Faculty governance is a critical dimension of university life. Through its processes of faculty governance, the university institutionalizes a space for critical self-reflection and ensures that relevant academic expertise is brought to bear on questions of curriculum, academic and professional standards, and other matters of pedagogy, scholarship and creative activity central to the university's existence. Faculty governance can also sometimes be, for those who volunteer the time and effort to support it, tedious and exacting, and seem to be ineffectual in the face of those political and bureaucratic imperatives that increasingly weigh so heavily upon university life.

Recognizing the necessity and demands of faculty governance and the dependence of faculty governance on the commitment of university citizens, the Georgia Southern University Faculty Senate commemorates the long and distinguished service of Dr. Candy Schille to this body. Accepting the responsibilities of service as a faculty senator starting in 1991 for terms that amounted to over 15 years and serving in a variety of offices while in the Senate, including as Faculty Senate Moderator twice (2000-1, 2001-2), Faculty Senate Secretary four times (1991-2, 1994-5, 1996-7, 1997-8) and as an elected member of the Senate Executive Committee (2012-13), Candy demonstrated, as few others have, exceptional levels of care for, and commitment to, faculty governance. She was an exemplary citizen of the university and we think it right and proper to make public acknowledgement of her valued contributions.
