Let Us Give Thanks Today

Today is Thanksgiving Day. It's a long time back to 1621 when Governor William Bradford of the Plymouth Colony appointed a day for feasting and thanksgiving for the pilgrims.

Much has happened. There have been years of war. There have been years of peace. There have been years of depression. There have been years of prosperity.

There have been epidemics and periods when diseases were rampant, with resulting discoveries of relief.

There has been industrial progress, educational progress, social progress.

There have been religious revivals.

And now in 1958 we observe another Thanksgiving Day.

And it might be well to review the feeling and emotions with which we observe it. It's observance ought to be in the best sense religious.

Much of our thankfulness will be purely selfish. There are many for whom things have gone well since last Thanksgiving. Many family circles remained unbroken, with no wasting sickness invading the home. Prosperity has left its blessings. Because of these things people imagine they are grateful, and we're sure they are and that they are sincere; but such gratitude is of the essence of selfishness. It is dependent upon exterior conditions. It draws its inspiration from clear skies and smooth sailing, and hence it is fitful and evanescent as the alterations of sunlight and shadow.

If these conditions of personal comfort and prosperity are in themselves the ground of thankfulness, where in the hour of adversity shall we find occasion for rejoicing?

There is another and more grave side. There have been pain and losses for some. There have been disappointments and sorrow for others.

Where in these things is there reason for gratitude and thanksgiving? Is there no place for thanksgiving in the broken homes, homes where sickness and death have invaded?

It is under these conditions where we find the true test of gratitude at this Thanksgiving time. And it is this true gratitude which, triumphing over conditions merely physical and external, finds its ground of thankfulness in God himself. It is independent of circumstances. It goes beneath the surface of life, whether sad or joyous, and founds itself upon God.

Let us give thanks for life, rather than for the field through which it flows. Let us give thanks for the compassionate God who guides us through this life which He has given us.

"O GIVE THANKS unto the Lord; for He is good; for His mercy endureth forever." The citizens of Bulloch County are invited to the community-wide Thanksgiving service at the Statesboro Primitive Baptist Church this morning, Thanksgiving Day, at 9 o'clock. The Rev. J. Robert Smith, pastor of the First Baptist Church, will deliver the Thanksgiving sermon.

This Week's Meditation

By The Rev. L. E. Houston Jr.

POWER IS NEEDED
I became a little boy all over again the other morning when I boarded a Delta Air Line DC-3 for a trip from Savannah to Nashville. Airplanes have always fascinated me. There is something in the wonder of an object as heavy as a plane being able to lift itself into the air, and sustain its position there as long as necessary.

As we stepped at the end of the runway to warm up the engines, down was just trying to break across the eastern sky. The left engine thundered under the guidance of an increased throttle, then the right. Finally, both together for only a moment, but in that fleeting bit of time, I felt the ship strain against its brakes.

The pilot skillfully guided his charge to a centered position on the runway, then with all the power those engines could muster, we surged forward as the streaks of gray light assured us that dawn was on its way.

It was then I remembered another day. Having saved the money which I received as the general manager of the college laundry, I presented myself before the owner of a small airport in Lexington, Ky. and asked for instruction in the art of flying. I shall never forget the surge of power which I felt as the sixty-five horsepower engine lifted the little Piper Cub off the grassy runway. What a thrill! But the thrill of the power of the Piper Cub is not to be compared with the surging strength of the DC-3 or the Eastern Silver Falcon which carried me from Chattanooga to Nashville. (And of course, this comparison could go on to the DC-6, the super-Constellation, and the new jet airliner.)

There is a lesson here for those of us who need and therefore seek spiritual power in our lives. The power of the Piper Cub can be likened to the strength of a new Christian. The power of the DC-3 or the Falcon can be likened to the strength of a growing Christian. And the power of the jet airliner can be likened to the power and strength of the mature Christian and the saintly soul.

Someone rightly reminds us that God never grants to the Christian power except for a purpose, that is, power as needed. The Piper Cub can stand the strength of the DC-6; nor can the DC-6 lift itself off the ground with only a sixty-five horsepower engine.

How God must love to see us grow and develop as Christians. And as we grow, we must have the power and strength of power which I felt as the sixty-

The Editor's Uneasy Chair

IT AMAZES US that our readers become concerned when our editorial page fails to get in the Herald. Because we were given an opportunity to be of some special service to the farming program of our county we published a Soil Fertility Issue November 13, which went to sixteen pages. We had an editorial page in that issue, but in order to get out that special edition we had to leave out our editorial page before then. Then the big issue there us so that we had to leave it out last week in order to recover from the Soil Fertility Edition.

We got letters from readers asking "What Happened to the Editorial Page?" People on the streets confronted us with the question. People at church gossiped about us for leaving it out. It's an inspiration to us to feel that the Herald is performing a service in our community and to be told so is what keeps our feet to the first.

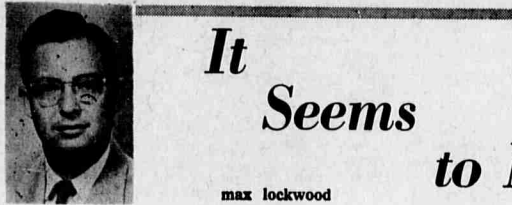

WE HAD A LONG, newsworthy letter last week from Ed Martin of Charleston, S. C. Ed writes us a long letter every year. This year's letter made us a little sad, though Ed did not mean for it. He writes that he has retired from his position with a physical disability, an arthritis condition which has bothered him for several months. He had an important position at the Navy Yard in Charleston processing applications of workers for private contractors who are building the new Atlantic Reserve Fleet. He enjoyed it, for those who remember Ed recall how he loved people, how he liked to talk. It was good to hear from him. We hope to receive many more letters from Ed. They help us in our news and newspressing his philosophy, his interest in us and our news, and his way of expressing his disability in finding ways to compensate for it.

MEMO TO CHIEF directors. If you're looking for "out of balance" members for your choir, new talent was uncovered at the Rotary Club recently — Jim Brock, manager of the Statesboro Coca-Cola Bottling Company, Dr. Buster Deal of the Memorial Clinic, and Jones Lane, local construction contractor. It came about when, as new members of the Rotary Club, they were given the opportunity to lead the Rotarians in their weekly song fest. On second thought, maybe choir directors should make closer inquiries before saving a place in their choirs for these Rotarians.

THE HERALD OFFICE is taking on a new look. Since G. C. Coleman Jr. assumed the position as "Advertising Director," he has wrought confusion in the place. We sort of stored our effects casually. Old papers piled in stacks here and there, our notes on backs of envelopes, in match book covers, and miscellaneous pieces of papers equipment and tables in the back shop around and about.

But all that is changing. Now we can't find anything. Our notes get lost in all the order being. Finally, we got extra space in the back shop in which to get things misplaced.

But the boys who put the Herald together for us so well adjust ourselves to it in time.

As we travel in other sections of the state and visit communities in other areas of the nation we realize more and more just how fine the community in which we live. So many times folks from other places have asked me just how we have managed to build a community in which there are so many good things happening all the time.

In direct contrast with many places our businessmen have had a sincere desire to be of service and in so doing earn for themselves their share of profit for the real wisdom they understand that their future is only as secure as their community is secure.

There is real harmony among all of our people. Our white and Negro leaders work together in planning for the welfare of a total community and in the areas of church and schools and recreation, the leaders of both races along with the great majority of the citizens are pleased with the progress which is being accomplished for all. In every area of the city men are working as the City of Statesboro rushes to complete improved streets, lay new water mains and map out areas of new sewerage lines.

Our teachers College continues to grow both in physical and in service to our area. We have the very real opportunity to train hundreds of young men and women who will remain in our area and the state to lend their know-how in the development of our four regions.

One of the real secrets of our success is our ability to bring to many of our young folks back home to live after they have finished their training. They come back to us with new ideas and with new strength to carry on where others have led the way. We have good doctors, good lawyers, good engineers, good teachers, good merchants, good farmers, good tradespeople and on and on we could name them, who are Bulloch raised men and women, returning to work to prosper a community which they really love.

Yes, the secret of success for us is indeed there must be a secret, it is the willingness of our people to give of their talents and their money to build a future for themselves and for their children. We are really blessed with men and women who have given more than their share in service of this community. It is indebted very deeply to each of them who serve with little recognition but with the heartfelt appreciation of all of us for in our hearts we are grateful for all they mean to the building of a better community.

Still another voice chimed in, its tone being a cross between humor and pathos "No, no, no, you have our bodies wrong. They aren't the wicked doers. We'd probably hang on and be destroyed right there if they were. They're the do-gooders. They do so much good down there on earth that we can't find a moment to inhabit them to let alone commune with their minds."

The man in space was puzzled then ever, "I'm afraid space travel has made me a little dense. You say you are souls of certain men on earth and you are up here in space instead of inhabiting their bodies because they're so busy doing good. Now, just what do you mean?"

"You guessed wrong. Our earthly bodies haven't died. We just can't keep up with them. Each of our men you earthly bodies are doing such wickedness that you simply can't inhabit them?"

The space explorer was more curious than ever, by now. He asked, "You mean your earthly bodies are doing such wickedness that you simply can't inhabit them?"

"You mean your earthly bodies are doing such wickedness that you simply can't inhabit them?"

"You mean your earthly bodies are doing such wickedness that you simply can't inhabit them?"

"You mean your earthly bodies are doing such wickedness that you simply can't inhabit them?"

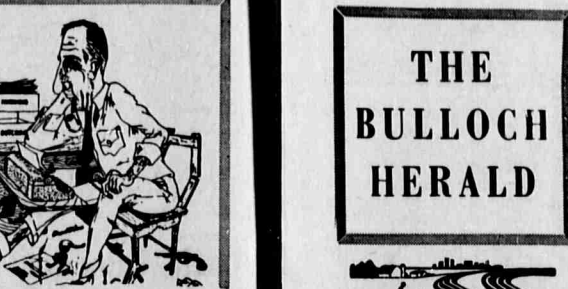

"You mean your earthly bodies are doing such wickedness that you simply can't inhabit them?"

"You mean your earthly bodies are doing such wickedness that you simply can't inhabit them?"

"You mean your earthly bodies are doing such wickedness that you simply can't inhabit them?"

Soil Conservation Service

I would like to discuss a subject this week which is in the minds of most cooperators of the Ogeechee River Soil Conservation District who own farm ponds. The subject is stocking with fish.

At this time of the year many people are fishing their ponds. Many of these ponds were built about four years ago and due to a shortage of bream from the hatchery that year, many co-operators stocked their ponds with bream themselves. Almost without exception those people have complained about poor bream fishing. Many of those same ponds have been drained and fished recently and the result has been a poor harvest of bream.

When ponds are not properly stocked with the proper number of bream and bass, reasons for failure are many, but hard to explain because of many unknown factors. The only thing to do when a pond is "out of balance" is to drain the pond, kill all fish with rotenone and restock properly.

But all that is changing. Now we can't find anything. Our notes get lost in all the order being. Finally, we got extra space in the back shop in which to get things misplaced.

But the boys who put the Herald together for us so well adjust ourselves to it in time.

I would like to comment briefly on the business of proper stocking. First, it means the right number of fish for a given

Long way to go to arrive at county's production potential

SMALL GRAINS SEED

This has been an unusually good crop year and record yields have been made on nearly all crops. But we still have a long way to go in this county before we are anywhere near our potential crop production per acre. This is especially true of small grains production. I believe the record will show that farmers are planting more low quality small grain seed than any other crop.

In too many cases, the initial cost of a bushel of small grain seed determines the kind of farmer buys. Other factors, even more important than price, should be considered too. When buying small grain seed, you should check to find out if the variety is recommended and whether or not it is a disease resistant. You should also know the noxious weed content of the pure seed content of the lot you buy. Finally, you should know if the germination is 70 or 90 per cent.

Use of seed that doesn't measure up in any one of these ways can wipe out the small saving realized in the initial purchase of "cheap" seed. For example, our experiment station have data that proves in many cases the variety alone determines whether the crop is a success or failure. And if you are sure all of you know farmers who have spent $50 to $100 an acre trying to wipe out some noxious weeds that they bought in "cheap" small grain seed.

Harvey C. Lowery, Extension seed marketing specialist, tells me that the certified small grain seed available is not selling as it should because farmers are buying the cheapest seed available. I am not in the seed selling business myself, but I do want to point out that seed certification standards have been developed to protect the farmer and he buys at his own risk when he buys seed that do not bear the Certified Seed Tag.

(Now to continue my emphasis upon the Six Step Extension Forestry program are these comments upon step 4.)

DIVERSIFIED UTILIZATION
Everyone remembers that the one-crop system of cotton farming proved unsound with the advent of the boll weevil and other adversities. Farmers then began to diversify. Diversification is also highly recommended for forest crops.

Most woodland owners would like to obtain the most money from their land. We get extra space in the back shop in which to get things misplaced.

But the boys who put the Herald together for us so well adjust ourselves to it in time.

I would like to comment briefly on the business of proper stocking. First, it means the right number of fish for a given

YOUR ADVICE, PLEASE
It has been suggested that I divide part of my farm into two, three and five-acre tracts, two of which include open and wooded areas. Unlimited pure water from deep drilled well would be supplied to all tracts. I would like the usual expense of individual wells.

The recreational opportunities would be exceptional, including horseback riding, golf, ideal conditions, and the use of a large pond, set down amidst surroundings of notable beauty; a paradise for nature lovers.

Though few in number, these tracts would be moderate in price and the location only a short distance from town via paved road.

Now, I would appreciate learning whether there are many people to whom this kind of residential property would be of interest and also, what kind of restrictions would be desirable. Pertinent suggestions of any kind would be welcomed.

All communications will be considered confidential. No prizes are offered but who responds will receive first choice of sites when and if the property is marketed.

Thank you. Please address:

G.T.C. Professors upset Georgia Tech 72-64 in first game of '58-'59 season

They'll talk about it for a long, long time on the campus of Georgia Teachers College and over the coffee cups in Statesboro. The time the Professors basketball team beat the Yellow Jackets of Georgia Tech on Tech's home court in Alexander Memorial Coliseum in Atlanta.

And basketball fans will be justified in calling G. T. C. Coach J. B. Seare. "The Giant Killer."

For it was on Monday night, December 1, that the Georgia Teachers College Professors, playing like a team possessed, upset Georgia Tech 72 to 64 Monday night in Alexander Memorial Coliseum.

Faced by co-captains Whitey Verstraete and Chester Curry, the Professors sped to an early lead. An 18-17 lead with 9:31 left in the first half was the closest the Jackets came to winning this game. G. T. C. led by 18 points at intermission.

Whitey Verstraete, a boy described by Tech Coach Whack Heyer as good enough to start on any team, led the Southeastern Conference, was the Professors' backbone.

He wound up with 21 points, did the best defensive work, the dribbling in clutch spots, made key passes and was the most efficient rebounder of the evening with 15.

The Professors cashed in on 80 per cent of their free throws.

Georgia Tech's advertised superiority in taking the basketball off both backboards failed to materialize. The Jackets wound up with 11 more rebounds but failed to get them in clutch situations.

Curry and Verstraete, both juniors, are co-captains of the team's teams. Last year Curry scored 517 points and Verstraete added 484 to lead the Professors.

In a preliminary game starting at 6:30 p. m., the G.T.C. freshmen will play South Georgia Tech School.
