A holiday feast

Thanksgiving by the pounds

By Jenny Miller

News editor

The holiday festivities started early when over 500 students came to the Holiday Evening Meal at Landrum Court last night.

The elaborate menu featured eggplant soup, arugula salads, smoked seafood, turkey carving stations, traditional dressing and even a chocolate fountain.

The Thanksgiving feast is not just another night at Landrum, taking days to prepare for and a staff of more than 40 people to make it possible.

"It's definitely been busier, but it's been good," said chef Jason Pickford, who helped to cook most of the meal.

The holiday meal has become an annual tradition for some and has been served for more than 20 years. The feast was not offered for a few years in the 1990s, but was resurrected and has grown every year since then.

The Landrum dining hall was transformed for the evening, with holiday decorations, white cloths on the tables and music professor Michael Braz playing piano. The Landrum Court feeds around 3,000 students every day.

What goes into a Landrum Holiday Meal?

- 200 pounds of potatoes
- 200 pounds of ham
- 6 full turkeys
- 18 turkey breasts
- 20 pans of dressing
- 50 pounds of cantaloupe
- 32 pounds of strawberries

• A staff of 40 to cook and prepare for four to five days before the feast.

Director 'echoes' dad's life

By Justin Burris

Staff writer

A film director shares his father's journey to Vietnam as a medical doctor and spoke about the movie to honor him. The house was packed Tuesday evening at the Russell Union Theater for the screening of "As the Call, So the Echo."

The documentary is set in rural Vietnam and tells the story of Alex Moreano, a doctor from America, who donated equipment to a local hospital. The film doesn't simply dwell on the poor state of the area, or the lack of equipment the doctors have, but focuses more on the personal stories of the doctor and the people he encounters there. Moreano describes his experiences as being emotionally challenging, but he feels as if he had gained much from his trip.

The film was shot and directed by Keir Moreano, Alex Moreano's son, who described the experience as more than just an opportunity to film, but also a great experience in seeing just what his father does in the medical field.

After the presentation of the film, both Moreanos stayed for a question and answer session in which students asked them questions about the film and their experiences in Vietnam. Both of them said that they felt the people of the country had been very inviting and their experiences with the people were exceptional.

Keir Moreano also screened another movie that he filmed in Ethiopia, "A Child's Reach." Keir said that he enjoys doing documentaries. "Often, real life is more interesting and telling than fictional movies," he said.

The film serves as more than a way to tell the experiences of the American doctor, it helps students to understand see DIRECTOR, page 3

Out of the Black Box

Expansion to open in fall of '07

By Lyndell Nelson

Staff writer

The Black Box theater is an intimate setting for student performances in the communication arts trailer. The venue has seen over 10 years worth of student acts, and was once a classroom. The construction of the new building located behind Hendricks Hall will soon house a new Black Box theater as well as more studio space for art students.

"The Black Box theater we have been using is a converted classroom," said Rebecca Kennerly, assistant professor in the communication arts department. "It has served us well, but, it is in a trailer."

According to Director of Theater Jim Harbour, the new theater will have many new features. "President Grube has really spearheaded the construction," Harbour said. "The new theater is designed to be flexible in terms of audience configuration.

We will be able to move the seats, so it will be easy to change the setting. It will be able to accommodate between 150 and 180 seats versus 89 in the current theater. There will be theater lights 30 feet above the floor as opposed to seven feet in the existing theater. It will also include a catwalk to do camera work without requiring a ladder."

The theater will offer more than versatile seating arrangements. Also included will be dressing rooms, a green room that will double as a rehearsal hall and a two-story lobby outside the entrance of the theater to display works created by fine arts students.

Kennerly feels that a new student-operated theater is necessary since the department is growing.

"Our student involvement in the theater and performance area is thriving and we really need a more professional venue for training actors and training theater technicians, as well as for the audience who attends our performances," she said.

Once the renovation of Veasy Hall is complete, the current communication arts trailer will be removed. The entire department will be relocated to the refurbished building.

"Veasy will offer computer labs, faculty offices and nine classrooms," Harbour said. There will also be a small practice theater in the former residence hall.

All of the changes occurring within the communication arts department are possible through revenue granted and approved by the Board of Regents. A minor capital project is defined as any development that will cost $5 million or less to complete.

Although a name has not yet been decided for the new building, Harbour believes that it will be ready in time for the first production of the fall 2007 semester.

Teachers to Eagles

Editor's note: Georgia Southern will begin its official centennial celebration in December. This story is part of a weekly feature on the university's history.

By Rachel McDaniel

Executive editor

Georgia Southern basketball has a long-standing tradition of winning. Before the surge of six football national titles and the emergence of current icons like Paul Johnson and Erk Russell, basketball was the only sport to watch. Basketball took center stage while the GSU football program was on hold during the depression. Homecoming celebrations during this time took place during the basketball season.

The Teachers, as they were called, became conference champions for the first time in 1931 under the leadership of Coach Byron Lambert "Crook" Smith. Smith also coached several championship teams in football, basketball, baseball and track from 1929 to 1941.

"There are many things in life more important as character builders, that makes for better preparation in life's battles, than victory. Victory is always sweet, but victory without sportsmanship, loyalty and courage is not worthwhile," said Smith in a 1932 George-Anne article.

The 1950s was a decade of domination for GSU basketball, with the small-town team beating bigger schools like the University of Georgia, Georgia Tech, Florida and Florida State.

James Boyd Searce, called the 'littlest prof' by the Atlanta Constitution in 1955, led the team to the 1957 Gator Bowl, beating the Bulldogs 85-57. A teacher and a coach, Searce was thought by many to be one of the best instructors on campus. After the huge win for the Eagles, local boosters worked together to get a gymnasium that could hold more than 2,000 fans. In 1955, the team moved into the brand new Hanner Gym.

In 1960, a competition was held to determine a team mascot, and in an edition of the George-Anne that year, "Eagles" was agreed upon as the name to appear on the basketball team's jerseys.

"The GSU Eagles was suggested see EAGLES, page 3

Feast and fun with royal court Friday

By Frenchi Jones
Staff writer

Devour upon the elaborate sights and sounds of opera while consuming the foods and drinks of a Madrigal Feast.

The Georgia Southern Opera will present "Amahl and the Night Visitors" at 6:30 p.m. on Friday and Saturday in the atrium of the IT Building.

Spectators will feast upon Cornish game hen, roasted pork and roasted vegetables while being serenaded by voices of GSU music students.

Sara Hancock, director of the opera and GSU music instructor, said this year's dinner-feature is expected to delight everyone in attendance.

"It is absolutely beautiful. This year we have established a royal court," Hancock said.

"We have Lord Edward Rutherford, who will be played by psychology Director John Murray."

The one-act opera will feature the story of a young, crippled boy and his poor mother. The pair receives a special gift after being visited by the three wise men traveling to see baby Jesus.

"It is such a precious story," she said.

For the past six weeks the opera's cast has been rehearsing their roles.

"This is the second year we have done this," Hancock said. "It takes a great deal of planning. We have had to displace all the students in the IT building, four students had to learn the dance and we had to find two boys from the community through the Statesboro Youth Chorale."

Laura Carroll is one of 20 vocal performance students who will sing in the production.

Carroll plays the role of Amahl's mother, a character she described as exasperated by her disabled son.

"Playing the role of the mother was not as easy as I thought it would be," she said. "I have never played a maternal character before, but once we learned the words and the music it was easier to get into it."

Twelve-year-old Cal Bookhoop and 14-year-old Clay Oldham play Amahl.

In an unfortunate twist of fate, Oldham really got into character. While playing Frisbee in the front yard of his house, he broke two of his toes.

"I love it. It is my first opera and I have always loved singing and acting," he said.

Carroll shares in his excitement. "I don't think that by the end of the night there will be a dry eye in the house," she said.

Tickets for the show are $35 for adults and $27 for students. For tickets call 912-486-7999.

Actors rehearse for the Madrigal Feast, which will take place Friday and Saturday.

Artists shows 'emotion' at downtown exhibition

Special photo

Jennifer Garrett's artwork will be on display in the third floor of the Averitt Center for the Arts in downtown Statesboro from Nov. 20 through Nov. 26.

Special to the G-A

Jennifer Wedincamp Garrett, bachelor of fine arts candidate at Georgia Southern University, will open her senior painting exhibition, Emotion At An Echo, on Nov. 20, in the third floor gallery of the Averitt Center for the Arts. The Betty Foy Sanders Department of Art sponsors the exhibition, which will close with a reception on Sunday, Nov. 26, from 5 p.m. - 8 p.m.

Jennifer Garrett is a native of Emanuel County and grew up in Canoochee. Her interest in art began at an early age, and Garrett believes she inherited a "creativity gene" from her parents. Influenced by her father who worked with wood and her mother with sewing, she also watched her grandfather's ingenuity in his taxidermy shop as he would "create" odd animals complete with chicken feet, boar's heads and other parts from various animals.

Garrett has encouraged creativity in her twin daughters. "There are always art supplies on the counters and our paintings line the hallway. I believe creating art brings out positive energy."

About her artwork, Garrett writes: "Art has a spiritual value. Its strength lies in its ability to serve as a point of connection between an individual and something larger than oneself. Color is used in my images as a means of expressing light, as well as emotion. Texture is as important as my color choices. I have been influenced by the energy and motion of the works of abstract expressionists including Arshile Gorky, Mark Rothko, William de Kooning and, especially, Jackson Pollock."

She will also be exhibiting her work at "Monkey Love Dessert Bar and Gallery" in Pooler and "CPR Fitness" in Swainsboro following her senior exhibition.

The exhibition and reception are free and open to the public. The Averitt Center for the Arts is open Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The New Sigmund Romberg Orchestra performs Nov. 25 at 7:30 p.m. in the Performing Arts Center.

Orchestra kicks off holiday season

GSU News Service

The Performing Arts Center (PAC) at Georgia Southern is hosting a joyous celebration of the holiday season. The New Sigmund Romberg Orchestra and Soloists will present "A Viennese Christmas" at the PAC on Nov. 25 at 7:30 p.m.

The show will feature a mixture of traditional Christmas songs and classic Viennese tunes. Tickets are $30 plus tax per person for the general public. GSU faculty, staff and students will receive a 10 percent discount. Groups of 15 or more from outside the university community are also eligible for a 10 percent discount.

The New Sigmund Romberg

Orchestra and Soloists continue the tradition of their namesake, who lived from 1887 until 1951. A native of Hungary, Romberg moved to the U.S., where he became a well-known and popular composer of operettas. More than a half-dozen of his works became motion pictures, most notably the original "Viennese Nights."

Romberg collaborated with Al Jolson, Oscar Hammerstein II, Cole Porter, George Gershwin and Gus Kahn.

In 1940, Romberg put together the first concert tour by the orchestra which bears his name.

More than six decades later, the New Sigmund Romberg Orchestra and Soloists is billed as "America's first touring pops orchestra" and remains a popular attraction throughout the country.

The box office is open every Tuesday through Friday from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. and one hour before he show. To purchase tickets call toll free 866 PAC-ARTS, or visit <http://ceps.georgiasouthern.edu/pac>.

SCIENCE

If temperatures continue to rise ...

A report by a British economist suggests that the world's economy could shrink if steps are not taken to curb greenhouse gas emissions.

Emissions report

Highest greenhouse gas emissions, in millions of tons of carbon dioxide equivalent, 2004 (percent change since 1990):

United States	7,068 (+15.8%)
European Union	4,228 (-0.6%)
Russia	2,024 (-32.0%)
Japan	1,355 (+6.5%)
Canada	758 (+26.6%)

■ Under the 1997 Kyoto accord, 35 nations agreed to cut emissions by an average 5 percent below 1990 levels by 2012; the United States did not sign the accord

Dire predictions

Projected effects if global temperatures rise by these amounts within the next 50 years

	1.8°F (1°C)	3.6°F (2°C)	5.4°F (3°C)	7.2°F (4°C)	9°F (5°C)
Food	Crop losses, especially in developing countries
Weather	Rising intensity of storms, forest fires, droughts, floods and heat waves
Health	Higher death tolls from malnutrition, heat stress, malaria, dengue fever
Ecosystems	Damage to coral reefs Up to 40 percent of species could face extinction
Water	Small glaciers disappear, causing water shortages	Significant water shortages	Flooding from rising sea levels; drought and flood could displace 200 million
Economy	Global GDP cut by 3 percent		Cut by 10 percent	Worst case: 20 percent cut (on a scale of world wars, Great Depression)

■ Acting now to cut emissions would cost about 1 percent of global GDP each year

Scientists, public disagree on warming

McClatchy Newspapers

When it comes to global warming, scientists and the American public aren't talking on the same wavelength.

Most scientists believe that humans and their machines are mainly responsible for the 1.4 degree Fahrenheit rise in the world's average temperature in the last 100 years. Most Americans think otherwise.

Last month, a group of 18 climate scientists, including two Nobel Prize winners, submitted an affidavit to the Supreme Court declaring that they're 99 percent certain that "greenhouse gas emissions from human activities cause global climate change, endangering human health and welfare."

Only 41 percent of those polled last summer by the Washington-based Pew Research Center, however, accepted the argument that climate change is due primarily to human activities, such as burning fossil fuels in cars, trucks and factories.

The rest of the 1,501 adults in the survey either said there's no solid evidence that the Earth is warming, or that if there is, the extra heat is the result of natural climate patterns, such as fluctuations in the sun's radiation.

This public skepticism flies in the face of the most widely accepted scientific assessment of the cause of global warming, which lays the blame primarily on "greenhouse gases" generated by humans.

The leading greenhouse gas is carbon dioxide (CO2), which is emitted by cars, trucks and factories and traps the sun's heat in the atmosphere.

The official scientific consensus is contained in a massive report issued in 2001 by the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC), an organization that the United Nations created to collect and assess the work of climate scientists.

The IPCC report concluded that "most of the observed warming over the last 50 years is likely to have been due to the increase in greenhouse gas concentrations." The authors defined "most" to mean more than half and "likely" to mean that they're 66 percent to 90 percent sure that their statement is true.

Hundreds of scientists from around the globe are now working on an updated IPCC report to be completed next year.

The report will reflect the results of the last five years of research and more accurately define the human and natural roles in global warming.

New aquarium leader

The Atlanta Journal-Constitution

Benefactor Bernie Marcus is turning over the operations of the hugely successful Georgia Aquarium to an appointed board of directors to assure that it's not a one-man show — even though he was elected chairman of the board.

Marcus, who personally contributed $250 million toward the $300 million aquarium, said Tuesday he wants the year-old tourist destination to outlive him.

The group of business and community leaders, which also includes Marcus' wife, Billi, will take full control on Dec. 1.

"I'm still chairman, but all the decision-making will be done by the board," said Marcus. "I am passing it to them debt-free and with a wealth of development and expansion plans," he said.

The 1960s would usher in an interesting era for GSU basketball. In a 1964 match-up against Jacksonville University, Fran Florian scored 60 points and set a GSU record.

1965 was the first year of integration at Georgia Southern. Searce, then a legend on campus, requested permission from the athletic committee to recruit two or more black players. In 1966, Chancellor George Simpson allegedly thought it not a good idea to integrate the team, and Searce decided his recruiting. When the players Searce hoped to recruit began playing well at other schools, he got the go-ahead to integrate from school administration.

One year later, Roger Moore became the first black athlete to receive a scholarship in the University System. He led the Eagles to become a Division I competitor in 1988 and dissolved the color barrier at GSU.

Doctors short on flu shots

The Atlanta Journal-Constitution

Doctors in Atlanta and around the country are frustrated at continued delays in the distribution of flu vaccines that have left some physicians' offices short of shots a little more than a week before families gather for Thanksgiving.

Dr. Sandra Fryhofer, an Atlanta internist and past president of the 120,000-member American College of Physicians, called the vaccine distribution system "haphazard."

Fryhofer, who said she doesn't have all the vaccine she needs for patients, said many doctors are angry that the nation still has a problem distributing vaccine, even as manufacturers churn out a record amount.

"I'm at the American Medical Association meeting in Nevada," she said by telephone. "A doctor just said he didn't have all his vaccine yet. We're wondering, when are we going to get it right? There's plenty around, everybody says, but a lot of doctors don't have it, or don't have enough."

For now, officials are advising Georgians to call their local health department or physician to find out where flu vaccines are available. Some retailers that offer shots, such as Kroger and Publix stores, have them available now. Shots generally cost about $25.

Dr. Julie Gerberding, director of the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta, said Monday that 77 million flu doses had been distributed of the 110 million to 115 million promised by manufacturers. Officials said the rest of the vaccine is in the pipeline but can't say when it will arrive.

Many doctors worry that grocery and drugstore retailers, who buy the largest quantities of vaccine, get preferential treatment.

The Holiday Basketball Tournament takes place this weekend at the RAC.

By MJ Trahan
Staff writer

If you are looking for something fun to watch this weekend, then head to the RAC and watch teams compete in the Holiday Basketball Tournament, Friday Nov. 17- Sunday, Nov. 19 at the RAC.

Twenty-one teams in an all men's division have entered to play in the tournament. Team entry forms were turned in last Monday, and according to the intramurals staff at CRI, this weekend is going to be a tremendous turn-out.

"We're glad that so many teams have shown an interest in the tournament and want to get some playing time in before the regular season starts. It's a great way for teams to practice and scout out their competition for the year," said Matt Rice, intramurals graduate assistant.

With the opening of the expansion and an increase in playable court space, the team entries for the tournament nearly doubled from last year's tournament.

The double-elimination tournament will begin Friday night. Games will be played through Sunday evening, with the presentation of awards following the championship game.

"With twenty-one teams playing this weekend, that guarantees around forty-eight games of good, competitive basketball. It's going to be a lot of fun to watch, and I'm glad I could be a part of organizing it," said Tommy Segi, intramurals graduate assistant.

Slavery expert lectures today

By Avina Darmadjaja
Staff writer

Slavery seems to be a topic from the past. In truth, it is estimated that 27 million people are held in some form of slavery today. This number is more than at any time in history. The modern-day slavery is occurring all around us and is becoming a global issue.

As part of International Week and the Zia Hashmi Lecture Series, the center for international studies coordinates a lecture titled "New Slavery in the Global Economy."

Kevin Bales will deliver the lecture today in the Nessmith-Lane building. There is going to be a reception at 6 p.m. in the Southern Ballroom prior to the lecture, which starts at 7 p.m. in the assembly hall.

Our purpose is to raise awareness about modern day slavery and human trafficking," said Angie Threatte, coordinator of special event and planning in the center for international studies.

Bales is the world's leading expert on modern slavery and president of Free the Slaves, a non-profit organization dedicated to abolish slavery around the world.

He received his Ph.D. at the London School of Economics and is currently a professor of sociology at Roehampton University in London.

His award-winning book, "Disposable People: New Slavery in the Global Economy," was nominated for the Pulitzer Prize and has been published in ten other languages. Most people's image of slavery is one of ships and plantations.

But today's slavery exists in a form that transcends all types of labor. They are merely disposable tools that are used to increase profits.

Most slaves are forced to work in agriculture, mining and prostitution. Most slaves are paid nothing at all and the physical and psychological violence used against them is so harsh that they cannot escape their condition as a slave.

Although it exists in almost every country, slavery is illegal. It is universally seen as a violation to basic human rights.

Former Black Panther speaks at GSU

By Magaela Luke
Staff writer

Georgia Southern students had the opportunity to witness a dialogue of Shujaa Graham, an ex-Black Panther Party member, freed prisoner and amnesty advocate, as he relayed his experience of being wrongly assigned to death row.

In his discussion, he gave an account of his prison experience, how he was framed in a prison guard murder case and the process which exonerated him only days before his scheduled execution.

"This discussion is interesting in that it includes topics relating not only to criminal justice and amnesty movements, but also broader areas like race, ethics and politics," said Leah Daigle, a criminal justice professor.

"The program sheds light onto an era in which we students were not able to live and a subject that some students may not feel comfortable addressing," said Sean Bethune, a senior political science education major.

Graham, who was imprisoned in 1969 on a robbery charge, became involved with the Black Prison Movement of the Black Panther Party in the 1970s.

"The Black Panther Party was a radical Black Nationalist group that stood for armed resistance against the oppression of African Americans. Some people have misunderstood this group," said Erik Brooks, a professor of political science.

Graham was vocal about sub-standard prison conditions and other political issues during that time.

He was accused and convicted in the killing of a prison guard in Soledad Prison in November 1973.

In 1981, after two more trials, Graham was found innocent by a jury and exonerated and freed from death row. Ever since then, Graham has fought to abolish the death penalty.

Shujaa Graham has been an outspoken advocate to abolish the death penalty after being falsely accused and sent to death row.

QB Trent Green to start for Chiefs

Kansas City Chiefs quarterback Trent Green will start in Sunday's match-up against the Oakland Raiders. Head Coach Herm Edwards announced the decision Wednesday after updating the injury report by saying that Green had fully recovered from the concussion he suffered in the first game of the season against the Cincinnati Bengals. Doctors have given Green full medical clearance to play.

Girardi, Leyland named MLB Managers of the Year

Six weeks after getting fired from the Florida Marlins, Joe Girardi has been named the National League Manager of the Year for keeping a team full of rookies and only $16 million in payroll in contention until the final weeks of the season. Beating out new York Mets Manager Willie Randolph, Girardi became the first manager to win the award despite having a losing season.

After leading the Tigers to a World Series appearance, Detroit's Jim Leyland won his third Manager of the Year award, first with the American League. Hired just last season, Leyland helped lead the Tigers to their first World Series appearance since 1984.

Eagles look for a bright spot going into Saturday's final game

By Eric Robinson
Managing editor of operations

Following a disappointing 13-10 loss to rival Furman last Saturday, the Georgia Southern Eagles return to Paulson Stadium with the hopes of ending their 3-7 season on a positive note. As with every game the Eagles have played this year, this one shouldn't be a cakewalk.

The Eagles will conclude their season against the 7-3 Central Arkansas Bears, who are led offensively by running back Ross Brown and wide receiver Aaron Fairouz.

Brown has rushed for 838 yards on 148 carries and eight touchdowns. Fairouz has 54 catches for 731 yards, six receiving touchdowns and one punt return touchdown. Defensive end Jacob Ford has six sacks and 15.5 tackles for a loss on the year.

"They're a transition team from division II in I-AA. Like a lot of those situations, they've taken a lot of junior college transfers. They're a very talented team," said Head Coach Brian VanGorder.

The Eagles will have to cage the Bears early. UCA has totaled 96 points in the first quarter, while giving up only 18. The first half has been no problem for the Eagles this year, as they have out-scored their opponents 128-97. The second half has been a different story. The Eagles have scored only 77 points while giving up 119.

The GSU defense held strong Saturday, holding the Paladins to just 13 points and giving up only 296 yards of total offense. Running back Cedrick Gipson was held to 78 yards, and quarterback Renaldo Gray threw for 125 before being injured in the fourth quarter.

The Paladins dominated the clock, however, possessing the ball nearly 10 minutes longer than the Eagles. With speedy Jayson Foster under center most of the game, GSU netted 221 yards on the ground but only 57 through the air.

"Taking [the ball] out of shotgun was a little bit different. But as the game progressed, I got a little comfortable back there," said Foster.

Though quarterback Travis Clark was banged up last week, VanGorder said he should be ready for the Bears.

"He's healthy. He feels better this week than he has the last couple of weeks," said VanGorder.

VanGorder said that the GSU defense has made effective strides in getting better over the last few weeks.

"Last week we played a strong game with well-prepared defense," he said. "They gave up a couple of explosive plays though. I thought it was their best effort. I think they have a good, confident attitude about them right now."

Kickoff is scheduled for 1 p.m. at Paulson Stadium.

Quote of the week

"They really execute well and their kids are unselfish and they have good ball handlers. It's tough to pressure them. I don't think we had as much energy as we had [Sunday], but I think a lot of that had to do with the way Georgia Southern played. They take the energy out of you."

Basketball prepares for Illini

By Will Adams

The Georgia Southern men's basketball team hits the road again this week when they travel to Champaign on Friday to take on Illinois at 8 p.m.

Heading into Friday night's match up, the Illini hold the nation's longest non-conference win streak and have the best home court win percentage with a record of 57-2.

Despite losing to the No. 11 Duke Blue Devils in the semifinal regional of the CBE Classic, the Eagles (1-1) look to become the first non-conference team in nearly four seasons to defeat the Fighting Illini (2-0) in their house at Assembly Hall.

After graduating the Southern Conference Player of the Year in guard Elton Nesbitt, the Eagles hope to rely on more team efforts if they want to be able to compete with the likes of perennial powerhouses like Duke and Illinois.

"Obviously 21 points per game and the player of the year is going to be hard to replace," said Head Coach Jeff Price. "But I don't think you do it with individuals, you do it by committee, and we have a good group of guards back that can step up and it will be interesting to see who does. From a point production standpoint, I don't think there's any question that our guards will be able to do it. We will miss Elton and that go-to kind of guy, but I think we'll find a new one."

Senior Donte Gennie totaled a career-high 26 points, while junior Louis Graham blocked five shots and added 20 points and 11 rebounds to help lift the Eagles to their highest point total under Price in a win over UC-Davis last Sunday.

"Donte has been our glue—I thought he was the glue for our team last year. We expect him to have a great season and he can play the 'one' or the 'two' and be a combo-type guard. With Dwayne at the point we'll probably move Donte over to the 'two' a little bit. He's a solid overall player and an all-conference caliber player," said Price.

"I'm thrilled with our effort. I thought we played extremely hard. In your first game you just never know what your team is going to look like, so I was pretty pleasantly surprised. We shot the ball well early in the game and I thought that broke their spirit a little bit."

In GSU's last meeting with the Illini, the Eagles were defeated 83-52 in Nov. 1997.

Students can travel to New York

By Katherine Dyches
Staff writer

Bright lights in the big city can really lighten up your winter break this year. Eagle Entertainment is sponsoring an affordable trip to New York City right after finals, from Saturday, Dec. 9 through Friday, Dec. 15 for Georgia Southern students who are ready for a big change.

"New York during the holidays is really beautiful, especially with Rockefeller Center all dressed up," said Bill Pickett, director of the office of student activities. He said the trip only cost $250 per person, including transportation by charter bus to New York and lodging at The Hampton Inn at the Meadowlands in New Jersey which is just across the Hudson River from Manhattan.

"Last year's winter break trip was skiing in Colorado, and it was a little pricier, so this year we wanted to make the trip more affordable," said Pickett. "It will be a long trip, but we'll be taking a charter bus with movies and restrooms, so it won't be too bad."

Pickett said he hopes GSU students will see some sights and attend shows by being in the audience of the Today show, or visiting other free shows like The Late Show with David Letterman or The Daily Show with John Stewart.

For trips into the city, the hotel offers a complimentary shuttle within a five-mile radius, and a free shuttle to a train station that travels to Penn Station in central Manhattan. Pickett said the hotel is within walking distance of several restaurants, and right near the Lincoln Tunnel.

GSU's charter bus will also offer daily rides into the city to cut down on the cost of transportation around the city for students.

Once in New York, students are free to plan their own itineraries. The city offers an endless array of activities to satisfy anyone's taste. For the sight-seer, there are world-famous landmarks to visit such as The Statue of Liberty, Ellis Island, the Empire State Building, Central Park and Ground Zero.

A trip down Fifth Avenue could satisfy any shop-a-holic's dreams. Or for the theatre-lover, catch a show on Broadway. Ice skating in Rockefeller Center could put anyone in the holiday spirit, or stop by for the taping of The Today Show and maybe get your five seconds of fame.

One thing is for sure, there is no shortage of ways to stay busy in The Big Apple. Don't forget, New York City is often called "The Greatest City in the World."

For students interested in attending, a non-refundable deposit of $100 is due before Wednesday, Nov. 22. The remaining balance of $150 will be due on December 1. Payment can be made by check, Visa or MasterCard.

For more information, or to sign up, contact the office of student activities at 912-486-7270.

New York is cold

It doesn't take a genius to figure out that New York is going to be cold in December. So if you are not a fan of cold weather you should probably not take that trip.

However, you should still probably get out of the 'Boro. A change of scenery will do you good after a stressful week of finals.

To avoid the cold, you could grab some friends and take a road trip to Florida. The beach is still nice this time of year. You won't be swimming much, but just getting the sand between your toes is worth the trip.

Really it doesn't matter where you as long as you dress appropriately for your destination.

Take a trip during the holidays, but check the weather before you go.

Sister Hazel to perform tonight at Retrievers

By Cindy Ann Kilgo
Staff writer

Blues-rock band Sister Hazel, made famous by their 90's hit "All For You," will be performing Thursday night at Retriever's at 10 p.m.

Sister Hazel is a southern-rooted band originally from Gainesville, Florida.

The band is composed of five talented members: Drew, Ken, Ryan, Jett and Mark. They are otherwise known as the "Hazelnuts," and have been composing and performing music together for more than a decade.

Their music attracts all ages. It is even known to "gap" the generations. The band's website notes their music as, "comfortable and friendly, like old friends."

The band released their latest album, "Absolutely" in October. Within the first week, the album reached 86 on the Billboard Top 200. The band is mostly known for its heavy touring nature. Touring in the south is almost a trademark for this band.

They have hit schools such as the University of Mississippi, Auburn and the University of Alabama.

The south isn't the only place Sister Hazel has performed, however. They have toured all over the United States, and as a result have a wide fan base that stretches to all corners of the country.

They are also scheduled to perform in Lynyrd Skynyrd's "Gimme Three Days" cruise in the Bahamas during early January.

There is still time to get in and hear some of this roots rock music.

Retriever's employee Nathan Queen said, "Tickets will only be sold in advance. They can be bought up until tomorrow mid-afternoon."

"We are expecting a sold out crowd, and you can't pay at the door," he said.

The fact that it may be a sold-out venue doesn't scare some people from trying to get in on the action.

Freshman Calie Elam said, "Sister Hazel is one of my favorite bands. I wouldn't mind standing in line for an hour to purchase a ticket to see them play."

Band member Drew Copeland is opening.

Tickets are $10. For tickets or more information, contact Retriever's Sports Bar and Grill, at 912-681-2444.

CLUB FOCUS The Plug

By Avina Darmadjaja
Staff writer

If you ever walk by the IT auditorium on a Tuesday night at exactly 8 p.m., you have probably seen a big banner outside of the door with Chi Alpha written all over it, and maybe you have even heard a band playing inside.

You might think that a sorority or fraternity gathering is going on inside, but what is really going on is "The Plug."

The Plug is a weekly service sponsored by Chi Alpha, the youngest yet fastest growing Christian ministry on campus.

The name Chi Alpha comes from the Greek christou apostoloi meaning "Christ's sent ones" or "Christ's Ambassadors."

"Our mission is to connect students to God and to each other," said Brad Lacy, campus minister and director of Chi Alpha.

Three and a half years ago, Brad and his wife Stacy came to Statesboro to start Chi Alpha because God puts the burning passion in their hearts to minister to college students.

"I join Chi Alpha not because it is better or worse than other Christian ministries but because I really like Brad's vision for on-campus ministry," said Brett Werkheiser, student and Chi Alpha's worship leader. "And of course because doors are open for me to worship."

Save it for Sunrise performed along with three other bands to an energetic crowd at Apex Saturday night.

Bands rock-out the 'Boro

By Jessica Emery
Staff writer

Last Saturday night Apex was full of enthusiastic students waiting to rock out with four distinct performances: Achilles' Downfall, Save it for Sunrise, Dora Maar and The Silent Escape.

"Rock in the 'Boro" was sponsored by Apex and organized Matt Vigliotti and his team of promoters. Vigliotti is a Georgia Southern student and the founder of Eccentric Energy Entertainment.

Local progressive rock band Achilles' Downfall set the bar high by starting off the show with natural stage presence and clear vocals by Drew Smith. The band members appeared low key despite their high energy performance and occasional screams.

Chaos arrived when Save it for Sunrise took the stage. The band from Bainbridge, Georgia, had the crowd on their feet, giving plenty of positive feedback. With seven band members, screaming, and a keyboard, this band gave a powerful, energetic metal performance that transcended their emo appeal to the crowd's screaming approval.

Dora Maar, a five member rock band from Brunswick, Georgia was third in line for the stage. Self-described as a "Rock and Screamo" band, Dora Maar was the only band to have a mosh-pit.

Brandon Suggs, vocalist, said they are influenced by the bands Emery as well as Chiodos, although they try to stray away from sounding like other bands. "Since being signed with Still Movement records the band has more help," said Suggs. "It's like a family."

Their performance Saturday was similar to the sound of The Used. Georgia Southern student Nicole Irish, originally from Bainbridge, said, "I went to high school with these guys, and was listening to their CD on the way here" But Irish wasn't the only Bainbridge local, many friends and fans drove to the 'Boro to show support.

Last but not least was a rock band from Atlanta, The Silent Escape. Comprised of five members, they closed the show with the crowd screaming, "One more song!" to which the band obliged. On stage, The Silent Escape was energetic, with their newest member, vocalist Brandon Cawood swinging his microphone, splashing the crowd with water and even jumping up onto a side stage.

The show was an overall success. Apex owner, Roman, said, "I've been trying to bring back the live music scene to Statesboro for years. It is the biggest turnout for Rock here in a long time."

He also mentioned how he remembered years ago when it was all live rock bands there.

Energy Entertainment advertising representative Jessica Richard said she hopes for more rock concerts like this to occur and she was impressed with the turnout.

Student playwrights look for local actors

By Kevin Bell
Staff writer

Georgia Southern's student playwrights are seeking talented students to volunteer for their quick but fun 10 minute plays. The second annual production will be held Nov. 19 & 20. The 10-minute plays are written, directed and performed by students here at GSU. Students who are interested in acting, public speaking or writing will find this a perfect opportunity to perform in front of an audience.

Volunteers need not have previous acting experience as the plays focus solely on the voice and communicating the action through dialogue.

Students will meet with the playwright and rehearse for a short time before performing for the public two hours later.

In addition to attending the performance, the audience will be able to respond to the playwrights and to give the students feedback on their plays.

This input is applied to the plays so the following night the audience can see how the students respond and change their material, ensuring that each night is different.

"We had several people in the audience who came back every night to see how the plays had changed, especially since their comments contributed to the revisions," said professor Stephanie Routman when discussing the first annual 10-minute play.

"As a playwright myself, it is always thrilling to hear your words performed out loud and to hear the audience respond," she said.

The 10-minute play was originally the creation of Jon Jory at the Actor's Theater of Louisville's Humana Festival in 1977.

These plays have spread in popularity all over the country because they are relatively inexpensive to produce.

It challenges writers and actors to develop characters and stories in a set amount of time.

GSU students also submit their plays to a regional festival where eight students in the region are selected.

A student whose play is selected will have their trip to the festival paid for. Their play will be performed.

The top playwright selected will have an entire week paid trip to the nationals in Washington, DC at the Kennedy Center.

"The regional and national opportunities are why I encourage the students in playwriting to work on 10-minute plays and why we produce an annual 10-minute play festival," said Routman.

All volunteers who are interested in performing for the student's plays should arrive at the Black Box Theatre in the communication arts building on Sunday, Nov. 19 at noon and in the communication arts room 1006 on Monday, Nov. 20 at 5 p.m.

The readings will be open to the public at 2 p.m. on the Nov. 19 and 5 p.m. on Nov. 20.

Students who are interested in writing their own plays for next spring's 10-minute play should contact Stephanie Routman, who is located at the communication arts building.
