THE EUROPEAN STRUGGLE

The Greatest Battle in the History of the World Now in Progress.

The war in Europe, embracing nearly every country, has taken an active start in what is to be the greatest battle in the history of the world. It is a struggle between France, England and Belgium on one side and Germany on the other. It is a struggle for the world's supremacy. The great Napoleon ended his brilliant but stormy career. It is a battle which is likely to determine, to a large extent, the duration of the war.

The Germans sought, as in 1870 to rush the fight to the gates of Paris and overthrow their old enemy, France, before they could prepare, but the unexpected resistance of Belgium to the invasion of her territory by the German army gave the allies time to unite and now she has the allied forces of the three countries to contend with. The numerical strength of the contending armies is about equal and good generalship will do much to decide the fate of the battle. That it will be desperate and sanguinary goes without saying, and so far as will be the fighting, no man could predict the outcome. The Belgians have Antwerp, near which city the fight is taking, fortified almost impregnable, and the French have old scores to settle with Germany for their defeat in 1870 and the English have not gone into the struggle half heartedly, so, before many days have ended, it is not surprising if the world is appalled at the immense loss of life on both sides.

Summed up briefly, the whole situation is about as follows: A half-crazy fellow in Serbia killed the crown prince of Austria and his wife. Austria declared war on Serbia and Germany took sides with Austria. Russia took sides with Serbia and France joined Russia. The Germans at once started the invasion of France by way of Belgium, who appealed to England to protect her neutrality, and thus drew England into the conflict, so that nearly all of Europe is in arms and the outcome, which will change the map of Europe, is awaited with much anxiety by the whole world.

Japan Enters the Fight

With a declaration of war on the part of Japan against Germany it means that another great and powerful nation has added its forces to the struggle between nations, the greatest war in the world's history. All the fighting nations are leveling their guns at Germany and Austria, and one would think it would be a short lived war were it not for the fact that we all know that the Southern Confederacy, with no government that any nation on the face of the earth would recognize, fought the whole civilized world a bloody war for four long years. Germany has a land force not equaled on the face of the globe, and she will be felt before she is whipped. Many a bloody corpse will pay the penalty of this war before it is over. The fighting is not so regular or so furious as it was at the beginning of the struggle. It shows that all concerned are backing off and making active preparations for a long war.

SOME FACTS

Relative to the Effects of the European War on Our Country. Taken from the Manufacturer's Record of August 6th.

The European nations will be forced, by need of food stuff to prevent starvation, to bring the war to an early ending, even if the terrific armament of the various nations engaged did not themselves accomplish that. In the meantime the temporary difficulties which confront the handling of grain and the doing of general business, may be largely overcome by concerted action on the part of the people of this country, to our own great good.

If our people become so absorbed in thinking about the situation in Europe as to put aside from day to day the things they had intended to do in a business way, the improvements that they had been expecting to make, the purchases they fully intended to consummate, they will, to that extent, intensify the general situation and lessen the business activities of the whole country.

It is the supreme duty of every man at the present time to put forth increased energy for the conducting of his own business, and for assisting and carrying forward the broad work of the business activities of his own country in order that the products of the farm may find a profitable market, and the output of factories be not curtailed. Our country is in magnificent shape to meet the conditions without excitement, without any fear as to the future, but with an abiding faith in its own ability. This is no time for the pessimist to raise his voice.

If, in an altruistic spirit, the countries of Europe had desired to bring about the largest possible development of this country; if they had desired to transfer the seat of the empire of commerce and finance and industry to the United States, they could not in any other way have accomplished it so effectively as they are doing, for they will bring about these results by their own decisions.

Nature has so marvelously endowed this country with almost limitless resources for material development, that we have here the foundation on which to build a manufacturing structure far greater than that of all Europe.

We have an area capable of supporting a population larger than that of Europe.

We have the raw materials with which to keep these people busy in industrial activities and the land on which to produce the food stuff.

Here are resources sufficiently great and diversified to provide employment for hundreds and millions, and here, too, are the resources for feeding and for clothing them.

The combination of advantages is nowhere else matched on earth. Nothing else like it is known to mankind.

Europe has for many years noted with envy and jealousy our great development in material things, but it has viewed with still greater envy our matchless resources in all of the raw materials which furnish the foundation for every line of manufacturing known.

The conditions which exist in Europe will literally compel a development here far greater than we have seen in the past. This war will put the United States ahead fifty years in its domination of the finance and commerce of the world, and throw Europe back fifty years.

The seat of empire of finance and commerce and industry is already preparing to transfer its home to this, the most supremely blessed land upon which the sun shines.

What matters so far as we as a nation are concerned, the difficulties of the moment in the light of the limitless opportunities of the coming years. Well may our people

Written in Memory of Henry Holland.

On the 2nd day of June, 1914, the death angel came for the spirit of our brother and friend, Mr. Henry Holland.

Mr. Holland was born May 17, 1872, being sick only fourteen days. He bore his afflictions with patience and never murmured. He was a man that always tried to do right. He will be missed as a husband and as a father, as a son and as a brother and neighbor. We have lived near him for twelve years. He was always ready to do a favor for anybody that asked him—we never knew him to deny anyone. He was a faithful churchgoer though he never had confessed Christ to the world and followed Him in His baptism; but by the fruits of his life and the close acquaintance we had with him, we have a hope of him being a child of God. We all know the tree by the fruit it bears and not by name, therefore we knew him to be a Christian by the fruits of his life. Now, since God has called out his beloved brother to join the heavenly hosts, therefore, be it

Resolved, That we commend the bereaved loved ones to their Savior. He has fought faithfully and has laid down life's burdens for the glories of life eternal, and when your battle has been fought and the call comes to lay down your armor, you all can join him in that home prepared for God's children, eternal in the heavens. He was a devoted husband and a loving father in his home. He leaves behind a bereaved wife and ten children, father, mother, brothers and sisters and a host of relatives to mourn his departure.

Now, bereaved family, we know that God makes no mistakes, so let us be reconciled to His will. He doeth all things well.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Tillman.

The South's Opportunity.

"Atlanta is five hundred miles nearer New York than Omaha, and cattle can be shipped from the south by water as well as by rail. Why, after all, should we be looking so hungrily at Argentina, overlooking the cattle nearer possibilities of the great south, which has only begun to develop."

This from the New York Mail is another reminder, among hundreds continually arising, that Georgia and its neighboring states are singularly rich in opportunities for beef production. More and more the population east is turning to the south as a future source of food supply. It only remains for the south to grasp and utilize the rare advantage which observant people everywhere perceive.

The Mail interestingly remarks in this connection that "if nature, in a generous mood, were to offer America a land of two hundred and sixty-four million acres in which cattle could be pastured from early March to late November, Uncle Sam would throw up his hat with joy, finding the beef problem. Yet America has such a region with less than a third of its area in improved farm land, with a population varying from fourteen to fifty seven to the square mile, with room to raise enough beef to supply the whole United States." The nine southeastern states comprise that region. Their climate and soil are admirably suited to the raising of live stock, especially cattle. In Georgia there are thousands of idle acres which can be bought cheaply and turned to highly profitable use as cattle ranges. Indeed, opportunity abounds. The people of the South should no longer delay its utilization.—Atlanta Journal.

ROWE MAY BE CHAIRMAN

Convention Will be One of the Most Important Ever Held in Georgia.

Atlanta, Ga., August 21.—General interest now centers on the state convention to be held in the auditorium in Macon on Tuesday, September 1st.

Spectacular interest enters into this convention because of the fight to be enacted there over the short term senatorship. It is expected that it will be one of the largest conventions, in point of attendance and general interest, of many years, and hotel accommodations are bound to be strained; particularly if the convention continues more than one day, which is not improbable.

It is the very general belief that Hugh Rowe, of Athens, will be named permanent chairman of the convention, and that he will have to hold the reins over a more or less stormy and turbulent session.

Mr. Rowe, editor of the Athens Banner and is vice chairman of the state executive committee, and as acting chairman will call the convention to order. This bureau forecast his probable selection weeks before the primary, and talk here now all centers around him. He is well equipped for the place, and would handle such a convention ably, impartially and fairly.

The convention will elect an entirely new state legislative executive committee. These selections are all ways made by congressional district caucuses prior to the opening of the convention, and the election there afterwards is largely perfunctory.

There is also some speculation as to the secretaryship of the convention, but Hardy Um possibly will be the choice, for his experience and the fact that he is secretary of the state committee now.

Conferences all over the state are busy selecting their delegates now, choice of course being from among friends of the successful gubernatorial candidate in each county.

Fulton's delegates, of course, were named from among friends of Judge Harris and are as follows: St. Elmo Massengale, Albert D. Thomson, Chas. H. Mason, R. A. Broyles, Aldine Chambers and E. T. Williams. Alternates: Marcellus Anderson, John S. Cohen, George M. Pope, Ivan E. Allen, John A. Rynd, E. K. Pomeroy.

Organization of the state convention will be quickly effected, the preliminaries will soon be out of the way, then will come the duel for the short term senatorship.

Williamson, W. Va., Aug. 22.—"Here's a license I got in this court twenty four years ago, and as I don't seem to have a chance to use it, I thought I'd bring it back and get the money I paid for it."

This spoke Alexander Chernoff, a stoney mountaineer to the clerk that he'd give up the marriage papers.

"You see," he said, "me and my girl, Euphemia always wanted to be married, but she was so contrary that she never was ready to have the parson tie the knot when I was. About once a year I'd pop the question and she'd always answer 'Yes.' But when I would ask her when we'd visit the parson she'd put me off."

"After twenty-four years I got tired and told her either we would get married or we wouldn't. Euphemia said we wouldn't; so I suppose we won't."

Killed By Lightning

On last Wednesday afternoon, during a heavy thunderstorm that passed over that section of the county south-east of Statesboro, Mrs. Ernestus Waters, living in the Emmet district was instantly killed by a stroke of lightning. Mrs. Waters was sitting on rear veranda of her home with a small child playing at her feet. The bolt of lightning, without any warning whatever struck her on the head and ran down her body, tearing away the flooring under her feet without injuring the child who was playing within a foot or two of its mother. A small portion of her hair was singed, and there were some signs on the body. The funeral was held at Upper Black creek church on Thursday afternoon, where the interment was made. The deceased was the daughter of the late Edward Ringwald, and a sister of Mr. W. L. Ringwald, of this city.

Messrs. T. J. Denmark, W. H. Simmons, Hinton Booth and S. J. Williams have been appointed delegates from Bulloch to the State Convention which meets in Macon next Tuesday.

Let This I H C Engine Do Your Work

NINE years ago I H C engines first appeared on the market. Men who bought them at that time report them still doing an honest day's work. They are always ready to run, they have more power than you pay for, and they develop that power on very little fuel.

When you buy an I H C engine, it is set up and tested on your farm by experts. If anything happens to it any time, we have repair parts right here. The longer life and lesser up-keep expense of I H C engines makes them cost far less per year of service than inferior engines. That's why we sell I H C engines.

Advantages of a Checking Account.

Do you know that 90 per cent of commercial transactions are made without the exchange of actual cash? This for the two great reasons—Safety and Efficiency. And these two reasons apply as well to the modest business as to the big Wall street operations. When you give your check you do not waste one moment counting money.

Of greater importance is the fact that your check automatically gives you a receipt.

Wreck on Central

As the train was leaving Savannah at 2 o'clock for its run to Augusta, when nearly a mile from the depot, was wrecked and several of the passengers were pretty badly bruised, and some sustained severe injuries, though none were killed. When nearly a mile from the depot the train struck a defective switch gap, the engine and mail and express car passed over safely, but the last coach was derailed and dragged the two forward passenger coaches off the track, and they rolled down the embankment. The seventy one passengers on board were badly shaken up, and some of them sustained painful but not very serious wounds. Among the wounded is Mr. J. Z. Kendrick, who is injured about the left shoulder.

Mr. W. B. Moore, auditor of the Savannah & Statesboro Railway, was on the train, but fortunately was uninjured.

The track was cleared so that the train for Dublin passed through Statesboro at about 7 o'clock—only two hours late.

Misses Jessie Olliff and Katherine Parrish and J. J. Zetterower were also on the train but escaped injury.

SLATON TO RUN IN FOUR YEARS

(Augusta Chronicle.)

Macon, Ga., Sept. 2.—That Gov. M. Slaton will if he lives, be a candidate for the United States senate against the convention "Gamecock" Hardwick, four years hence, when the Hoke Smith's proteges come back for re-nomination, is an established fact. The governor's friends practically put him in the race at the close of the convention yesterday as a protest against the "New Morris credentials committee" in flagging the convention delegates so as to absolutely preclude any chance of Slaton winning, as they hold.

The governor held a regular levee in the lobby of the Dempsey and in his rooms all afternoon. Delegates, friends, supporters and some Hardwick and Felder delegates thronged to him and declared that "the fight has just started."

As one man put it in a historic parallel: "Be of good cheer, Brother Ridley, they shall thus lighted a fire that shall blaze through all England, from John O'Grat's to Land's End."

There is no doubt about the enthusiasm and fighting spirit of the Slaton delegates. All but six stood to him on the final ballot, and every man of the 133 who went down with their colors flying pledged himself to start work at once for the governor in his race against Hardwick four years from now.

"I am always ready to go before the people of Georgia," said the governor. I do not fear their verdict. I was willing to run the race over against Hardwick. The people nominated me United States senator, and their will has been defeated in this outrageous convention.

"I don't want sympathy; we've just started this fight now. The Democratic party of Georgia will again be put in control of their affairs through that greatest of all conventions—the vote of the people."

A Narrow Escape

Last Thursday afternoon, but for the quick action of Mr. Ned Futch, little John Mooney, son of Dr. and Mrs. A. J. Mooney, would have been killed by an automobile in the business section of town.

It seems that the little fellow started to cross the street in front of a moving machine. The driver, seeing him, brought the car almost to a stop. The little fellow thinking the machine would wait for him to cross, and the driver, seeing John stop, decided they had the right of way, and started off again, both acting on the belief that each would wait for the other, John was right in front of the moving car when Mr. Futch, who was near, sprang forward and pushed the little fellow from in front of the wheel, and falling with him, the car passed over both of them, bruising them but not seriously.

It was one of those accidents in which no one was to blame, and all rejoice that a tragedy was averted by Mr. Futch's quick action.

PRODIGIOUS ROW NOW STARTED IN GEORGIA

(Macon Telegraph.)

Atlanta, Sept. 8.—James B. Nevin, political writer for the Georgian, forecasts that the row begun in the Macon convention, and the unquestioned dictation of T. W. Hardwick's nomination for short term senator by Senator Hoke Smith, will start a row in Georgia, the last of which will not be heard in a long time.

Here are Nevin's alter conclusions on the convention: Returning pilgrims from the state democratic convention give it as their opinion that Georgia never again will see such a political gathering as the one just concluded in the Central City.

While generally they accept the convention's actions gracefully and rejoice or grieve, as the case may be with Hardwick's victory and Slaton's defeat, few are optimistic enough to believe that the end of the row started in Macon is anywhere in sight or that it may come for many years.

The nomination of Hardwick is put down as a Hoke Smith victory, pure and simple, and whatever glory or blame attaches thereto is his, and his practically alone.

JACKSON LEADING NEW TYPE FORD FIRE GUARD

OUR INVESTMENT OF $250,000,000 is something well worth analyzing for the purpose of determining the best way to utilize all the possibilities for service to the investor.

The taxpayers of the United States have considerably more than this amount already invested in the United States navy.

The insurance of peace and prosperity to the individual and to the corporation under the United States government given by the army and navy undoubtedly pays a considerable percentage of dividends on the investment, but utilization of all possibilities for efficiency is the standard of achievement for all modern industries.

In addition to the protection feature of the navy, there are three ways in which it seems to me, there might be possibilities for future service to individual taxpayers and to individual employers fortunate enough to live in the United States.

A widespread feeling is abroad in the land that the present method of education does not give to boys and girls the maximum return for the time spent in study.

This feeling is based upon the fact that the specialized industries of today demand specialized education. Vocational training in the public schools, in extension courses and the still more highly specialized training of the corporation schools, are all long steps in the right direction.

An accurate fitting of the round peg to the round hole demands, however, something in addition to the above. The navy requires 34 trades to administer to its needs. All these trades are under the common direction of one head. Each trade contains modern machinery for each trade to attain maximum efficiency.

Does it not seem possible that during the four years of the enlistment period the natural capabilities of each man might be worked out in such a way as to practically insure locating this man in any profession to which his particular type of brain and mental and physical equipment best fit him?

Fitting the individual man in the navy to his position of maximum usefulness means a careful, personal, unselfish consideration of the ambitions and capabilities of each man by the officers under whom he serves. Mutual understanding between officer and enlisted man in the navy is being developed at a wonderfully rapid rate.

In the first place, a very large majority of the work in the navy is with machinery. Officer and man are both in overalls.

The officer is Mr. Brooks, for example, and the man is simply "Smith," but that is practically the only distinction between the officer and the man, except such as is given by the power of the officer to serve the enlisted man and to bring him to his highest point of efficiency.

In the forward turret of the Alabama, for example, the ordinary seaman in charge of the hoist motor has found that tightening a certain clutch will give greater speed to his car.

"Mr. Brooks, I think a little change will give us a quicker ammunition supply."

"What do you recommend?"

The man then explains his idea and the entire turret crew gather around to discuss the advisability of the change. Each member of the turret crew is just as vital to the success of the turret as the officer is, and each man knows that his best effort is absolutely essential to the maximum score of hits.

In this way machinery on the ships has proved a great force working toward intelligent democracy in the navy.

The second force tending to draw officer and man together is the fact that the efficiency of each officer and man, from the commander in chief to the latest recruit on board, is a matter of exact record.

"The shots that hit are the shots that count," and, incidentally, hit are the only shots that count.

The number of hits of each officer for each gun, of each man for each gun and of each man for each shot of each gun is put on the record of the officer and the enlisted man and becomes a matter of public knowledge, published in the newspapers of the country, advertising the efficiency of each, if the score is good enough; and, on the other hand, advertising inefficiency if the score is bad enough.

Mutual understanding between officer and enlisted man in the navy is being developed at a wonderfully rapid rate.

In the first place, a very large majority of the work in the navy is with machinery. Officer and man are both in overalls.

The officer is Mr. Brooks, for example, and the man is simply "Smith," but that is practically the only distinction between the officer and the man, except such as is given by the power of the officer to serve the enlisted man and to bring him to his highest point of efficiency.

In the forward turret of the Alabama, for example, the ordinary seaman in charge of the hoist motor has found that tightening a certain clutch will give greater speed to his car.

"Mr. Brooks, I think a little change will give us a quicker ammunition supply."

"What do you recommend?"

The man then explains his idea and the entire turret crew gather around to discuss the advisability of the change. Each member of the turret crew is just as vital to the success of the turret as the officer is, and each man knows that his best effort is absolutely essential to the maximum score of hits.

In this way machinery on the ships has proved a great force working toward intelligent democracy in the navy.

The second force tending to draw officer and man together is the fact that the efficiency of each officer and man, from the commander in chief to the latest recruit on board, is a matter of exact record.

"The shots that hit are the shots that count," and, incidentally, hit are the only shots that count.

The number of hits of each officer for each gun, of each man for each gun and of each man for each shot of each gun is put on the record of the officer and the enlisted man and becomes a matter of public knowledge, published in the newspapers of the country, advertising the efficiency of each, if the score is good enough; and, on the other hand, advertising inefficiency if the score is bad enough.

The engineering competition applies the same exact methods to the number of pounds of coal,

HEART BEAT AFTER DEATH

Chicago—Medical circles here were interested in the report of an internist in one of the largest hospitals in this city that the heart of a patient who died in his ward had continued pulsating two hours and forty minutes after the man's respiration had ceased. The report was made by Dr. L. G. Morrill of the staff of St. Luke's hospital.

The patient was George Ficht, fifty-two years old, a switchman, who had been caught between two freight cars. His chest was crushed. He was operated on and died the night of July 31. According to Doctor Morrill's report Ficht's breath stopped at midnight. Doctor Morrill remained by the man's side and discovered that his heart continued to beat. It did not cease until 2:40 o'clock in the morning, he declared, and meanwhile by every test the man's lungs were lifeless.

Physicians declared the case of extreme interest and requested Doctor Morrill to elaborate his official report.

EUGENIE VISITS FORMER HOME

Paris—Among the many memories enshrined in the Chateau of Fontainebleau, the historic home of so many French sovereigns near Paris, none can be found more moving than the simple story of the visit lately paid to the palace by the Empress Eugenie. Accompanied by one of her nieces and two members of her suite, the empress was conducted over the apartments of the palace, every one of which, even to the foreigner, forms a chapter in the history of France and of her kings. For the empress each room taken conjured up visions of the past, and she herself played the leading part.

As she looked round the famous apartments of Louis XIII, she exclaimed in a voice broken with emotion, "There is my cabinet," and pointed to a cabinet which, as the curator explained, he said to have belonged to Anne of Austria. The empress assented, but explained that Napoleon III had given it to her as a wedding present, filled with gloves and fans.

In the Salle des Gardes the empress recognized the dining room for intimate occasions. The view from Mme. de Maintenon's apartments out upon the gardens laid out by Le Notre next caught the empress' eye, and with a wistful look, she said: "How beautiful they are."

A few steps further, her gaze fell and she said: "How beautiful they are."

Generous Milkman. When little Bennie brought the milk in off the front porch one cold morning he found a pile of ice on the floor. "Oh, mamma," he cried, "I like our new milkman!"

One Too Many. "The bus was rolling up Fifth avenue in a heavy downpour, on a murky night. Perhaps it was only that the chauffeur and conductor were both asleep, or maybe it was only the suggestion that they were."

The chauffeur thought he detected a fare, and slowed his craft in to the curb. The conductor looked out through the fog, shook his head, and rang the bell to go ahead.

lingered on the carp pond. "My gondola has gone," she said, and quickly turned away. Emerging from the palace the little party wended its way to the edge of the pond, and the empress sat down, "not because I am tired, but because I want to remember."

Eugenie's visit lasted three hours. At the end of it she walked to her car, past little groups of women and children who had been attracted to see a palace by the rumor of her presence. For the children she had an almost affectionate greeting, and there were tears in her eyes as she drove away.

SHOULD EMPIRE OF GERMANY FALL, DOWN WITH IT GO EUROPEAN MONARCHIES

Emperor's Strongest Card
Will Be Played Only When
He Says to England and
Russia, "Crush Me and You
Crush Yourselves"

Washington, Sept. 8.—Roger W. Babson, the well-known statistician, believes that the German kaiser has yet to make his most effective diplomatic move in his contest with the allies.

When he was in Europe last year endeavoring to organize an international congress, Mr. Babson was impressed by what he considered the weakness of most of the rulers. They perform few functions, if any, he says, but enjoy a great privilege which they are in constant fear of losing. We quote Mr. Babson:

"Members of these royal families who cannot be killed, exiled or bribed are absolutely powerless. In the thought of their monarchies becoming republics, so far as practical politics goes, England, Belgium, and some of the others are as good as republics now, but in these countries the royal families and their courts yet have tremendous privileges which they would not have under a republican form of government."

In the case of nations like Russia and Austria the emperors still exercise real power which is wanted by the people. Hence in these countries the fear of a republic on the part of the ruling classes is even greater. Considering the fact that the ability of these rulers and of their courts is very much below that of the average man of large affairs and especially the representatives of democracy in this country, there is little wonder that these emperors and kings and their followers live in constant fear of a republican form of government."

Mr. Babson says also that Emperor William has thus far been recognized as the ablest of the European rulers, and all have depended upon him to keep them in power. In other words as Germany remains under an emperor they believe the chances are good for their countries to remain like-wise, and they fear that if Germany should become a republic their nations might be obliged to follow in her trail.

Hence, says Mr. Babson, "in coming to a conclusion as to the result of the war we must not place all our confidence in the predominance of either numbers or wealth, in which the allies lead. In my opinion, with the German navy and army bottled up by the emperor's will, his best card to play is his simple needs to say to Russia, England, Belgium and Japan: "Push me to the wall, if you wish, but if you do it means the end of my reign and the formation of a republic in Germany. Moreover, a republic in Germany means the end of monarchial power for the rest of Europe. In other words, gentlemen, you will only be cutting your own throats by making me acknowledge defeat. We can call the war a draw and each give and take, in which case I can go back to my people and continue my reign, and the governments of Europe need not be disturbed. If, however, I cannot do this, the days are numbered for us all."

The midday attractions will be good and the races will be much better than those of last year. The track has already been put in shape and the horses are being trained daily for the races next month. The gate tickets this season will be thirty cents for adults, a reduction of five cents from the last fair, fifteen cents will be the price for children over five years and under twelve years. Season tickets, good for entire fair will be placed on the market at one dollar each for grown people and fifty cents for children. These tickets will be honored at the gates as often as the owner desires to pass in and out of the grounds. But under no circumstances will they be transferable.

While pushing temporary advances in southern Poland the Russians were forcing their way westward from Podolia and Besarabia upon Lemberg. When the Austrians finally realized these plans they attempted to turn the Russian left flank near Huta close to the junction of the Galitz Lipa river with the Danister, and a sanguinary fight took place there two days ago. The Austrians were signally defeated, losing 5,000 killed and many prisoners including one general, 32 guns, a standard and quantities of supplies.

"Apparently the progress of the southern Russian army from Podolia in Galicia has been a series of lights on an increasing scale until a third river known as the Pout Lipa was reached. The fight for the possession of the valley of the Pout Lipa was severe. The Austrians had realized the strength of the Russians and had strongly fortified a naturally formidable position. This was carried after an obstinate fight. The Austrian army, a whole army corps, lost about half of its strength.

"These actions occupied the Russian left, her right still being in Russian territory. It is evident that all the actions were part of a concerted movement with the surrounding of Lemberg as its objective, thus dealing a death blow to the Austrian defense."

"In the latest assault the Germans manifested unmistakable signs of unsteadiness, were seen to waver and frequently to break and flee in confusion. As a result of this prolonged battle the German line has advanced a few miles but has not gained any marked or decided advantage."

Explanation

There seems to be a misunderstanding regarding a statement printed last week about the fair. The statement read: "There will be no other attractions at the fair grounds this fall except the fair." We intended by this that there will be no attractions at the fair grounds except those that will be there fair week. Yes, there will be a fine midway, good shows, etc., and high class ones, too.

The European War Still Rages

The gigantic struggle between the nations of the old world is even raging more furiously and more deadly than when we went to press last week. The German army, as has been all the while, seen to be getting the best of it on land, while Great Britain has succeeded in almost annihilating her navy; yet Germany, with five and one half million trained and seasoned soldiers, is cutting a wide swath through France, besieging the city of Paris, with her gigantic army right at the gates of the French capital. The seat of government has been hurriedly moved and everybody who could possibly get away have fled the ill-fated city.

Russia is massing her great army, attacking Germany from an opposite direction. She has been held in check by Austria, but it seems that the Austrians are only able to halt the march of the overwhelming numbers of Russia temporarily, and the crushing of Austria is imminent at the hands of Russia, while France seems to be doomed at the hands of Germany.

When Russia gains her way to Germany, having brushed Austria aside, as she will do, then the march on Berlin will begin in dead earnest. Berlin is the capital of the German empire, and Germans are making haste in an attempt to wipe out France in time to retreat their steps and defend their own seat of government against the Russian invaders.

If we are to believe half the stories we see in print about the number killed and wounded, then there has never been a bloodier struggle in all the world's history than this. The figures describing the dead in each day's battle are simply appalling. Reports reaching this country give accounts of great cruelty and inhuman treatment towards the wounded. In battle, the wounded are ordered the heads cut off of ten thousand wounded of their own army who were considered fatally wounded and beyond recovery. Another report says that the German commanders ordered the heads cut off of ten thousand wounded of their own army who were considered fatally wounded and beyond recovery.

Another report says that in one battle the dead alone took up so much room for them to fall they lay in heaps several feet deep on the battle field, and lay there several days before burial. In all nearly half million men have been up to their lives on the battle field, and many are being thrown against entrenchments that mean certain slaughter to almost every man who attempts the task of rushing these positions.

It seems to be the growing belief that the allied powers will finally crush Germany and Austria, though this is not at all certain. The war may last a year and it may end in a week. No one seems to know or even be in a position to guess at the time this gigantic, bloody struggle will run.

Negroes Shy of Bullock

The efforts of the Bullock county farmers to obtain cotton pickers from Savannah, where there are thousands of loafing negroes, have been met with anything but encouragement. Notwithstanding the fact that the streets of the city are lined with the idle negroes, they will balk when you tell them you want them to come to either Statesboro or Bullock county. Farmers who have succeeded in getting negroes to come to Bullock have done so by telling them they want them at either Brooklet, Metter, Register, Palaski, Aretia or some other point.

Family Have Hook Worm

The five orphan children of Lonie Deal are now being cared for by Mrs. Hanes, their aged grandmother, are assembled in a vacant house in the southern section of the city. They are all afflicted with hook worm, and a treatment is being made for them. The father of the children is now in the lunatic asylum and the mother died some time ago at Ocala, Fla., where they were living at that time. The county is providing provisions for them and a house has been provided for them along with medical treatment, but there are some necessities that they are badly in need of, making it a case that should appeal to the good people of the city, who when they ascertain the circumstances will probably respond to their needs.

Arrangements have been made to place these children in the Baptist Orphan's Home at Hapeville, but the home would not take them until they took hook worm treatment, which will take three weeks to complete. The good people of the city ought to look after this matter. It appeals directly to them.

Scandal in High Colored Society

Practically the entire colored population of the city, as well as a large outpouring of the whites, drawn by morbid curiosity, packed the rooms of the judge of the city court in the court house yesterday. It was a charge of immoral conduct and the support of an illegitimate child charged to Prof. W. M. James, principal of the Statesboro colored school. Mattie Collins, one of the dusky damsels in the vicinity of the school had become a mother, and the distinguished professor was arraigned on the charge that he was the father of the child. Charges and counter charges were made, and a serious split among the folks on Cotton avenue seemed imminent. The majority of the leading members of Prof. James' race seemed to take the side of the professor. A number of leading white men testified to the good character of Prof. James, and a number of colored men testified to the bad character of the woman. The outcome of the trial was that Prof. James was acquitted.

Notice

TO MY CUSTOMERS AND FRIENDS:

I desire to express to you my opinion as to what is best for us to do under the present depressed cotton market conditions. I feel that we only have to stick together, offer our cotton to the mills gradually along as they can use it and run on as small scale as possible. I also advocate, as I have done before, running on cash basis during the fall months. You can sell enough cotton along to buy your necessities and help out your merchant a little and still have some cotton on hand in case the market advances.

Right at this time we are unable to furnish groceries and other cash merchandise on credit unless you can make us a payment on account or note equal to amount of your purchase. This is due to the fact that we are now having to pay cash for this class of merchandise.

I have been buying some cotton along and advancing some money for picking purposes, also have been furnishing supplies and doing everything I could to keep things moving until sufficient cotton could be gathered to ease up the situation. My firm is disposed to be as lenient as possible with people who owe us and are not asking or advising them to sell their cotton, but we are compelled to ask that each one of them pay us a little in cash or sell a little cotton and help us out, or you can deposit your cotton with us, this will be some advantage to us.

I want my friends to consider these matters for our mutual benefit, and to know that the existing conditions require cool co-operation between us. Also to know that business must have some money along to keep running.

Myself and my firm stand ready to assist our customers in any way we can.

Yours very truly,
R. SIMMONS, PRESIDENT,
Statesboro Mercantile Co.

GERMANS TO HOLD BELGIUM AS KNIFE UNDER BRITISH NOSE

London, Sept. 12.—A dispatch from Copenhagen says that a copy of the newspaper Loket Anzeiger, of Berlin, which was received there today, quotes General von Oesterley, a friend of Emperor William, as saying:

"Belgium must become a part of the German Empire because her excellent harbors are wanted. This will enable Germany to hold a knife under the nose of perfidious and cowardly England. Holland also may be persuaded to enter the German union if she is offered great advantages."

"The sea rule of Germany will then be established over the infamous nation of shop keepers. Our future lies on the sea."

Good News From the Front

The latest dispatches from the front of the European war are very encouraging. It looks like the beginning of the end is approaching. The armies of the allies are driving the Germans into almost certain defeat, while Russia is practically wiping out the Austrian army. We do not see how the war can last much longer, especially if the present luck keeps up.

The war news is having an appreciable effect on the cotton market. Prices are going up on cotton and coming down on grain and other products that were soaring on account of the war. Wall street bets are being placed with no takers that the different stock and cotton exchanges which were closed on account of the war would open early in October. This shows that everybody in touch with the situation expects an early termination of the war.
