BIG BARBECUE AND GOOD ROADS MEETING TO BE HELD THURSDAY.

ERNEST BRAGG DROWNED NEAR

Rocky Ford Saturday, While in Swimming.

The little village of Rocky Ford was thrown in excitement Saturday when it was known that Ernest Bragg was drowned near there. Ernest was the son of D. A. Bragg and was well known in this county.

From reports it seems that he had gone there to a picnic which was being held, and while there went in swimming and while in the river was suddenly seized with cramp and met his death, with his father on the bank. From reports the boy's father could not swim and was helpless to render him any assistance. His body was not found until Sunday.

Notice.

On and after this date I prohibit anyone from going to my spring for water. This June 14, 1910. J. P. SMITH.

BIG TIME IN STATESBORO THURSDAY, JUNE 29

GOOD ROADS CONGRESS TO BE HERE--BIG BARBECUE AND FREE LEMONADE

We are in receipt of a communication of one of the directors of the South Georgia Good Roads Congress stating that one of the biggest days in the history of Statesboro will be pulled off here Thursday, June 29th, when the congress meets here. People from all over South Georgia will be on hand and give this a big boost, and it is our desire that every farmer of Bulloch county be on hand and hear the big speakers that will be here on that day. We are informed that Congressman Edwards will be here, besides several other important men of the State. This alone should be a big drawing card and we feel confident in saying that every citizen that possibly can will make arrangements to be here.

Arrangements have been made for a big BARBECUE and FREE LEMONADE will be served on every street corner, so be sure and come, as we want every man, woman and child to be here, as there probably is no other question as important to the farmer as the good road question. It has now come to a point that it means dollars and cents in the pocket of the farmer to have good roads, as well as the merchant, doctor or laborer. Don't forget the time and make your arrangements to be here, as we are expecting you in STATESBORO JUNE 29. Below is the program:

South Georgia Good Roads Association, Statesboro Meeting, June 29th, 1911.

Be a booster for your home town. Don't be a knocker.

Pull for Statesboro, the capital of South Georgia, or pull out.

Did some one say that Statesboro was going to have a board of trade?

Big Barbecue and Free Lemonade to all that will come to Statesboro Thursday, June 29th, see water on the side.

John D. Rockefeller is to build a $200,000 home in New York for his son. That's a pretty good indication that John D. has heard from his lawyers on the recent decision and that he isn't worried much.

We received two cotton bolls from M. C. Cowart, of Route 2, which are the very first reported this year. Some class to Bulloch farmers.

It's only a few more days until some of the politicians can take a few months' rest. Will it be a much needed rest? Well, we should say yes.

The legislature meets Wednesday with some big bills on docket. The most important is who will be our next United States senator?

Statesboro handles one-eighth of the Sea Island cotton of the world. This is something to boast of, but Statesboro can proudly boast of several things that some other places we know of can't.

What next? New York is to have a building that will cover 50 acres. Atlanta is to have a commission government and Tom Watson has expressed his opinion on the race question.

Why haven't we heard from several correspondents. We are greatly in need of a local representative in every county, and would be glad for you to write us at once. Surely you want to see news from your locality in every issue.

There is some excuse for a man to steal $46,000, as Lee did from the battleship Georgia, but there are some who think the fact that he got married after his arrest shows him to have been irresponsible.

Bugs Raymond has signed to pitch for the Winston team of semi-professionals. Unless Bugs is a bigger liar than anybody has ever suspected him of being, there is little show for him to hold his job in that town.

Champ Clark says the Democrats will carry Pennsylvania next year. Isn't it about time for some of Champ's friends to suggest to him the advisability of a long rest? This kind of talk is disuading.

The Savannah Press and Daily Courier-Dispatch have quite a controversy about Hon. Wm. Jennings Bryan's speech at Statesboro a few days ago. Say, boys, cut it out. Bill is all O. K. and it only takes the money to make him talk. would suggest that you Dublin people forget all about that dollar and go after another one, as William Jennings will feed the Democratic rule with all he collects down this way, but from the looks of the way he is taking it in he will have a fat mule.

INDEPENDENT FARMERS

There is no man in all the country so independent, so much to be envied as the small farmer of the South. For a century the man with a few acres was disdained in the section where now he is almost monarch of all he surveys. A few years ago, however, the great South dawned upon the great South that they were land poor. Almost at the same time thousands of toilers in the common ranks of men arrived at the conclusion that a home was the greatest essential to happiness. This combination immediately effected a great change. In some localities it is more notable than in others, but gradually it is spreading out over a wide scope of country. Wherever the influence of such an action is felt, there is a revolution in progress. It would take almost unlimited time and space to depict the various phases of rejuvenation that are enveloping every community. Progress, advancement and every indication of health, prosperity and happiness are clearly demonstrated in various ways.

Above all looms the wonderful thought of home. Nestled down, perchance in some little valley, high up on a hillside, or over across the way, modern little homes are found. This is an asset of more value than can ever be computed. Where the conditions are found there are sure to be innumerable instances of material advancement.

A little farm can be easily managed nowadays and a great profit made on it. An instance that I know about and one that gives a great deal of satisfaction to people who wish an industrious worker success, is that of a neighbor. For a number of years he worked with adverse conditions confronting him, but at last he bought a little farm on the installment plan so to speak, and he commenced to improve it.

With a wife to co-operate he had, but little other help, but recently finished selling the crop for last year. From nine acres of cotton and one acre of sweet potatoes he made net proceeds of over $500. A couple of acres more of land was devoted to various money crops for which he received comparatively the same amount. Eight acres were devoted to growing the things needed at home.

Wherever the movement toward establishing small farms has gotten well under way and folk are settling thickly there is no conviction that cannot be found. Within a short time I think some rural communities will actually have a waterworks system.

Certainly sanitation and other important matters are kept under closer considerations, that is the rule where farms are large and homes isolated. True, however, there are many fine farms over the South already with all these modern conveniences, but nowhere on such a farm can be found the happiness and contentment reigning as it does on the small farm.

One of the greatest advantages usually invariably noted is the improvement in roads. This is one of the surest evidences of civilization and progress. It comes as a second nature, so to speak, whenever farmers get to settling thickly in a section. One thing to be noted, too, is that when a man settles around where good roads are found he is pretty apt to stay there. Where the community is sparsely settled there is no better way to build it up than by building good roads. People everywhere are now realizing that time saved adds more to life and good roads are essentially time savers.

Roads more than pay for themselves within a short time and any section is justified in making a debt in order to have them. In addition to the time saved there are other considerations of vast importance. It comes first in the wear and tear on the vehicles.

Mr. J. B. Wright visited Hubert Tuesday.

Mr. R. H. Cone and son attended the lecture of W. J. Bryan in Statesboro Tuesday evening.

The evening services at McDonald will be held at 4 p. m. Sunday as Rev. Brooks has to return to Guyton.

then the awful burden imposed on the farm animals. Then there is the difference in the size of the load that can be hauled when the roads are in good shape. It makes more difference than can be enumerated in any mere story of the advantages resulting from such a system.

The little farms present a wider field for diversion than can be found on the big farm where systems must prevail and things be done more or less on a large scale. A little farm of some twenty odd acres furnishes ample room for an acre or two to be devoted to various phases of agriculture. In such instances the theory of experiment is eliminated and the work can be carried on with a certainty of success attending the efforts of the worker, no matter how small he may consider himself. This is the work that counts in the end.

I don't know what I would recommend to a young man that can beat a little farm. True enough, I have seen enough of the failures and privations of country life in the last fifteen or twenty years. I know as well as anyone in the whole world can ever tell just what it means to be out away from the great great world, but there is no loneliness so great as to be right in humanity's reaches with hundreds around you and yet never a one that is near and dear. And, besides this life out in the country is changing rapidly, and if it is not changing in your section it is time for you to get up and help to manage it for it is as much one man's duty as it is another's, and surely it is some body's work and a work that must eventually be accomplished.

by one man or another. No matter how far advanced a community may be, there is always room for improvement, and nobody should rest satisfied with what has been already accomplished in the struggle for existence.

"I thought," said the master, "you were told to get out that cargo this morning."

"It's all done, sir," said the young man, "and here is the account of it."

He never looked behind him from that moment—never! His character was fixed, confidence was established. He was found to be the man to do the thing with promptness. He very soon came to be one who could not be spared—he was as necessary to the firm as any of the partners.

Judge Newton Morris Intends to Draw up Bill With That Object

(Atlanta Journal.)

Forced to serious reflection by the scenes surrounding the execution of John Withrow, the Fannin county wife-murderer, Judge Newton Morris, of that circuit, who was a visitor at the capitol Monday morning, has expressed the intention of framing a bill and having it presented to the legislature at the coming session, providing that henceforth all executions in Georgia shall take place quietly, privately, without any more ceremony than is absolutely necessary, at the state prison farm.

He may or may not suggest that electrocution be substituted for hanging. The former charge is the thing he regards as essential.

Withrow was made little less than a hero of it, it is stated, by certain elements of the population at Blue Ridge, and those elements by no means the least respectable in the community.

Withrow, it is said, was prayed over and cried over and shouted over by people who were sure he was going as straight to heaven as a sinless baby, that it eventually had its effect on public sentiment, says Judge Morris, and though the actual hanging was in private, it is stated, there was first a procession, in which Withrow rode in a hack, smoking a cigar, and waving goodbye to his admiring friends, while other good people in the vehicle sang an inspiring hymn, the purpose of which was that Withrow was on his way to "glory."

Judge Morris is inclined to believe that a considerable reform could be wrought by the bill he proposes to introduce.

TEN REASONS FOR HOME BUYING.

(Omaha Trade Exhibit.)

1. Your home merchants can duplicate the price made by any responsible concern anywhere on goods of equal quality, in the same quantities and on the same basis of delivery and payment.

2. You can examine your purchases in the home stores and be assured of satisfaction before investing your money.

3. Your home merchants are always ready and willing to make right any error or any defective article purchased.

4. Your home merchants help support, through direct and indirect taxation, your schools, churches, libraries and other public institutions.

5. Your home merchants help make a good local market for everything you have to sell, and that market—more than any other one factor—gives your land its present value.

6. Your home merchants are your good friends, ever ready to extend a helping hand in time of need.

7. If this community is good enough to live in and make your money in, it is good enough to spend it in.

8. The best citizens in this community are those who believe in and practice home patronage.

9. Merchants in the distant city give you nothing valuable that the home merchants cannot give you—and the former cannot and will not do for you many things the latter do gladly.

10. Every dollar kept in circulation in this community helps increase values. Every dollar sent out of this community that could as well be spent here hinders the wheels of progress and helps to build up some other community at your expense.

IT'S DONE, SIR.

One day an employer said to a youth beginning life as a clerk:

"Now, tomorrow that cargo of cotton must be got out and weighed, and we must have a regular account of it."

He was a young man of energy. This was the first time he had been entrusted to superintend the execution of this work. He made his arrangements over night, spoke to the men about their carts and horses. He resolved to begin very early in the morning, and he instructed the laborers to be ready at half past four. His master came in and seeing him sitting in the counting room, looked very black, supposing that his commands had been executed.

"I thought," said the master, "you were told to get out that cargo this morning."

"It's all done, sir," said the young man, "and here is the account of it."

He never looked behind him from that moment—never! His character was fixed, confidence was established. He was found to be the man to do the thing with promptness. He very soon came to be one who could not be spared—he was as necessary to the firm as any of the partners.

A SAD DEATH.

Monday night when the death angel came and claimed John McGuire it marked one of the saddest deaths in the history of Statesboro, as no relatives or kin people of any kind were at the bedside when death came, and the parting was one that will be hard to forget.

John McGuire while in Statesboro had made friends numbered by his acquaintances, and a few weeks ago when it was learned he was seriously ill with typhoid fever his friends were quick in going to his bedside, and he was at once removed to the sanitarium and everything possible was done for his relief but all to no avail, as death slowly approached, regardless of the skilled physicians who so faithfully rendered him assistance.

Mr. McGuire was about 34 years old, and was employed at J. D. Brown's barber shop. His remains were interred in the city cemetery Tuesday morning by his friends.

Modern Brotherhood

of America Pays Claim

This week Mrs. Sallie L. Riggs received from the Modern Brotherhood of America a check for $2,000 payment of the death claim of her husband Mr. B. Y. Riggs, who died some few weeks ago and who was a member of this organization. This is one of the strong evidence of the kind in the State and this claim speaks for them much more promptly in settling their claims.
