RULES GOVERNING PRIMARY

The Democratic Executive Committee Lay Down the Rules for the Primary Next Wednesday, Aug. 19.

Georgia, Bulloch County. To the White Democrats of Bulloch County:

As the primary is only a few days off I wish to call your attention again to the rules adopted by the democratic executive committee of this county, governing the election to be held on the 19th inst.

"No candidate shall be declared the nominee of the democratic party of Bulloch county for any office voted for at said primary, whose name has been submitted before the declaring of the result to the chairman of the executive committee, that he used to influence voters for him, either money or whiskey." "Upon all matters being made that are voted for at said primary, before the declaring of the result, the chairman of the executive committee shall cause not less than 12 hours written notice to be served upon the alleged party, stating the charge, at which time he would have the right to appear and refute said charge. If he can not do so to the satisfaction of the executive committee, the candidate for said office, being the next highest vote, shall be declared the nominee of the democratic party of Bulloch county."

"To the end that the above rules may be carried out, and the use of whiskey and money eliminated from the primaries of this county, we hereby appoint the members of the executive committee of this county, together with three other reputable citizens who shall be selected by them, the special duty of whom shall be to note and report any violation of the above rules in reference to the use of whiskey and money, to the chairman of this committee."

All white democrats shall be entitled to vote at said primary who are registered, provided they do not appear to be intoxicated and are not intoxicated, and the managers are hereby instructed and directed not to permit any voter who is intoxicated to vote, and should an intoxicated person be permitted to vote, the same shall be grounds for contest, if made before the declaring of the result.

The rules and regulations quoted above embody the essential points of the resolutions adopted by a mass meeting held in Statesboro on June 23rd of this year.

We have on file with us a pledge from both candidates for congress as well as from the executive committee of the superior court, that they will not use money or whiskey to influence voters, and that they will not knowingly permit anyone else to do so for them.

almost beggarly description. Strong men, sturdy farmers and merchants, who rarely ever take part in political rallies, almost walked over each other in their efforts to reach the speaker.

The friends of Mr. Edwards do not claim a great outpouring of converts on account of this meeting, for the reason that there were very few subjects here open for convention. What few Overstreet men there were were set in their opinions and beyond reach.

But the great mass of the people present were for Edwards, first, last and all time. They came here for him and went away with their enthusiasm keyed up to a high pitch. A close estimate of the crowd would be two thousand voters, about eighteen hundred of whom were for Edwards.

One of the prominent lady visitors to the rally who was present at the speaking was Mrs. Chas. G. Edwards, wife of the present popular Congressman.

Speer's Election Is Fully Assured

Having his claims for re-election solidly upon the record he has made in office and the service he has given Georgia, State Treasurer W. J. Speer is deeply gratified over the widespread favorable press comment and the record of the campaign practically every Georgia county indicating that his election is now fully assured.

Mr. Speer, though proud of his record as a Confederate veteran, is making no claim to election upon that score, but simply upon service rendered. Many Confederate veterans have assured him of hearty support. The Newnan Herald and Advertiser recently said of him:

"We have on file with us a pledge from both candidates for congress as well as from the executive committee of the superior court, that they will not use money or whiskey to influence voters, and that they will not knowingly permit anyone else to do so for them."

A VOTE FOR Randolph Anderson IS A VOTE FOR Progressive Georgia

Shall Georgia Go Forward or Backward?

It will depend largely on the governor you elect—whether you choose a man nearly 70 and not in touch with Georgia's affairs, or a man young, active, energetic and progressive, who has served the state ten years and has worked his way to its next to highest position—President of the State Senate.

RANDOLPH ANDERSON has studied and KNOWS GEORGIA'S NEEDS. He is the only candidate who has offered the state a strong, progressive platform.

South Georgia has not had a governor in more than three-quarters of a century. It is conceded all over the State that South Georgia is entitled to the governorship this time.

Vote for Georgia's progress and upbuilding by voting for

NASH R. BROYLES A WINNER One Of His Opponents, Alex W. Stephens, Endorsed A Negro For Admission To The Bar.

JUDGE Nash R. Broyles, one of Atlanta's best known lawyers, is going to win his race for the state court of appeals by an overwhelming majority, BECAUSE:

1.—He stands for the impartial enforcement of all laws.

2.—He is opposed to those trivial TECHNICALITIES which are employed to defeat the ends of justice.

3.—He gave two years ago for the sake of party harmony to Judge J. R. Pottle after tying with him in the primary.

4.—He is better qualified for the position than either of his two opponents. Although all three candidates live in Atlanta, Judge Broyles is endorsed and supported by 90 per cent. of his home lawyers, who best know the respective merits of each in the race. He is also supported by such eminent Georgia lawyers as Judge Andrew J. Cobb of Atlanta, Judge W. E. Thomas of Valdosta, Judge John S. Candler of Atlanta, Judge Joel Brumham of Rome, Hon. Henry Goetz of Columbus, Judge George Hilger of Atlanta, Judge U. W. Whipple of Vienna and hundreds of other distinguished lawyers throughout the state.

5.—Alex W. Stephens, one of his opponents, has been defeated through the efforts of those who best know his merits and abilities—his home lawyers and his home people—for justice of the peace, for the legislature, for solicitor of the city court and for several other offices. He has never been elected by his home people to any office, while Judge Broyles has never been defeated by them.

6.—Mr. Stephens, several years ago, endorsed and recommended a NEGRO for admission to the bar. Mr. Stephens may not object to NEGRO lawyers cross-questioning white witnesses—perhaps white women—but Judge Broyles does, and he would never endorse a NEGRO for admission to the bar. Let the people of Georgia say on August 19 how they stand on this question.

Nash R. Broyles

"We are as willing for him to serve us now as we were when he, as a Confederate soldier, took up his gun, went to the front, and bared his life for the country, in defense of our property and our homes."

What Georgia papers say of him: "Has a record combined with experience—an equipment that appeals to the voters."—Macon Telegraph.

"His administration of the State's finances has always been most honest and businesslike."—Henry County Weekly.

"His record is without a blemish."—North Georgia Citizen, Dalton.

"Mr. Speer has filled the state treasurer's office most faithfully and efficiently."—Griffin News and Sun.

"His management of the office has been perfectly satisfactory and we see no use for a change."—The Nugget, Dalton.

"He has always shown a clear record. He will, no doubt, be re-elected by a large majority."—Savannah Georgian.

"He has made one of the most satisfactory factory officials the state has ever had."—Enterprise-Gazette, Senoia.

"An able, capable and faithful custodian of the state's finances."—Monitor, Danville.

"He stands on his past record—a record that is hard to beat."—Wiregrass Farmer, Ashburn.

"The people know that the state's strong box could not be in safer hands."—Newnan Herald and Advertiser.

"Thousands of friends all over the state will be glad to assist in his re-election."—Forest Blade, Swainsboro.

"His service has proven satisfactory and the people will very likely vote to have him returned."—Wrightsville Headlight.

In addition to the foregoing, the special legislative committee—Senator John T. Allen and Representatives Akin of Glynn and Wheatley of Sumter—officially reported, after examining his office, that his books were well kept and every dollar was accounted for.

The Macon and Atlanta clearing houses have both strongly endorsed him for re-election. The Macon Clearing House, through Secretary John M. Ross, has said to the voters of Georgia:

"It gives us pleasure to endorse the past record of John W. J. Speer, state treasurer. He has made a faithful and efficient officer. We believe it to be to the interest of the state to keep Mr. Speer in his present position."

Mrs. Clayton Donaldson has been quite sick with fever at her home near Blitch, but was improving at last accounts.

Let This I H C Engine Do Your Work

NINE years ago I H C engines first appeared on the market. Men who bought them at that time report them still doing an honest day's work. They are always ready to run, they have more power than you pay for, and they develop that power on very little fuel.

When you buy an I H C engine, it is set up and tested on your farm by experts. If anything happens to it any time, we have repair parts right here. The longer life and lesser cost per hour of I H C engines makes them cost far less per year of service than inferior engines. That's why we sell I H C engines.

Sizes 1 to 60 H. P., in stationary, portable, and tractor styles. Fuel—kerosene or gasoline. Come in and see our samples and list of references, or write for catalogue and prices.

MONTÉ CARLO'S EORMOUS PROFITS

THE official statement, issued after the recent annual general meeting of the "Société des Bains de Mer de Monaco," showed that the net profits for the working year 1913-14 amounted to $1,096,729.53, an increase of $220,000 over the net profits for 1912-13. This handsome profit is not by any means made out of the bathing establishment on the sea front under the shadow of the rock of Monaco, and which, by an amusing piece of fiction, is supposed to constitute the reason for the company's existence. Indeed, though I have been to Monaco a good many times, and once lived there for four months, I never discovered any foreign visitor who went to the sea-bathing establishment to take his bath, and as for the natives, well, the minority who do occasionally take a bath are invariably provided with free admission cards, says a writer in the New York Times.

The profits which enable the Monaco Sea Baths company to pay substantial dividends are exclusively derived from the Casino, or clubhouse which belongs to the company, and which is erected on the adjoining promontory of Monte Carlo. Pursuing the pleasant fiction which gives the company its name, it may be pointed out that when erecting the bathhouse half a century ago, the directors, in their wisdom, came to the conclusion that a physical reaction generally occurred in the bath, and that it would be well to provide possible bathers with some form of mild excitement which, while stimulating the nerve centers, would not raise the temperature unduly. Prompted by such a praiseworthy motive, the directors obtained permission from the then reigning sovereign of the little principality—namely, Prince Charles III—to build a "house of recreation" in which a number of games should be installed, and especially a game known as "roulette."

I have heard it stated, but cannot, of course, guarantee the truth of the story, that the late M. Blanc called upon the prince and showed his highness the little cylinder or wheel, with its red and black "spokes" and its numbered edge, and explained the working of the game of roulette. Prince Charles III, who had received a Christian training, looked distressed.

"Dear me," he is reported to have said, "I am afraid this seems very much like gambling," but the bishop of Monaco, who had had some previous conversation with M. Blanc, and who was present at the interview, intervened opportunely. The right reverend gentleman suggested to the prince that it seemed to him, judging from M. Blanc's explanations, to be "rather a scientific form of propounding, in a recreative manner, the interesting theory as to the laws which govern chance."

The prince, who was probably less innocent on the subject than his bishop, asked no better than to be convinced, especially as he was to receive a very substantial annuity in return for the concession. So, on May 13, 1858, the foundation stone of the Casino was laid, and the bishop attended and read prayers for its success.

Monte Carlo at that time was a very different sort of place to that which now exists. Certainly it enjoyed a beautiful climate and the sunshine was perpetual, but there were no roads, no palm trees, no hotels and no flower gardens. The few tumble-down huts, that existed on the hillside were fuller of crime and gambling than the little pocket handkerchief principality was so poor that a tax on bread had been established, and the inhabitants were in the proverbial condition of the patient Job. Of course, a railroad had never been heard of in these parts; communication was by steamboat or by an old-fashioned coach once a day from Nice.

Without losing his way over Homburg, which was then the queen of gambling resorts, M. Blanc set out to transform Monte Carlo into a sort of earthly paradise, not forgetting Eve and the serpent. Into this place poor Adam has wandered ever since, only to leave it, most of the time, in the same denuded condition as his first ancestor left the Garden of Eden.

The native-born inhabitants of the principality have every reason, on the other hand, to bless the advent of the Casino; they pay no taxes of any kind and live in a sort of land of milk and honey. All the cost of upkeep, of course, is borne by the money he leaves on the green cloth tables at the Casino. As a sort of act of atonement, a fine cathedral church has been built on the rock at Monaco, but anybody who professes

PROMOTE A CLEAR SKIN

HEAVY, SHORT ROAD ROLLER

Useful Improvement May Be Constructed by Using Worn-Out Mowing Machine and Concrete.

Perhaps you have a grader of some sort, a road roller, but you need a heavy short roller. They cost too much to buy, so make one this way. Procure an old worn-out mowing machine, any make, writes W. A. Dillon in Farmers' Mail and Breeze. Take off or break off all the parts that stick out past the wheels. Smooth off a bit of hard ground, now dig a small sole just large enough for the hub. Set the machine up on one end, put a jacket of galvanized sheet iron around the wheels, secure it at short intervals with small stove bolts and make it fit neat and straight. Now fill the jacket with the best fine concrete. Tamp it well and allow it to stand until the concrete is well set. Remove the jacket; keep the roller shaded and spray it for eight or ten days.

Have the blacksmith put an iron frame on this roller. Heavy tire iron will do, using the hubs for spindles. When a strong young is added, you will have as good a roller as anybody; one that will last a life time and will cost but little. Save the jacket to make more rollers with.

When your roller is graded run the roller down the center, instead of on the sides, as now. Take two disk harrows the same number of disks and if possible the same kind. Turn the disk on the harrows so they will throw the dirt toward each other when placed side by side. Now set them close together side by side in the middle of the road to be worked. Take a light log chain and fasten the harrows together. Put a team on each harrow and drive down the road to be worked. Turn around; let out the chain a couple of feet; go back. Repeat the operation a number of times. You would be surprised how much dirt the disk harrow will cut up, and how much it will move toward the center. Finish with drag or grader. Then roll the center and you will have a good road at small cost.

We have organized a country club here and given each member a piece of road to drag, near his home. We elected a drag boss so when it is just right to drag the boss calls all the members and in about two hours we have all the roads in the district dragged. We have had very bad weather ever since organizing, but the plan appears to work well.

fortune of Homburg was made, as well as that of the Messrs. Blanc. One of the brothers died and the family fortune tenfold when he made a success of Monte Carlo, which has become the "Hottest place" of roulette, banished as it has been from all other parts of Europe.

M. Camille Blanc gave his daughter in marriage to Prince Roland Bonaparte, with a substantial dowry, and his grandnephew is married to H. R. Prince George of Greece, a cousin to the king of England. It is impossible to say what M. Camille Blanc's private fortune amounts to, but it has been variously estimated at between $50,000,000 and $75,000,000.

The principality of Monaco has had its fair share of the extraordinary prosperity brought to the place by the gold left by gamblers from all parts of Europe and America. Fifty years ago the principality was a small, poor, and insignificant place, and the buildings in the principality—exclusive of the prince's domain and government property—were 27,000,000 francs, or $45,400,000.

There is a mild "Uttland" question in Monaco, for the 1911 census showed that out of a total resident population of 19,121 persons no less than 17,529 were foreigners and 1,482 Monaguasques. Even in this small number all were not genuine Monaguasques, the inhabitants of native-born stock belonging to native families who have lived in the principality for at least two generations only numbering 535, the others being naturalized subjects.

Roulette was banished from France in 1837, from England in 1853, from Germany in 1872, and from Belgium within quite recent years. It is making its last stand in Europe at Monaco, which, as everybody knows, is an independent and sovereign state, about as large as an English country parish.

The company has a concession which expires in 1947, and until that time it can only be dissolved by the payment of such a formidable indemnity that no reigning prince, even if so minded, would venture to repudiate the concession. Perhaps by that time the powers will have brought pressure to bear to end the career of Monte Carlo as the gaming house of Europe, but meanwhile it must be admitted that few investments have brought such profit to their shareholders as has the Société des Bains de Mer de Monaco.

Gambling is one of the strongest passions of human nature, and so long as it is openly catered to in one of its most repressed and, therefore, most enticing forms as at Monte Carlo, so long will it make fortunes for the caterers.

It has been estimated that an average of something like $100,000 in hard cash falls on the green tables daily throughout the year, and not a son passes that one does not meet with hundreds of people who have come to Monte Carlo to attempt the impossible, namely, to score a fortune at the table.

This year the dividend was raised from 335 francs per share to 350 francs. The share, the nominal value of which is 500 francs, or $100, is now quoted on the Paris Bourse at $500 francs.

Roulette made the fortune of the Blanc family, who are now multimillionaires, while at Monte Carlo, and, indeed, throughout the little principality, M. Camille Blanc is only second in importance to the prince.

In notes two machines and a few hundred pounds on the subject the Brothers Blanc applied to the prime minister for permission to start operations in one of the rooms at the hotel.

The following year, 1843, the Brothers Blanc obtained from the landgrave of Hesse-Homburg the exclusive right to carry on public games of chance in his dominion, for which they agreed to pay the sum of $2,300 per annum, and under every kind, as paid for by the landgrave, by the public, of the money he leaves on the green cloth tables at the Casino. As a sort of act of atonement, a fine cathedral church has been built on the rock at Monaco, but anybody who professes

Make the Liver Do Its Duty

Nine times in ten when the liver is right the stomach and bowels are right. CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS gently but surely get the liver to work. Put a team on each harrow and drive down the road to be worked. Turn around; let out the chain a couple of feet; go back. Repeat the operation a number of times. You would be surprised how much dirt the disk harrow will cut up, and how much it will move toward the center. Finish with drag or grader. Then roll the center and you will have a good road at small cost.

THE MISSING WILL

By FRANK FILON.

"Mary," said Tom Halloran, "Mr. Ames is going to foreclose the mortgage on that five acre field." This message from the dead—she did not want to read those letters that danced before her eyes. She was still standing with the will in her hand when Tom came in.

"What is it, dear?" he asked, seeing her distress. Mary Halloran put the paper behind her.

"Tom," she said, "you know Mr. Ames meant to leave all his property to me, and how John Ames got it. The will was never found. But I have found it. It was in the secret drawer in that cabinet."

"I don't want to claim it. I don't want Mr. Ames to know. Tom, he paid a price for the property, the price of honor and self-respect. Many a night he must have lain awake, meditating over his bargain. The property is the only recompense he had. And I want him to keep it, Tom."

"You don't want the property, Mary?"

"No, Tom. That is why I am going to throw the will into the fire unread."

"But, Mary! It's yours—ours. Think of the boys. We must be just to them. The secondhand has had it all these years. My dear, you must—"

"I won't, Tom, I won't," she cried. "You don't understand." She flung the paper into the open fire; it scorched against the coals and fluttered, unburned, beneath the grate. But Mary had run out of the room, her eyes blinded with tears of shame.

She was thinking that she had been more than recompensed in Tom. But for the will's loss she would never have known the treachery in John Ames' heart.

Tom Halloran stooped down and picked the will out of the grate and began to read. The verbiage was difficult, but there was one sentence that stood out unambiguously:

"To my half-brother, John Ames, all that I possess, both real and personal estate, in the conviction that he will make a good husband for my adopted daughter, Mary."

Slowly Tom watched the paper burn in the fire. And, though the full meaning of Mary's wish did not come home to him, something told him that he must never let her know Ames was the rightful owner of the Newell estate.

In This Climate No Home Can Afford to Be Without French Market Coffee!

In the coffee growing countries, good coffee, roasted like French Market Coffee, is regarded as a necessity—a healthful stimulant to aid digestion. Hot climates create a desire for stimulants, and the one great healthful, stimulating drink is coffee—not the ordinary roasts of coffee, but the rich roasts which contain no heavy oils and though superbly stimulating, will not irritate the most tender stomach.

You will find coffee like French Market Coffee served in Paris, Vienna, Rio de Janeiro, Bogota and Mexico, but in none of these cities will you find coffee like the ordinary American roasts.

Think what it means to be able to secure the genuine French Market Coffee at your grocer's.

At an English provincial theater not long since the curtain rose on an empty stage in the second act of a play, and by and by a meek-looking young man with a dust-coat slung over his arm came on and loudly called, "Tack! tack!"

According to the book of the play he should have received no answer to his call, and after an appropriate pause should have gone on with a monologue, but a graceless "god" in the gallery took upon himself to answer the actor.

"All right, I'm coming in a moment. How much do you want on it?" he shouted.

The effect on the audience may be imagined.

Picture of "Hollering Jones" at Favorite Diversion Caused Him to Reform.

A well-known illustrator, who makes interesting western pictures, once made the acquaintance of a noisy but good-natured cowboy who rejoiced in the appellation of "Hollering Jones."

In physical appearance this man was typical of his kind, and the artist made several studies of him, both in repose and in his favorite diversion of "hollering." Some of the studies were sold by the artist to an eastern magazine. They showed Jones in his most violent state.

A year later the artist again visited the region. He was soon approached by Mr. Jones himself, bearing one of the pictures, which he had torn from the magazine in which it was printed. Pointing to it, he asked:

"Is that me?"

"Well," replied the artist, evasively, "I got the general idea from you, of course, but—"

"Oh, I ain't takin' no offense," Jones made haste to say. "It's all right; only if it's me, say so."

"If you're not to me that way," said the artist, "I can only reply that it is a fairly good portrait of you."

"The men here on the ranch agree with you. They look like that when I holler, do they?"

"I think you do."

"In that case," said Hollering Jones, "all I've got to say is that Hollering Jones has hollered his last holler. Hereafter, when I celebrate, I do so with a holler. In my own opinion, so many men have a right to look like that—not round white folks, anyhow."

THE EUROPEAN STRUGGLE

The Greatest Battle in the History of the World Now in Progress.

The war in Europe, embracing nearly every country, has taken an active start in what is to be the greatest battle in the history of the world. It is a struggle between France, England and Belgium on one side and Germany on the other. It is a struggle for the world. It is a struggle for the future. It is a struggle for the present. It is a struggle for the past. It is a struggle for the future. It is a struggle for the present. It is a struggle for the past.

The Germans sought, as in 1870 to rush the fight to the gates of Paris and overthrow their old enemy, France, before they could prepare, but the unexpected resistance of Belgium to the invasion of her territory by the German army gave the allies time to unite and now she has the allied forces of the three countries to contend with. The numerical strength of the contending armies is about equal and good generalship will do much to decide the fate of the battle. That it will be desperate and sanguinary goes without saying, and so far as will be the fighting, no man could predict the outcome.

The Belgians have Antwerp, near which city the fight is taking, fortified almost impregnable, and the French have old scores to settle with Germany for their defeat in 1870 and the English have not gone into the struggle half heartedly, so, before many days have ended, it is not surprising if the world is appalled at the immense loss of life on both sides.

Summed up briefly, the whole situation is about as follows: A half-crazy fellow in Serbia killed the crown prince of Austria and his wife. Austria declared war on Serbia and Germany took sides with Austria. Russia took sides with Serbia and France joined Russia. The Germans at once started the invasion of France by way of Belgium, who appealed to England to protect her neutrality, and thus drew England into the conflict, so that nearly all of Europe is in arms and the outcome, which will change the map of Europe, is awaited with much anxiety by the whole world.

Japan Enters the Fight
With a declaration of war on the part of Japan against Germany it means that another great and powerful nation has added its forces to the struggle between nations, the greatest war in the world's history. All the fighting nations are leveling their guns at Germany and Austria, and one would think it would be a short lived war were it not for the fact that we all know that the Southern Confederacy, with no government that any nation on the face of the earth would recognize, fought the whole civilized world a bloody war for four long years. Germany has a land force not equaled on the face of the globe, and she will be felt before she is whipped. Many a bloody corpse will pay the penalty of this war before it is over. The fighting is not so regular or so furious as it was at the beginning of the struggle. It shows that all concerned are backing off and making active preparations for a long war.

SOME FACTS

Relative to the Effects of the European War on Our Country. Taken from the Manufacturer's Record of August 6th.

The European nations will be forced, by need of food stuff to prevent starvation, to bring the war to an early ending, even if the terrific armament of the various nations engaged did not themselves accomplish that. In the meantime the temporary difficulties which confront the handling of grain and the doing of general business, may be largely overcome by concerted action on the part of the people of this country, to our own great good.

If our people become so absorbed in thinking about the situation in Europe as to put aside from day to day the things they had intended to do in a business way, the improvements that they had been expecting to make, the purchases they fully intended to consummate, they will, to that extent, intensify the general situation and lessen the business activities of the whole country.

It is the supreme duty of every man at the present time to put forth increased energy for the conducting of his own business, and for assisting and carrying forward the broad work of the business activities of his own country in order that the products of the farm may find a profitable market, and the output of factories be not curtailed. Our country is in magnificent shape to meet the conditions without excitement, without any fear as to the future, but with an abiding faith in its own ability. This is no time for the pessimist to raise his voice.

If, in an altruistic spirit, the countries of Europe had desired to bring about the largest possible development of this country; if they had desired to transfer the seat of the empire of commerce and finance and industry to the United States, they could not in any other way have accomplished it so effectively as they are doing, for they will bring about these results by their own decisions.

Nature has so marvelously endowed this country with almost limitless resources for material development, that we have here the foundation on which to build a manufacturing structure far greater than that of all Europe.

We have an area capable of supporting a population larger than that of Europe.

We have the raw materials with which to keep these people busy in industrial activities and the land on which to produce the food stuff.

Here are resources sufficiently great and diversified to provide employment for hundreds and millions, and here, too, are the resources for feeding and for clothing them.

The combination of advantages is nowhere else matched on earth. Nothing else like it is known to mankind.

Written in Memory of Henry Holland.

On the 2nd day of June, 1914, the death angel came for the spirit of our brother and friend, Mr. Henry Holland.

Mr. Holland was born May 17, 1872, being sick only fourteen days. He bore his afflictions with patience and never murmured. He was a man that always tried to do right. He will be missed as a husband and as a father, as a son and as a brother and neighbor. We have lived near him for twelve years. He was always ready to do a favor for anybody that asked him—we never knew him to deny anyone. He was a faithful churchgoer though he never had confessed Christ to the world and followed Him in His baptism; but by the fruits of his life and the close acquaintance we had with him, we have a hope of him being a child of God. We all know the tree by the fruit it bears and not by name, therefore we knew him to be a Christian by the fruits of his life. Now, since God has called out his beloved brother to join the heavenly hosts, therefore, be it

Resolved, That we commend the bereaved loved ones to their Savior. He has fought faithfully and has laid down life's burdens for the glories of life eternal, and when your battle has been fought and the call comes to lay down your armor, you all can join him in that home prepared for God's children, eternal in the heavens. He was a devoted husband and a loving father in his home. He leaves behind a bereaved wife and ten children, father, mother, brothers and sisters and a host of relatives to mourn his departure.

Now, bereaved family, we know that God makes no mistakes, so let us be reconciled to His will. He doeth all things well.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Tillman.

The South's Opportunity.

"Atlanta is five hundred miles nearer New York than Omaha, and cattle can be shipped from the south by water as well as by rail. Why, after all, should we be looking so hungrily at Argentina, overlooking the cattle nearer possibilities of the great south, which has only begun to develop."

This from the New York Mail is another reminder, among hundreds continually arising, that Georgia and its neighboring states are singularly rich in opportunities for beef production. More and more the population east is turning to the south as a future source of food supply. It only remains for the south to grasp and utilize the rare advantage which observant people everywhere perceive.

The Mail interestingly remarks in this connection that "if nature, in a generous mood, were to offer America a land of two hundred and sixty-four million acres in which cattle could be pastured from early March to late November, Uncle Sam would throw up his hat with joy, finding the beef problem. Yet America has such a region with less than a third of its area in improved farm land, with a population varying from fourteen to fifty seven to the square mile, with room to raise enough beef to supply the whole United States." The nine southeastern states comprise that region. Their climate and soil are admirably suited to the raising of live stock, especially cattle. In Georgia there are thousands of idle acres which can be bought cheaply and turned to highly profitable use as cattle ranges. Indeed, opportunity abounds. The people of the South should no longer delay its utilization.—Atlanta Journal.

ROWE MAY BE CHAIRMAN

Convention Will be One of the Most Important Ever Held in Georgia.

Atlanta, Ga., August 21.—General interest now centers on the state convention to be held in the auditorium in Macon on Tuesday, September 1st.

Spectacular interest enters into this convention because of the fight to be enacted there over the short term senatorship. It is expected that it will be one of the largest conventions, in point of attendance and general interest, of many years, and hotel accommodations are bound to be strained; particularly if the convention continues more than one day, which is not improbable.

It is the very general belief that Hugh Rowe, of Athens, will be named permanent chairman of the convention, and that he will have to hold the reins over a more or less stormy and turbulent session.

Mr. Rowe, editor of the Athens Banner and is vice chairman of the state executive committee, and as acting chairman will call the convention to order. This bureau forecast his probable selection weeks before the primary, and talk here now all centers around him. He is well equipped for the place, and would handle such a convention ably, impartially and fairly.

The convention will elect an entirely new state legislative executive committee. These selections are all ways made by congressional district caucuses prior to the opening of the convention, and the election there afterwards is largely perfunctory.

There is also some speculation as to the secretaryship of the convention, but Hardy Um possibly will be the choice, for his experience and the fact that he is secretary of the state committee now.

Constitutional all over the state are busy selecting their delegates now, choice of course being from among friends of the successful gubernatorial candidate in each county.

Fulton's delegates, of course, were named from among friends of Judge Harris and are, as follows: St. Elmo Massengale, Albert D. Thomson, Chas. H. Mason, R. A. Broyles, Aldine Chambers and E. T. Williams. Alternates: Marcellus Anderson, John S. Cohen, George M. Pope, Ivan E. Allen, John A. Rynd, E. K. Pomeroy.

Organization of the state convention will be quickly effected, the preliminaries will soon be out of the way, then will come the duel for the short term senatorship.

Williamson, W. Va., Aug. 22.—"Here's a license I got in this court twenty four years ago, and as I don't seem to have a chance to use it, I thought I'd bring it back and get the money I paid for it."

This spoke Alexander Chernoff, a stoney mountaineer to the clerk that he was up the marriage papers.

"You see," he said, "me and my girl, Euphemia always wanted to be married, but she was so contrary that she never was ready to have the parson tie the knot when I was. About once a year I'd pop the question and she'd always answer 'Yes.' But when I would ask her when we'd visit the parson she'd put me off."

"After twenty-four years I got tired and told her either we would get married or we wouldn't. Euphemia said we wouldn't; so I suppose we won't."

Let This I H C Engine Do Your Work

NINE years ago I H C engines first appeared on the market. Men who bought them at that time report them still doing an honest day's work. They are always ready to run, they have more power than you pay for, and they develop that power on very little fuel.

When you buy an I H C engine, it is set up and tested on your farm by experts. If anything happens to it any time, we have repair parts right here. The longer life and lesser up-keep expense of I H C engines makes them cost far less per year of service than inferior engines. That's why we sell I H C engines.

Size 1 to 60-H. P., in stationary, portable, and tractor styles. Fuel—kerosene or gasoline. Come in and see our samples and list of references, or write for catalogue and prices.

Advantages of a Checking Account.

Do you know that 90 per cent of commercial transactions are made without the exchange of actual cash? This for the two great reasons—Safety and Efficiency. And these two reasons apply as well to the modest business as to the big Wall street operations. When you give your check you do not waste one moment counting money.

Of greater importance is the fact that your check automatically gives you a receipt.

Wreck on Central

As the train was leaving Savannah at 2 o'clock for its run to Augusta, when nearly a mile from the depot, was wrecked and several of the passengers were pretty badly bruised, and some sustained severe injuries, though none were killed. When nearly a mile from the depot the train struck a defective switch gap, the engine and mail and express car passed over safely, but the last coach was derailed and dragged the two forward passenger coaches off the track, and they rolled down the embankment. The seventy one passengers on board were badly shaken up, and some of them sustained painful but not very serious wounds. Among the wounded is Mr. J. Z. Kendrick, who is injured about the left shoulder.

Mr. W. B. Moore, auditor of the Savannah & Statesboro Railway, was on the train, but fortunately was uninjured.

The track was cleared so that the train for Dublin passed through Statesboro at about 7 o'clock—only two hours late.

Misses Jessie Olliff and Katherine Parrish and J. J. Zetterower were also on the train but escaped injury.

Cotton at Low Ebb.
With what is only a makeshift of a cotton market at six and three-quarter and seven cents per pound. This is just about half what the price would have been had the war not come. Negro cotton hands are taking advantage of the large amount of open cotton and in many places striking for sixty and sixty-five cents per hundred. The chances are they'll get it and even more if they demand it. The farmers seem to have no better judgment than to be held up in that way.

Ginners Notice
The undersigned having leased the large ginney from Mr. T. H. Waters at W. Watersville, on the Shearwood Railway takes this method of announcing that he is prepared to take care of the wants of the people in the way of cotton ginning. Well equipped ginney and prepared to do the best work in the shortest order. By the end of next week I expect to have a first class ginnery mill running for the benefit of my customers and will put in a saw mill in a short time. A share of the patronage of the public will be appreciated.

Respectfully,

SLATON TO RUN IN FOUR YEARS

Friends of Slaton Virtually Put Him in Race Against Hoke Smith's Protege Right After the Convention.

(Augusta Chronicle.)
Macon, Ga., Sept. 2.—That Gov. M. Slaton will if he lives, be a candidate for the United States senate against the convention "Gamecock" Hardwick, four years hence, when the Hoke Smith's proteges come back for re-nomination, is an established fact. The governor's friends practically put him in the race at the close of the convention yesterday as a protest against the "New Morris credentials committee" in flagging the convention delegates so as to absolutely preclude any chance of Slaton winning, as they hold.

The governor held a regular levee in the lobby of the Dempsey and in his rooms all afternoon. Delegates, friends, supporters and some Hardwick and Felder delegates thronged to him and declared that "the fight has just started."

As one man put it in a historic parallel: "Be of good cheer, Brother Ridley, they shall thus lighted a fire that shall blaze through all England, from John O'Grady's to Land's End."

There is no doubt about the enthusiasm and fighting spirit of the Slaton delegates. All but six stood to him on the final ballot, and every man of the 133 who went down with their colors flying pledged himself to start work at once for the governor in his race against Hardwick four years from now.

"I am always ready to go before the people of Georgia," said the governor. I do not fear their verdict. I was willing to run the race over against Hardwick. The people nominated me United States senator, and their will has been defeated in this outrageous convention.

"I don't want sympathy; we've just started this fight now. The Democratic party of Georgia will again be put in control of their affairs through that greatest of all conventions—the vote of the people."

A Narrow Escape

Last Thursday afternoon, but for the quick action of Mr. Ned Futch, little John Mooney, son of Dr. and Mrs. A. J. Mooney, would have been killed by an automobile in the business section of town.

It seems that the little fellow started to cross the street in front of a moving machine. The driver, seeing him, brought the car almost to a stop. The little fellow thinking the machine would wait for him to cross, and the driver, seeing John stop, decided they had the right of way, and started off again, both acting on the belief that each would wait for the other, John was right in front of the moving car when Mr. Futch, who was near, sprang forward and pushed the little fellow from in front of the wheel, and falling with him, the car passed over both of them, bruising them but not seriously.

It was one of those accidents in which no one was to blame, and all rejoice that a tragedy was averted by Mr. Futch's quick action.

PRODIGIOUS ROW NOW STARTED IN GEORGIA

Slaton's Big Following Outraged at Convention—Perfidy and Imposition.

(Macon Telegraph.)
Atlanta, Sept. 3.—James B. Nevin, political writer for the Georgian, forecasts that the row begun in the Macon convention, and the unquestioned dictation of T. W. Hardwick's nomination for short term senator by Senator Hoke Smith, will start a row in Georgia, the last of which will not be heard in a long time.

Here are Nevin's alter conclusions on the convention:

Returning pilgrims from the state democratic convention give it as their opinion that Georgia never again will see such a political gathering as the one just concluded in the Central City.

While generally they accept the convention's actions gracefully and rejoice or grieve, as the case may be with Hardwick's victory and Slaton's defeat, few are optimistic enough to believe that the end of the row started in Macon is anywhere in sight or that it may come for many years.

The nomination of Hardwick is put down as a Hoke Smith victory, pure and simple, and whatever glory or blame attaches thereto is his, and his practically alone.
