WANT A LITTLE TOO FAMILIAR WITH ROYAL HEIR.

Required for Obsequiousness, Man in the Opposite Direction—Lucky for Him Haughty Emperor Did Not Overhear.

In her book of reminiscences of the German royal family Mrs. Hugh Fraser tells the following story of the crown prince and a too obsequious maid.

The royal highness had just taken into his service a new manservant, but the obsequiousness of the man jarred on his master. At last the crown prince became so irritated that the servant received an intimation to the effect that his highness would prefer to be treated with more simplicity.

The day after having given this warning the crown prince was seated at his table writing, when he suddenly felt himself tapped on the shoulder. Thinking it was his wife, he turned quickly, smiling, only to behold the hitherto obsequious maid standing beside him and regarding him with a most friendly smile. Before the astonished heir to the throne could find suitable words in which to rebuke the servant's presumption, the latter jerked his thumb in the direction of the door, and announced:

"Papichou has come to see you." Now, the crown prince was expecting a call from his father, the emperor, and as "Papichou" literally means "Little Papa," his astonishment increased.

"Papichou?" he gasped, as soon as he could articulate. Then thinking that the servant must have been drinking to speak of the emperor in such a way, he muttered to himself, while his eyes were fixed on the man in amazed inquiry: "Is he drunk?"

The servant apparently thought the whispered remark was a confidential request for information as to the prospective visitor's condition, for after scrutinizing him in some perplexity, he leaned closer to the crown prince and whispered softly: "Drunk? Well, I think not; I didn't notice anything."

Were in the Minority. Three or four years ago they had in a small English town some revival meetings. A man walking around the road walked into one of these meetings without knowing in the least what it was. He saw a man preaching on the platform, sat down; not liking the people on either side of him, he went to sleep. While he was asleep the preacher wound up his sermon, saying:

"Those who are going to leave their wicked ways and come with me in the paths of righteousness, put up their hands." "And those who are going to creep to their wicked ways and refuse to be changed, put up their hands."

The noise woke up the sleeper, and seeing a man with his hands up on the platform, so that he shouldn't be lonely he put up his hand, too, and said:

"Lor, Guvner, I dunno what we're voting for, but we've lost it."

Ostrich a Short-Lived Bird. In proportion to their size, ostriches are not long-lived birds, and even under the most favorable conditions it is seldom that individuals reach the age of from thirty to forty years, an age frequently exceeded by crows, cranes, parrots, and birds of prey. The source of weakness in their constitutions appears to be the digestive system. The proverbial phrase "digestion of an ostrich" is a popular misinterpretation of the observation that these birds, like many others, pick up stones, coins, keys and other miscellaneous hard objects, which are retained in the gizzard and no doubt assist in the trituration of food.

Deceased by Mild Winter. The weather in these parts will have to do something much further out of the common than anything it has yet shown the people of northern Ohio to beat certain early records. When Cleveland was about five years old three winters in succession were so strangely mild, from start to finish, that the settlers from New England were led to cherish unfounded hopes of the climate of the region to which they had migrated—Cleveland Leader.

Best She Could Do. "Why don't you want to let me hold your hand?" "What good would it do you to hold my hand?" "It would make me glad and give me courage, perhaps, to—to say something that I—that I—"

Fortunate. Kitty—Isn't it a most fortunate thing? Ethel—What? Kitty—That people can't read the kisses that have been printed upon a girl's lips.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

ONE TRAMPLED INTO PUDDLES

Economical, Though Somewhat Primitive Methods Used at Many Mills Throughout Mexico.

It was at Pachuca, Mexico, that the patio system of separating silver had its origin. This system is still followed extensively at the silver mines throughout Mexico. The ore is crushed and worked down to a state of puddle. It is then spread out to a depth of two or three feet over the paved floor of the courtyard, or patio. To this mass sulphate of copper is added in powder, about fifteen pounds of sulphate to three thousand pounds of puddle. This is trodden into the puddle by horses. Several gangs of old, worn-out horses or mules, about twelve in a gang, are seen in various parts of the patio, being driven round in circles to tread in the sulphate.

On the next day six per cent. of common salt is added and in two more days one hundred per cent. of pure quicksilver, or as much as the assay of the ore shows is required. This mass is then trodden up by horses for fifteen days. It is then wheeled to a large tank through which passes a rapid stream of water. This washes away the clay, leaving the silver and quicksilver. This residuum is poured into cone-shaped canvas bags through which most of the quicksilver runs out, and what remains with the silver is passed off with the vapor by means of heated retorts. None of the quicksilver is lost, and even the vapor is brought by cold water to its original state and used again and again. The quicksilver soon rots the hoofs of the horses and the mules, but the Mexicans themselves do not seem to be much the worse for it even though they wade around in the puddle for days at a time.—Harper's Weekly.

Can't Beat the Smokers. Local tailors are receiving orders from their customers that at least one asbestos pocket be placed in every suit and every overcoat they make, as a result of the new "no smoking" rule of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company.

A widely known Walnut street tailor or placed a large order for asbestos today, and when asked if he had been employed to make an asbestos suit he explained:

"Why, some of my customers are bringing back their overcoats to have the asbestos pocket fixed. They want the pocket to survive in clear bills. 'There is no danger to the clothes, as there is a little flap on the asbestos pocket that makes it partially airtight, and the clear, without air, goes out almost as soon as it is placed in the pocket. It smokes very little, and there is no danger that the conductor will attempt to put off the passenger with the asbestos pocket.'"

The tailor said he got the idea of asbestos pocket from a wealthy business man who pays 50 cents apiece for his cigars, and objects to throwing away 45 cents' worth of a fire drill the men take advantage of the occasion and play water on the windows of buildings, giving them a good cleaning.

The amount of fire fighting apparatus furnished the posts by the government for their protection is regulated, of course, entirely by the size and needs of each post.

Confirmed for Rheumatism. Rev. Joshua Kimber, in his "Reminiscences," tells the following anecdote of the late Bishop Horatio Potter. He had been journeying up the east bank of the Hudson river, stopping for confirmation each day at adjoining parishes. When he reached Poughkeepsie he saw a woman at the rail waiting for confirmation whose face he was sure he recognized and knew what familiar with. He was also certain that he had been confirmed within the week at another place. The woman whispered to him to remain after service, and said:

"My dear madam, what do you mean by coming for confirmation? I am sure I confirmed you on Monday at such a place. Did I not?"

She said: "You certainly did! I have been following you up the river and have been confirmed every day this week."

He, astonished, said: "Why do you do that?"

Whereupon she replied: "Because I heard it was good for rheumatism."

Letters of Two Kings Found. It is said that a most curious discovery has been made at Apley house, Hyde Park corner, the town house of the Dukes of Wellington. In the cellar there has been found all the private and state correspondence of George III and George IV. These documents, covering a vital period of over 60 years, must include Napoleonic references, great interest.

The letters, etc., have been removed to Windsor, and are now being sorted by the king's librarian. According to one of these documents the Iron Duke's name was never Wellesley. The family name was Colley, and his grandfather was adopted by an Irishman named Wellesley.

Sure of a Job. It was a new kind of recommendation for a servant, but very effective. The old employer said nothing about her accomplishments as cook, waitress, laundress or chambermaid. What she was was:

"She is as strong as a man and twice as brave. Three times while in our employ she captured burglars singlehanded, and held them until the police arrived, and saved hundreds of dollars' worth of silver and jewelry."

All the manager of the employment agency had to do when that girl needed a situation was to read that letter out loud and there ensued a wild scramble among his customers for the strongest demand.

EVER READY FOR FIRES

ELABORATE PRECAUTIONS TAKEN AT GOVERNMENT POSTS.

Uncle Sam Furnishes an Excellent Example to the Country in This Respect—Few Losses by Conflagrations in the Army.

Perhaps the low percentage of fires in the army is directly due to the fact that guard duty is never suspended. In daylight and dark, during peace or in time of war, armed sentries walk their posts scattered everywhere over the garrisons. Falling asleep while on guard is a serious offence. Therefore the guards are always alert. Never is a sentry mounted on a post without a caution to look out for fires.

On the next day six per cent. of common salt is added and in two more days one hundred per cent. of pure quicksilver, or as much as the assay of the ore shows is required. This mass is then trodden up by horses for fifteen days. It is then wheeled to a large tank through which passes a rapid stream of water. This washes away the clay, leaving the silver and quicksilver. This residuum is poured into cone-shaped canvas bags through which most of the quicksilver runs out, and what remains with the silver is passed off with the vapor by means of heated retorts. None of the quicksilver is lost, and even the vapor is brought by cold water to its original state and used again and again. The quicksilver soon rots the hoofs of the horses and the mules, but the Mexicans themselves do not seem to be much the worse for it even though they wade around in the puddle for days at a time.—Harper's Weekly.

Once a week, sometimes oftener, in every military garrison, large or small, throughout the country, and there are several hundred at home and in our possessions, a fire drill is held. Not a soul save the commanding officer is advised of what hour of the day or night or on what day of the week a fire call will be blown. As fires do not give warning of their coming, writes Monroe Woolley in Insurance Engineering, it is obviously advantageous that a fire drill should be as uncertain.

When the fire call goes, either for drill or for a fight for life and property, the soldiers rush out of their quarters, leave their posts in the company kitchens, and on the drill grounds, picking up fire buckets and fire axes as they go in the race for the fire station. Some may be hatless, some coatless, and others shirtless, but it is an honor to be among the first to take hold of the fire equipment.

All the officers dash for the house, too, and the highest ranking officer present assumes the duties of fire chief. A run is made with chemical engines and hand drawn hose carts and hook and ladder trucks for a building designated as the scene of the fire. When the equipment is out, a fire drill the men take advantage of the occasion and play water on the windows of buildings, giving them a good cleaning.

The amount of fire fighting apparatus furnished the posts by the government for their protection is regulated, of course, entirely by the size and needs of each post.

PROVERB THAT MADE A HIT

A New England schoolman obtained a situation out in Arkansas, and became so successful that she determined to give an exhibition of her pupils' progress, and invited all their parents to be present on Friday evening. The entertainment moved satisfactorily to all concerned.

"Now," said the teacher, toward the close, "I want every boy to repeat some proverb that he has heard. This is entirely imprudent," the teacher explained to the parents. "I feel sure that the boys will do themselves credit, although they did not know in advance that they were to be called upon. Now, Johnnie, can you give an example of some old saying that you have found helpful?"

"All is not gold that glitters," replied Johnnie.

"Very good. Very good indeed."

"The virtuous and good will be happy," said Johnnie.

"That's splendid. Why, boys, remind me so much of a school I once taught in Boston," responded the teacher.

"The germ of ambition is the chrysalis of virtue," said Johnnie.

And so on down the class list went, until she got to Peck Smith. He wasn't very bright, and she intended to skip him, but he seemed anxious to say something, and she asked him if he knew any old proverb. He did.

"A stumped yellow dog is the best for a man," he said.

The joy of his relatives reached such a pitch that his father paid a year's tuition in advance before he left the schoolhouse—Philadelphia Ledger.

After Lincoln's Own Heart

Man Who Could Beat War President at Telling Stories Got Appointment He Was Seeking.

At least one man got ahead of Lincoln in a story-telling contest. That was Anthony J. Bleeker, who went to Washington to apply for a position. He was asked to read his vouchers. Soon the president stopped him, saying he was like the man who killed the dog. He had kept on with the killing after the animal was good and dead.

The applicant agreed that it was possible at times to do too much, and told the story of the converted Indian who found it hard to learn to pray for his enemies. The little was quoted to him: "If thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink. For in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire in his head."

The convert thereupon began to pray most earnestly and at great length. He asked that his foe should have pleasant hunting grounds, many wags, lots of paposes, and so on. The priest stopped him. He had done enough. Said the Indian: "Let me pray. I want to burn him down to the stump."

It is said that Mr. Bleeker got the job.

Machine Catches Burglar.

A French inventor has recently designed a burglar alarm which is a very close mechanical substitute for a human watchman.

The device is a small, portable, and is intended to be placed in a room where a burglar is likely to enter. It includes the mechanical equivalent of an eye which will detect the faint light from a dark lantern or even a match, hence making it a good fire alarm as well as a burglar alarm.

The "mechanical eye" is a selenium cell, such as used in picture telegraph apparatus, for the reason that the electrical conductivity of selenium varies approximately with the amount of light that falls on it. The mechanical eye consists of a cylindrical box four inches in diameter and about an inch thick, containing a band of selenium wound up in a coil. There is one of these boxes for each room that is to be protected, but they all communicate their sensations of light by electricity to a common receiver.

Quickly Answered.

Pat and Mike, who were neighbors in the "Old Country," happened to retire from public gaze about the same time. Pat had stolen a watch from a blind man, while Mike had stolen a cow for his own and was drafted to the same prison, and at church parade on Sunday morning they had a chance for a moment's forbidden conversation.

"Said Mike: 'Top up the mornin' to you, Pat, an' plavt might the time be? Sure an' 'tis you that knows all about watches.'"

"But Pat was not to be done. 'Mike, say lad,' he replied, 'begorra, an' 'tis about milkin' time.'"

Only Abraham She Knew.

A small girl whose education in American history for purposes of biblical knowledge went to Sunday school for the first time not long ago and was much surprised to hear the teacher refer familiarly to Abraham and his nephew, Lot. The clergyman, noting she was a new pupil, inquired:

"Ada, what was your Sunday school lesson about this mornin'?" Her reply surprised him:

"Well, really, Mr. Wilson, we didn't have any Bible lesson this mornin'. The teacher took up all the time talking about Mr. Lincoln and his nephew, Sam Lee."

PROVED END OF THE ROMANCE

Contemplation of Work That Really Was Work Took Much of His Weary Willie.

"Oh, yes, we have romance in our lives," said the tramp, "but there is always something to spoil 'em. I had my last one last fall. I was pegging along a Rhode Island highway, thinking more of good feed than romance, when a couple of 'weasels' ahead of me turned into a farmhouse. I turned in as well when I came along up and I walked into the kitchen to say 'hello' to the folks. They were about to go through the house. They invited me to take a hand in their game, but I took two in my own. They made it interesting for me for three or four minutes, but the average wild swings instead of straight punches. I had 'em both down when the farmer came up from the field and the girl was released and the fellow went off to jail."

"Well, current jam, big red apples and mince pies were none too good for me for the next week. The daughter was a school marm about twenty years of age and I had won her romantic heart over three days. How often we hear people complain that there are so many delightful recipes published in the papers, but that it is a bother to cut them out, as they always disappear when wanted. A medium-sized housewife, paper scraps and book should be at hand, the clipping cut out and pasted in right away. It will only take a few minutes to do, but the recipe is captured for all time."

That night I left the house by way of a window and daylight found me seven miles away. I would have helped gather apples or baked corn, but when it came to plowing among boulders as big as bowling romance field, and I followed close at her heels."

Wrong Side of the Fence

Most People Will Be Inclined to Agree With Lunatic In His Opinion of His Dope.

In some of the lunatic asylums the less violent lunatics are permitted to do work. At one asylum a lunatic was sent off to paint a portion of the railings in front of the asylum.

As he was painting a passerby stood and watched him; the lunatic looked at him for a minute and then said:

"If you will bring me a pound of tobacco tomorrow I'll show you where there is a great bag of gold hidden."

The passerby said: "Don't be silly. The lunatic replied:

"No, really, if you bring me the tobacco I'll show you where a great, great bag of gold is hidden."

The next day the man returned; the lunatic was still painting the railings. The man handed him the tobacco; the lunatic put it into his pocket and went on painting the railings.

"Yes, but," said the man, "how about the great bag of gold?"

"What bag of gold?" said the lunatic.

"You told me," said the man, "if I brought you a pound of tobacco you would show me where a great bag of gold was hidden."

The lunatic looked at him a minute and then said:

"You know, you ought to be painting these railings."

Read Biographies.

A good tonic for the girl who is short on ambition and long on frivolity is reading biographies of men and women who have "arrived" after hard work and disheartening downings. They are full of the story of the struggle and the triumph, and sometimes inject into her mind a healthy bacillus of discontent.

The girl who enjoys biographies enjoys achievement, and vice versa, for the latter point to the former as a source of inspiration and enlightenment.

It is best to read of the doings of such men and women who have reached the top in their own line of work, for these make the strongest appeal to your will, and if you cannot read between the lines and pick out pointers for yourself you will at least feel the unexpected challenge to work up and do likewise, if not a little better—Exchange.

Teaspoon for Travelers.

Convenient only a special brand of tea is a spoon with a cover that is perforated similarly to a tea ball. This spoon works on the principle of a pair of scissors, being governed by a spring near the root of the handle, which sends the base and the lid in and out in one direction and the lid in the other. By soaking this spoon in solid or plated silver—in a cupful of hot water which railway porters are always able to provide, the traveler who is a bit "fussy" about the quality of the cheering beverage may have it precisely to her liking.

Jealousy a Handicap.

"Some people would rather lose a dollar themselves than see another man make two," said a man who had been trying to bring about unity and co-operation among his employees.

They are so interested in fighting other people's plans that they have no time to push their own, and seeing somebody else succeed seems to threaten them more than failing themselves. That is a frame of mind not confined to any one trade business; it blocks the wheels of progress in many directions. The greatest problem in the carrying out of much good work is the elimination of jealousy.

Self-Sacrificing Love.

"Yes, that is, I could have married him if I had cared to do so."

"So that is the man! A fine looking fellow. I don't wonder that you loved him so much more than you did me."

"I don't see how you can say that I could have married him and did not!"

"That's what I was thinking of."

SCRAPBOOKS THAT WILL WEAR

For Children. Brown Holland is the Best and Most Lasting Material That Can Be Employed.

Scrapbooks for children are best made of brown holland. The holland should be of the right width, and when folded lengthways with the selvages each will make two leaves. For a book take six yards of double width brown holland and cut into half-lengths. Buttonhole over the edges with a contrasting thread, or if liked, with a contrasting color. Fold all together and sew with a contrasting thread through to hide the stitches. Stretch the front page in a frame before fastening together, and either embroider the initials of the child or else work the word "Scrap."

These books are practically untearable and, if made in a dark color, will not show the dirt very quickly. Paste in anything likely to interest the child, or else teach her to make the pictures of other pictures is a most fascinating game for the little ones.

Big brown books made of paper are practical and useful for the housewife. How often we hear people complain that there are so many delightful recipes published in the papers, but that it is a bother to cut them out, as they always disappear when wanted. A medium-sized housewife, paper scraps and book should be at hand, the clipping cut out and pasted in right away. It will only take a few minutes to do, but the recipe is captured for all time."

That night I left the house by way of a window and daylight found me seven miles away. I would have helped gather apples or baked corn, but when it came to plowing among boulders as big as bowling romance field, and I followed close at her heels."

Farmer Defies the Kaiser

Lessee of One of War Lord's Farms Won't Be Evicted, and Prepares to Fight.

The kaiser is being defied by a farmer who refuses to be evicted from one of his majesty's numerous properties. At the annual meeting of the German agricultural council the emperor, amid much laughter, told of his experience as a landowner. He showed how he had introduced new grains, improved the breed of his cattle, increased the output of his meadows and the milk output of his cows. He also said that he had thrown one of the tenants off his farm near Cadix because he was a poor and inefficient farmer.

Fred C. Wallis Agency, Savannah, Ga.

Gentlemen:

Please accept my thanks for the Empire Life Insurance Company's Check No. 18,473, for Three Thousand Three Hundred and Eight Cents ($3,000.00), and is not responsible for all premiums paid. This is why they have paid $3,000.00 in settlement of the $3,000 policy.

I cheerfully recommend the Empire Life Insurance Company to any one who contemplates taking out any life insurance. Yours respectfully,

EUGENE A. MATTOX, Temporary Administrator

Reidsville, Ga., April 24, 1912.

Fred C. Wallis Agency, Savannah, Ga.

Gentlemen:

Please accept my thanks for the Empire Life Insurance Company's check No. 28, for Two Thousand and Thirty Dollars and Eight Cents ($2,300.00) in full settlement of my claim on policy No. 25,662 in the Empire Life Insurance Co.

The above numbered policy for $2,000 was issued to my brother, Mr. William Skankey Mattox, deceased, on January 2nd, 1911. He had paid only two premiums, amounting to $20.00. According to the terms of the policy, the company agreed to refund all premiums paid. This is why they have paid $2,300.00 in settlement of the $2,000 policy.

I cheerfully recommend the Empire Life Insurance Company to any one who contemplates taking out any life insurance. Yours truly,

LILLIE BELLE MATTOX.

Statesboro News

Statesboro, : : : : Georgia.

Conducted by United Contest Advertising Co., of Jacksonville, Fla.

Mr. George W. Williams one of the old timers of Bulloch spent the day in Statesboro on Tuesday.

We have on hand a big supply of North Carolina seed Peanuts, Field Peas, Chufas, and Velvet Beans. R. H. Warnock, Brooklet, Ga.

At a special meeting of the City Council held one day this week an ordinance was passed requiring all owners of dogs in the city to muzzle them. This was brought about by reason of the fact that several mad dogs have been large here in the past week or two.

SPECIAL NOTICE—To the ladies—we have just received full line of slippers. Please call and inspect our line before buying your slippers.

E. C. Oliver.

Mr. J. A. Lanier returned on yesterday from a business trip to Jacksonville, where he has a son in business.

If you want to sell farm land next fall let me have it now.

J. F. Fields.

Miss Annie Blitch came down from Sandersville and spent a day or two in town the past week.

Ladies slippers in all the leathers: Patents, Gun Metals Tan, White Canvases, White Bucks and in all the new toes.

E. C. Oliver.

Mr. B. L. Robertson of Hubert reports a mare giving birth to two fine mule colts during the week. Something that is out of the usual order. One of them has died since, however.

Great Men and Music.

Bagpipes have a strange attraction for all sorts and conditions of people. That enthusiastic highlander, Dr. Alexander Duncan Fraser, in his book, "Some Reminiscences and the Bagpipe," tells how Henry Irving was lying seriously ill in a Glasgow hotel when a highland gathering was in progress in a room just below. He sent a message begging that the piper would play to him, which he did, marching up and down the passage outside the bedroom. Then the great actor told the piper how, in his youth, he had played in Glasgow in a piece called "The Siege of Lucknow." His entry had been the signal for the piper to strike up. "I shall never forget," he said, "the wave of enthusiasm that swept over that great audience as the first notes of the pipe fell upon their ears—the highlanders were coming; Jessie's dream was answered; and Lucknow was relieved. I have loved the pipes ever since."

Playing It Safe.

An overweight business man bolted headfirst into a luncheon room the other day and pounded on the counter. "Ham-neg sandwich, quick!" he ordered.

There was a wait of five minutes and the man at the counter laid a roast beef sandwich in front of him. "I didn't order that!" yelled the customer. "Bring me a ham-neg sandwich!"

Another wait, and the counter man presented the exasperated customer with a cup of cocoa. The overweight business man pulled his derby down over his ears and headed for the door. "Where are you going?" demanded the counter man.

To a restaurant where the cook doesn't gamble with the food!" snapped the overweight citizen, as he disappeared.

Hint to the Bishop.

A bishop once rose to address the house of lords and began by saying he intended to divide the speech in twelve heads. Lord Dufferin thereupon got up and begged leave to interrupt for a few minutes to tell the house an anecdote. He was returning home, he said, a few nights before, and passed St. Paul's Cathedral just before midnight. As he did so there was a drunken man trying to see the clock. Just then the clock began to strike the hour and slowly tolled out twelve. The drunken man listened, looked hard at the clock and said: "Hang you, why couldn't you have said that all at once?" After this narration the bishop condensed his remarks—London Times.

Notice of First Meeting.

Many Are the Ruins Employed by Reynard in Making Successful Escapes From the Hounds.

The reputation of a north of England pack was suffering, and the huntmen were baffled over and over again by a certain fox, which they always lost at exactly the same spot. He gave them a grand run to the side of the wood, and then disappeared, leaving no clue as to where he had gone. At last the head huntman hid himself before the meet at this particular place. As usual, Reynard worked off his old trick, and this is how he did it. By the side of the wood ran a rail fence, and he coolly mounted it, walked along the top for a short distance, jumped upon a large tree which was hollow halfway up, and, creeping inside, was safe. The hounds, of course, lost the scent when he left the ground.

As in this case, the two following instances were watched, and the fox tried his best move once too often. Number one was always lost just on the top of a hill, and it was proved that he did not descend the other side. On the hilltop there was a hollow, and he would run, with the hounds not far off, up the bank, and then quietly lay himself flat down in the bottom of the hollow. Right over him ran the hounds and galloped the horses. When they pulled up over the crest the scent was finished. After they had all passed him, fox simply crept out and went back on his old track.

The other one used to trick the hounds at the top of a steep precipice, with a face of rock over which no hound would go—but Reynard did. He stretched out his legs and slid down the rock with his face to it, as a man would, until his hind legs rested on a narrow ledge. He let himself down carefully, walked along the ledge and entered a crevice at the end. From this place he apparently had no way of escape, for the rock was too steep to negotiate in either direction. It was found, however, that he had a back door on the side of the hill—a breach in the rock between the two openings. Had he entered the hole on the hillside he would have been caught, but his front door was safe, because he had not entered it from the top of the precipice—Exchange.

What

a great improvement to them is in the condition of horses and other animals if just the proper remedy were used when they became ill or injured. It is a fact that we could talk for hours on the use of a certain remedy for all ailments because it stings and burns the flesh, but it is a fact that it has cured many horses and other animals which only had the skin and does not strike down where the pain lies. Best of all, it is a quick-acting remedy. Mexican Mustang Liniment. Made of oil, it is a cure for all ailments of other torturing elements. It soaks straight to the bone and muscle. It soothes the wounded parts and is comforting with the work is progressing. Mexican Mustang Liniment is what you need because it

SOME FACTS ABOUT SEAWEED

Great Variety of Use Found for It in Various Parts of the World.

Some interesting facts about seaweeds which are used as food or for producing vegetable gelatins or glues are brought out by Messrs. Perrot and Gatin in the French Oceanographic Institute. Seaweeds are not much used in Europe except for alkalies or iodine preparation. In the north coast regions of France the seaweed is used by the peasants as a manure upon the fields. Medical uses can be mentioned, and the variety called Iceland moss is collected in Brittany to a considerable extent, this reaching twenty tons of dry seaweed in 1904. One variety of seaweed is a very good vermifuge, and is extensively used for this purpose in Corsica. On account of the iodine which they contain some seaweeds are remedies against goitre and scrofula. As to food uses, this seems to be limited to the Brittany region, and only the poorer population consumes it. Although limited in Europe, the use of seaweeds as food is widespread in the extreme Orient. In Japan edible seaweed is prepared in a number of ways, and it is much cultivated. Iodine is not manufactured in that country at present. One use is for preparing agar-agar, gelose and vegetable glue. Seeing that the gelatins from this source are scarcely nutritious, the authors explain the extensive use by the manner of living, and as the population consumes great quantities of fish and rice it is thought that the gelatinous substances aid in digestion and in the intestinal functions. It is valuable for all-mentation and export.—Scientific American.

SHE HAD A GOOD REASON

Maiden Lady Explains Why She Intends to Visit a Chiropodist.

She was a dear, old-fashioned, modest, simple maiden lady. So that, when she announced the fact that she thought of paying a chiropodist a visit, her great friend was duly astonished.

"I didn't know you suffered from corns," remarked the latter, when the news was first broken to her.

"I don't," remarked the old lady, mildly, albeit, firmly; "neither am I afflicted with bunions, chilblains, nor any other pains in the feet."

Her friend gazed at her with growing consternation.

"Then, my dear," she remonstrated gently, "what on earth do you want to visit a chiropodist for?"

The little lady's cheeks blushed a delicate pink as she leaned forward, laid one mitted hand on her interrogator's arm, and whispered:

"It's this way, my dear. I do so want to be able to boast that at least once in my life I had a man at my feet!"

To Clean a Piano Case.

Use a bottle of olive oil, a bottle of alcohol, some new or perfectly clean Canton flannel, a perfectly clean chamol leather and a basin of water.

1. Wet a small piece of the flannel and drop on it a few drops of oil.

2. Rub with the wet flannel, a small section of the case at a time, and immediately rub it thoroughly with a dry piece of the flannel, before proceeding to a fresh section.

3. Polish finally with the chamol or a fresh piece of the flannel. Rub with the grain of the wood, and breathe on it occasionally to help remove any oiliness that may remain. A very little flour rubbed with the grain of the wood will also help to remove oiliness, but its use should not be necessary.

4. Wash the piano keys with a corner of the flannel wet with alcohol. Be careful, however, to avoid touching the wood with the alcohol, as it will ruin the finish.

Nature Fake?

Cats are not usually fond of wet feet, but there is a big yellow one in the town of Winthrop who is more fond of frog's legs than he is afraid of the water. At that time in the season when the frogs begin to announce that spring is here, Buster may be seen wading his way to the frog pond back of the house in search of his favorite dainties. A convenient board acting as a raft, he has been seen some distance from the shore waiting for the unsuspecting froggie. In case no raft is at hand he will dive in boldly rather than lose his dinner. He often brings his victim to the house, coming in dripping wet from his plunge. He has never been taught to do this, but took it up of his own free will. Perhaps Buster is the incarnation of some dead and gone aristocrat. Who knows?—Lewiston Journal.

Waiting for an Answer.

We asked some months ago whether paper collars are still worn. No one vouchsafed to answer. It is our impression that the celluloid drove out the paper. We well remember the paper collar and the paper dicky. "Ooo, Burgess used to sing of Hildebrand Montrose!"

He parts his hair with extreme care and chalks his paper collars.

But the paper collar once worn was an accomplished fact, something to be forgotten; while the celluloid, like the enameled steel collar of the Civil war period, can be cleansed. The steel collar was at regular intervals re-freshed by use of a tooth brush.—Boston Herald.

ORIGIN OF CLUB SANDWICH

Like Many Excellent Things It Was Born of Accident and Necessity.

It will not surprise any who know how frequently most excellent things are born of necessity, to know that the club sandwich, favorite bit that it is, originated through accident and necessity. A man, we are told, arrived at his home one night after the family and maids had retired, and being hungry, sought the pantry and the ice chest in search of something to eat. There were remnants of many things in the source of supplies, but no one thing that seemed to be present in sufficient abundance to satisfy his appetite. The man wanted anyway, some toast. So he toasted a couple of slices of bread. Then he looked for butter, and incidentally something to accompany the toast as a relish.

Besides the butter he found mayonnaise, two or three slices of cold broiled bacon, and some bits of cold chicken. These he put together on a slice of the toast, and found in a tomato a complement for all the ingredients at hand. Then he capped his composition with the second slice of toast, ate and was happy. And his success was too good to keep. So he told his family, the cook and all his friends, and since then the club sandwich has had as honored place with those who have once tried it.

The name "club" was given to it through the adoption by a club of which the originator was a member. To his friends, also members of the club, he spoke of the sandwich, and they had one made, then and there, at the club, as an experiment, and referred to it afterward as the "club sandwich." As such its name went out to other clubs, restaurants and individuals, and as such it has remained. At least, this is the story as it is generally told.

RESTORE OLD PARIS CONVENT

Historic Institution of the Bernardines May Be Reconstructed in Part.

There is some question of restoring part of the historic Parisian convent of the Bernardines, which is situated in the Rue de Poissy, on the left bank, a short distance beyond Notre Dame. The remains of the ancient convent were patched up a century ago and used as a barracks for firemen.

Archaeologists have been visiting the barracks. They discovered that the partitions which divided the interior are very flimsy, and that the famous old refectory hall of the monks, which was at one time the largest in France, is practically intact. All that is necessary is to demolish the partitions and to remove the deal floor which has been concealing the bases of the columns.

The convent of the Bernardines in Paris is said to have been founded in 1244, and, according to some writers, it owed its origin to Stephen Langton, Archbishop of Canterbury.

Unnecessary Worry.

"Study of human nature in the fashionable barber shops leads me to think that self-respect is declining," said a Newark philosopher. "At the Astor hotel the other day I had my hair trimmed by a barber who seemed to be an exceptionally fine specimen of manhood. He discussed the tariff as intelligently as a man of affairs might have done. He talked brilliantly about plays and analyzed the political situation in words that would reflect credit upon a college professor. Evidently he was a man of honor, and I hesitated to offend his self-respect by offering him a tip. But the tippable custom is chronic now, so I held a dime, and my splendid specimen of self-respecting manhood accepted it without batting an eye."—Newark News.

Northumberland Surnames.

For quaint surnames one should search the records of Northumberland. Mr. A. G. Bradley has made a collection of some of these Northumberland patronymics. He is writing of the times of the border raids, and there was a Robert Unthank in those days. Among others, too, we find the name of Adam Aydrucken, who "upset his boat in the Tyne, and accidentally drowned his wife, Beatrice." Cecilia, the wife of John Unkuthman (uncouthman), "cut her throat with a razor." The incident requires no explanation. "Another unfortunate person figures as Adam-with-the-nose."—London Chronicle.

Positive Proof.

Two advanced maidens were exchanging confidences one afternoon as they stipped their tea.

Their conversation turned to the ever-interesting subject—men.

"He didn't tell me he loved me," said the younger of the two, with a happy, reminiscent smile, as she playfully toyed with her spoon, "but he kissed me."

"Well," replied the other, "he must love you if he kissed you."

Long-Felt Wants.

"Young Wheels has made his fortune. He's invented stiffs 300 feet high that a man can walk on."

"Heavens! What are they for? To keep a man from being run over by automobiles?"

"No, for folks living in those skyscraper apartment houses. Saves taking an elevator and going clear out of their way when they only want to step across the street."

PUBLIC INTEREST IN SPORTS

It is the Spectacular in Athletics Which Makes Games Popular With the People.

If interest in athletics were confined to athletes, the value of athletics would be lessened about 99 per cent. The only way to rouse public interest in athletic sports is by their spectacular character.

The value of football lies in the thousands of organizations which train a hundred thousand boys in nerve and team work each year. But these prairie teams would not exist if the great college teams did not give thrilling spectacles each fall. These great matches keep up that keen public interest without which football would be forgotten.

The same is true of baseball. Every lad swarming balls in a vacant lot models his play on that of some big league hero and dreams of himself in that hero's place on the diamond.

A sport which is only a spectacle would not be worth much. But a sport which has no exhibition value never gets beyond a small circle. If America ever finds a winter game to take the place which baseball holds in summer and football in autumn, it will be a game which rivals these great sports in thrilling spectacular appeal.

GETS WOMEN'S LAW CASES

Modesty Keeps Some From Going to Men, Says New Zealand Practitioner.

A woman who practices as a lawyer in New Zealand has been induced, in connection with the bar's disapproval of the admission of women to the Inns of Courts, to narrate her experiences of forensic life.

"My clients," she says, "are principally women, but my services are sought by some men. Matrimonial and separation cases have, in the main, claimed my attention." Mrs. De Costa is convinced that without her services many a case would never have been dealt with.

"The woman, in many instances, prefers to suffer in silence rather than unfold her story to a man solicitor, however sympathetic he may be," she says.

Does this not support the contention that, if women were allowed to practice at the bar in England they would be engaged principally in the delicate cases in which their appearance would place their men opponents, as well as judges and juries, under a feeling of restraint which would interfere with the proper administration of the law?

Where Fashion is Individual

The fashion in Kiangsu province, China, is whatever one wants. Every man wears what is right in his own eyes. A panama goes jauntily down the street followed by a fur covered brim cap. Felt hats of scarlet and verdigris green follow along with grays and browns that really do the amateur hatters credit. Eskimo top capes, a few derby hats and the smart military uniforms give the streets a piquancy that was missed formerly in the monotonous China blue crowds. Of all the notices posted on the city gate the one that attracts the most attention is the fashion plate that has been exhibited for weeks. It displays two or three of the typical "western" suits. There are the "swallow tailed" and the low "spoon" frock for evening functions. There one finds the plaid skirts recommended for the women. The silk or "stovepipe" hat has its corner with the other fells.

"Tramp's" Advice on Care of Feet.

A "tramp" writes: "Bathe your feet as often as you can. Before retiring give them a good soak in hot water, with salt in it. For untoughened feet, use a boot not too tight, with a thick sole, a low heel, and wear two pairs of stockings. Each day, before starting—and during the day if needful—apply vasoline or tallow very freely to any parts that chafe. Little pads of cotton carrying vasoline, tucked between troublesome toes or plastered on the surface of the foot anywhere that there is trouble, simply work wonders. Starting with soft muscles and tender feet, the writer has walked hundreds of rough miles without a particle of distress in the feet—simply because they were given good care."

Surgery and Crime.

Surgical treatment to turn a confirmed criminal into a useful citizen received a bad setback in a case where a great apparent change after such an operation led to the pardon of the remade man. His release was followed by a series of burglaries which necessitated his return to durance ville. Perhaps one of the reforms to come will be the better protection of society from theory and experiment connected with the criminal classes. So far, the experiments made to prove that morality is merely a matter of physiology have not been brilliantly successful.—Baltimore American.

His Elaborate Dinner.

It was in the grillroom of a local cafe, and two visitors took seats at a table in the corner. "I am as hungry as a bear, and I am going to order an elaborate dinner," one of them was heard to remark. Everybody listened to hear just what his dinner consisted of, having visions of terrapin, pate de foie gras and, maybe, fresh strawberries. After carefully scanning the menu and looking at the price list, he said something to the waiter in a low voice, who answered, "Eiam and eggs, sah? Certainly, sah."—Indianapolis News.
