitol, holding it down.

On May 28th, I predicted that he would not remain in Washington until adjournment. I used the following language: "But, how much longer can he stay there? Can he stick it out when he realizes he is a defeated man? Watch him." True to my prediction, he now announces that he will return home about July 1st, at which time he states he can leave "without injury or jeopardizing the interest of his constituents." Why is his presence less necessary in July than now? Mr. Edwards has been contentedly upon the adjournment of Congress until now. He has tried to follow the precedent set by Mr. Underwood, of Alabama, who remained in Congress, and was elected to the Senate in a hot campaign without leaving his post of duty. But Mr. Edwards has realized that he cannot measure up to the stature of Mr. Underwood, and he is coming home all right, and will abandon his non-deplorable "man on the job" title. This is a right: I do not object to his coming home. But how could he have been sincere in posing as the "man on the job", when he so quickly changes front on realizing the strength of my support, and rushes home to make an active campaign.

Mr. Edwards' first two speeches are scheduled for Tattall county, which he claims as his "home county", although he now lives in Savannah, and resided there at the time he was elected to Congress. He must be worried about the situation in this "alleged" home county. Scriven is his home county. I am making my speeches there. Surely, the people of a candidate home county do not need speech-making in order to know the record and qualifications of their "fellow citizen". My friends predict for me an overwhelming majority in old Tattall, and Mr. Edwards has realized now his virtuous protestations of staying on the job can not keep that county in line for him.

Recently Mr. Edwards was 30th, after Mr. Edwards had attacked me with vituperation, abuse and ridicule and sarcasm, to which I had refused to descend, either upon the stump or in the press, he stated that he would refuse to be drawn into a controversy. I immediately following this he publishes a further reply to me in all the country weeklies, and gets up another "campaign look", and floods the district with it. In this reply he publishes a "poem," a most "prayerful poem," gotten up by a friend of his, in which his friend prays to the Lord to help Mr. Edwards "do the right," and for the Lord to "hold tight the onrushing tide." I am proud to say that my friends have sufficient confidence in me to believe that I will "do the right" without Divine interposition. I believe in prayer, in its efficacy. But I recall that our Lord himself rebuked those who prayed in public and on the street corners, and if they had prayed in those days through the newspapers, he would doubtless have rebuked that also. He said they were hypocrites who prayed that "they may be seen of men," but urged them to pray in secret, which seems to me to be the proper place for prayer. I anticipate that the "onrushing tide" which Mr. Edwards' friend asks the Lord to "hold tight" will submerge our friend, and that his prayer will not be answered in this respect. The Lord held back the waters for Moses, but we have no assurance that Mr. Edwards' poetic friend is an other Moses. A great Dane, King no address at any school except upon invitation. I have never intruded upon any school. The trustees where I have spoken will verify this statement. The treatment I have received from Bulloch county people has been uniformly courteous. None of them have ever been misled as to the character of the address I was to make.

My opponent is hard-driven when he charges me with denouncing bankers and country weeklies. Some of the warmest friends I have are country bankers and weekly newspapers. Some of the newspapers are against me. They have a right to be, and I shall not denounce them for choosing the candidate they will support. Certain banking interests in Savannah seem to have selected banks in the country who owed them money upon which to bring pressure to support Mr. J. W. Edwards. For this, I did criticize them. A man should vote his honest convictions without having his creditors force undue pressure upon him. I am indeed thankful that the country bankers in the First district are mainly enough to resent this kind of interference and to refuse to take dictation from corporate interests as to how they shall vote or as to whom they shall support.

They would have you believe I have lost my temper. This is amusing in the extreme. The only man who seems to have got "hot up" is Mr. Edwards. He has indulged in unseemly personalities; I have not. He has called me all sorts of names; I have refused to reply in kind. He called me "Railroad Pass Felt," when it was untrue; I do not object to his coming home. But how could he have been sincere in posing as the "man on the job", when he so quickly changes front on realizing the strength of my support, and rushes home to make an active campaign.

Some of Mr. Edwards' friends seem to think I should tie the hands of my loyal supporters who have volunteered to assist me in my campaign. Because one of my friends made an address recently in Bulloch County I am criticized, and yet at the same time two of Mr. Edwards' friends, his brother and a Mr. Kushing, are actively going over the district in an automobile soliciting votes for him. These Edwards' folks are mighty hard to please. They want agree that "what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander."

Because my opponent thought it not good policy a few weeks ago to come home and make public address (though he has now changed his mind and is coming home), they object to my accepting invitations to address the voters at school closings, or, as Mr. Edwards sarcastically called them, "school bustings." I have made other Canute, to rebuke the flattery of his admirers, seated himself upon the sands of the beach and showed that the "onrushing tide" was no respecter of persons, that even the King must move his chair from the rise of the tide. Mr. Edwards will have to come in "out of the wet," it is predicted, for public sentiment has not yet made him even a king in politics.

With feeble denial, in an evasive way, Mr. Edwards says he did not promise "on bended knee" not to run for Congress after his first term. This is only a technical denial. If he will come out squarely, and state in positive terms that he did not promise the Brannen delegates in the famous Brannen-Sheppard deadlocked convention, not to run if one term was given him, I will publish the affidavits of the men who heard him say it, some of the best men in the First District. I challenge him to deny it plainly. He may not have crooked the pregnant hinges of the knee "that thrift might follow fawning", but the delegates who heard him, say that he bubbled over with promises and that there was some fawning done when Mr. Edwards discovered that the Brannen delegates might nominate him, and his brother on the Sheppard delegation would vote for him, and break the deadlock.

In his latest campaign book Mr. Edwards says he does not favor "yankee pensions". Then let him explain why he offered a bill in Congress to increase the pension of a Yankee soldier and Republican, taken a government employee in Savannah receiving $125.00 per month? These are facts, and if Mr. Edwards dare deny them, the proof is ready.

I shall make no grand-stand play through the newspapers by "much praying". I shall not call Mr. Edwards names as he has done me. But I shall continue to submit to the intelligent citizens of the District in as logical a manner as I can the issues of this campaign. Edwards record in Congress, and the reason why I think the country counties should furnish the Congressmen at this time.

"Oliver News." (Sylvania Telephone.) Mrs. F. D. Seckinger, formerly Miss Etta Lanier, of Oliver, daughter of Rev. T. W. Lanier and wife of Prof. F. D. Seckinger, principal of the high school at Milton, died at her home in Milton on Sunday last. Her remains were brought to Oliver and interred in the cemetery here on Monday afternoon. The funeral services were held at the Baptist church and conducted by Mr. Rose, the Methodist minister at Milton. A large number of her Milton friends came down, also Mr. and Mrs. Mallory, her sister, from Athens, relatives and friends Guyton were also present. Mrs. Seckinger was a lovely Christian character, and had many friends in the places she lived, she was a devoted daughter, and her parents looked to her for care and comfort in their old age. Our heart goes out in deepest sympathy to the fond mother, who was her fondest care. She leaves a husband and sisters and brothers to mourn her loss, and look forward to a happy meeting again some day, where sickness and suffering are unknown. Prof. Seckinger, with Mrs. Seckinger as assistant, had charge of the Statesboro school a few years ago, and made many friends, who will sympathize deeply with Mr. Seckinger in his bereavement.

Other Speakers Overshadowed Overstreet

Politics are queer things. Certain able gentlemen of the Sylvania and Statesboro bar thought they were doing Mr. Overstreet a kindness by making speeches for him. Col. A. B. Lovett, a brother-in-law of Mr. Overstreet, came to Bulloch, and in company with Mr. Fred Lanier, of Overstreet, made a speech in the interest of Mr. Overstreet. The speeches were fine. The people find no fault with the speeches, but they say these fellows make so much better speeches than Overstreet has been making that they are convinced there are many more able men in the district than Mr. Overstreet, and that when a change is made it should be for an able man. These gentlemen seem to have so overshadowed their candidate that it has practically put him out of business. Then, too, these speeches gave credit to the rumor that there is a "deal" on among certain Statesboro and Sylvania lawyers.

Edwards' Tide Rising. What Will the Opposition do?

That the Edwards' tide is on the up-grade has been apparent to everybody who knows anything about politics, for several days. The opposition began with "heroic remedies" to try to stem the tide but the thing reacted upon them. It was immediately and openly talked that the Statesboro politicians of the Statesboro Bar were trying to "deliver" the people of Bulloch, hand and foot, through some deal with certain Sylvania politicians. Just how much truth there is in it we do not know. At any rate the people resent such a scheme and it will certainly do Mr. Overstreet great harm. It has literally wiped out what little chance he may have had in this county. On the heel of this appears Mr. Edwards' able political pamphlet. The question now is "What can we do?" This leads us to ask "what next?" If the opposition to Edwards undertakes any "lower cuts," or "beneath the belt" tactics, the "jig" is up for them for the people won't stand for it.

It looks to us that the people want Edwards again, and it is an uphill fight against the will of the great mass of the people, especially the farmers, to try to defeat Edwards this time. In our opinion Mr. Overstreet has made two great mistakes: (1) He has entered at the wrong time. There is no sentiment for a change. (2) He has gotten in on an issue that is too narrow for the prejudice of "Country Against the City" has long since ceased to exist except with a few selfish politicians and a few folks who are "agin the Government, right or wrong." Looks like a "landslide" has set in for Edwards and there can be no doubt about the result. H. J. W.

BIG CHAUTAUQUA OPENS NEXT WEEK

JUNE 26th TO JULY 2nd, INCLUSIVE

People of Statesboro and Bulloch County have good things in store for them. Particulars covering different attractions as follows:

Avon Sketch Club and Glenn Wells

We confidently believe that the Avon Sketch Club will prove to be one of the most popular of the many splendid attractions which we are presenting on our Chautauqua program this year. The Club includes four beautiful young lady artists and Glenn Wells, one of the most popular entertainers on the chautauqua platform, who have seen several years experience in both lyceum and chautauqua work. Their program includes songs, readings, sketches, playlets and piano monologues by Mr. Wells. Not least on their program will be the four young ladies in banjo songs, while the playlet, "How The Vote Was won," in which all participate, will certainly strike ten. Their program is in every way an artistic presentation of original ideas in thorough keeping with lyceum ideals.

Mrs. LaSalle Corbell Pickett.

Among the noted women of the South, no name is dearer to the public today than that of LaSalle Corbell Pickett, widow of the renowned Confederate General, who led the greatest infantry charge in all the annals of war. For many years Mrs. Pickett has been a celebrated writer, and has gained enviable distinction upon the platform. Mrs. Pickett is a woman of exceptional beauty, rare dignity and distinguished presence, and has a voice of wonderful carrying power, so that she is easily heard in the largest auditoriums. Her lectures, "The Battle of Gettysburg," "Negro Folk-Lore—Stories of the Old South" and "Friends of Yesterday," are so very accurate and true to life, and her delivery so splendidly fascinating, that she never fails to create both enthusiasm and admiration. Alkalist chautauqua patrons will be glad to do honor to this splendid woman, the widow of the late Gen. George G. Pickett.

The Hawkeye Glee Club.

Who does not enjoy the music of a good quartette? No other form of concert and entertainment program is more popular in this country, and the Hawkeye Glee Club plays and sings to please. We toured the Hawkeye Glee Club during the fall months, and they gave perfect satisfaction to our patrons; consequently, it is no experiment but with pride that we present them to our chautauqua patrons. Their program includes both vocal and instrumental selections of merit and attractiveness, and there is no kind of doubt but what they will prove popular, indeed.

Dr. H. W. Sears.

The Alkalist presents a certain success when it includes Dr. Sears on its chautauqua program. Dr. Sears, who is popularly known as "Fifty Sears," has been under Alkalist direction before. There is no more popular humorist lecturer before the public. His return dates are numerous. The people are always glad to hear him, for he never grows old. He is inimitable, and any chautauqua program is richer when he is included. His lectures sparkle with wit, his word pictures are beautiful, his logic sound, his eloquence soul-stirring. You have not heard the best until you have heard him. The memory of his visit will linger. "More Tally and Less Epitaphy" is a good subject. This lecture is even better. The "opening day" of the chautauqua will be rich in the memory of Sears.

They are Watching

Every young man in this town is being watched by business men. They have good jobs waiting for the right kind of men. They may not tell you so, but they are watching to see if you are the man they want. They watch to see if you pay your bills promptly, if you are careful about meeting all your obligations, if you are competent, trustworthy and have a bank account. Why a bank account? Because it shows that you are saving. Nobody wants to give a spendthrift a position of trust. We invite young men to become depositors.

Will Not Run for Representative

The undersigned takes this method of thanking his many friends throughout the county for their kind offers of support in a contemplated race for representative in the Georgia legislature. Some time ago I announced that it might be probable that I might be in the race, but since then my business affairs have shaped up so that it would be impossible for me to make a canvass of the county. The work of constructing the buildings, putting the grounds in shape and organizing the First Georgia District Fair to be held in Savannah this fall is now taking every minute of time I have to spare. Again we have two candidates in the field already in the race from Statesboro which is quite a sufficient number for this town to furnish. In justice to the two gentlemen referred to I will say that their friends have repeatedly given me the assurance that if I would announce they would support me and that I would perhaps have been the only man in the race from Statesboro.

I have some decided opinions on certain questions which I have advocated through these columns and had I made the race and been elected I would have done my best to have them enacted into law. I am sure, however, that of the three gentlemen now in the race the people will find able men, and men who will look after their interests in Atlanta. I believe that I have had at least five hundred men who didn't vote for me in the last race to tender me their support if I should run this time, but for the reasons stated above, it is best that I remain a "high private" as far as the race for representative is concerned. Again thanking the people for their kind offers of support, I am

Yours very truly,
J. R. MILLER.

Big Sales Show That

Advertising Pays.

Statesboro now has in progress two of the largest and most successful merchandise sales that have ever been known in this city. On Thursday of last week Messrs. Trappell-Mikell Co. opened their doors to the public with a big sale of goods. The store was crowded with eager purchasers from the minute the door was opened until the noon hour when there came a heavy downpour of rain which kept back the great crowds during the balance of the afternoon. On Friday their large force of salesladies and salesmen were taxed to their full capacity to wait on the eager throngs of purchasers. On Saturday the crowds grew greater and the record showed at night that nearly one thousand purchasers had entered the store during the day, this being evident by the number of sales tickets on file. The management informs us that the amount of cash business done on Saturday was five hundred dollars greater than that of any other day in the history of their business career. The only other day that approached it at all, even in the five hundred dollar mark, was one day last October during the week of the Bulloch county fair. The big sale is still on and will continue during this and next week.

On Saturday morning the Statesboro Mercantile Company threw open their doors to a large crowd of anxious cash customers with their regular annual clearance sale. During the morning hours the rush was so great that the management was compelled to seek other salesmen and salesladies in order to accommodate the great crowds. The store was jammed all day long and until a late hour at night. Mr. R. Simmons, the head of the company, stated to a News reporter that "this is the biggest day that we have ever had during the long term of years that we have been in business. We thought one or two days during the fair last fall that the people would buy all we had, but on no day during that record breaking week did our cash receipts equal those of today."

Both of these concerns used printers ink freely occupying large space in The Statesboro News, one of which Trappell-Mikell Company carried four pages in one issue, being the largest advertisement that we have ever carried for a single firm in a single issue. Both firms mentioned have large and well selected stocks of goods and enjoy the confidence of the people.

Again, it shows that the free and liberal use of space in this paper brings results.

Death of Mrs. Woods

On Monday at their home at Pulaski, Mrs. D. J. Woods passed away after a long and painful illness, while her death was a great shock to the family and friends. It had been expected for the last week or ten days, and death came as a relief to her great suffering. The remains were taken to Savannah on Tuesday for burial, where the funeral was held. The bereaved husband and family have the sympathy of a large number of friends in their sad loss.

Death of Little Boy

On Saturday last the home of Mr. and Mrs. K. H. Harville near Enit was bereaved by the death of their two year old son. Mr. Harville and family have the sympathy of a large number of friends in their sad loss.

Weather is Sizzling Hot

The past few days have been record breakers in the matter of heat in this section, following fire and general rains the weather man got active on the job and has been handing out some good warm benches during the past few days. The thermometer in Statesboro registering as high as 108 in the shade on yesterday, this is some hot.

Rhodes-Barker.
Two weeks ago The News carried a local item that Mr. O. E. Barker had gone to visit relatives at the old home in South Carolina, but his many friends here had no idea that he contemplated matrimony on the trip. His return to Statesboro reveals the fact that he was for, on the 18th inst. he and Miss Emma Rhodes were united in marriage at Loris, S. C. It was a pleasant surprise to Mr. Barker's parents and friends who heartily extend congratulations.
