Future of retail stores with group

the Morris to accept the IGA franchise and to begin setting up other voluntary groups under the names of King Cole Food Stores and Shopworth Food Stores.

IGA is the abbreviation for Independent Grocers Alliance which is the banner under which over 5000 independent retailers across the nation and Canada have achieved unmatched success.

IGA was established 34 years ago and has since that time become the acknowledged leader in the field. The International Headquarters is in Chicago, Ill. and it is from here that the mass buying power of over 5000 stores is coordinated; it is from here that expert merchandising and advertising guidance is directed to IGA stores; it is from here that the multitude of store services are channeled through the local supply depot—T. J. Morris Company.

Members of T. J. Morris Company said that IGA stores are generally the larger, closer affiliated stores while the registered names of King Cole and Shopworth are reserved for other stores who desire a voluntary group program but do not want to get into it on the scale of IGA. Similar services are provided or made available to all group stores.

T. J. Morris, Sr., president of the T. J. Morris Company, said that the reason for the many drastic changes his organization has undergone recently is very simple. "It is," he said, "our responsibility to make available to ambitious independent retail grocers the tools they need to put them on a par or better than par basis with the corporate chains."

"We investigated our position and the position of our customers at length," Mr. Morris continued. "We toured the southeast, spent considerable money, and interviewed many people to determine the best solution to the problems we saw confronting the independent merchant," he said. "We are completely convinced," Mr. Morris stated, "that the program of close cooperation between wholesaler and retailer and the provision of modern supply depot services to retailers such as we have set up is the only answer for the retailer who desires to compete with chain stores."

Mr. Morris said his company's aim is to make available to the independent retail grocer any and all the services a chain headquarters gives its own stores.

Preston and Hagan to run for Congress in Sept. 14 Primary

Farmer-businessman G. Elliott Hagan of Screven County announced last Thursday that he would definitely be a candidate for Congress in the September 14th democratic primary.

"In response to inquiries from the press and my many friends throughout the district," Hagan said, "I am a candidate for Congress in the first Congressional District, and will make a more formal announcement, complete with platform, when the rules and regulation have been set."

He further stated, "There are many things needed in the First District, and the people are disgusted with promises—they want action. If given the opportunity, I will show the good people of the 18 counties composing the First District some constructive action."

"A careful analysis of the popular vote in the 1958 election plus support we have never had and plus several new developments, will prove the people are ready for a change. In 1958 we made strike one, and we will strike two, and we will strike out the incumbent in 1960."

Congressman Prince H. Preston, a veteran member of the powerful House Appropriations Committee, this week declared his intention to seek re-election in Georgia's Democratic State Primary on September 14.

In announcing his intention to seek an 8th term, the First District of Georgia Congressman said he considered his present term as his "most productive" in the way of accomplishments since coming to Congress.

The solon from Statesboro, Ga., pointed with special pride to approval for construction of a record number of modernistic new post office buildings for the First Congressional District, a total of 15. In almost every instance approval of a new building followed his recommendations that a new building be provided.

"Some of these new buildings already are in use and most of the others are now under construction," he said.

Mr. Preston said that with the exception of one of these buildings they were being constructed with private capital and without any cost to the government. The buildings are constructed according to Post Office Department specifications by private parties and then leased to the Department for a term of years.

The Congressman, a lawyer by profession, was equally proud of his efforts as chairman of an appropriations subcommittee in greatly reducing federal spending. In 1959 he reduced by $56,893,700 requests made by the President for the Department of Commerce and several related agencies and this year he trimmed Presidential requests for the same functions by $39,092,765, making a total of about one billion dollars he has cut budget requests in the six years he has headed the subcommittee.

Mr. Preston has been a strong advocate of public works projects dealing with development of the Savannah River for power, flood control and navigation purposes, having lent his support to the Hartwell Dam and deepening of the Savannah River channel from Savannah to Augusta to nine feet in depth. He has been successful in obtaining funds for studies by the U. S. Corps of Engineers for deepening and widening of the Port of Savannah.

In announcing his candidacy for re-election, which is tantamount to election in Georgia, Congressman Preston said that if given another term he would continue to represent his District "to the very best of my ability."

Rounding out his 14th year in Congress, Mr. Preston is the longest serving Democrat on the 50-member House Appropriations Committee with which all spending bills in Congress originate.

Mr. Preston was elected to Congress in 1946 following the World War II service in the U. S. Army in which he enlisted as a private and advanced to the rank of captain.

While serving as commander of an artillery battery, that fought from Normandy across the Eastern sector of Europe, he was decorated with a total of five Battle Stars.

He drew opposition in a democratic primary for the first time in 1956 when he carried all but two of the District's 18 counties and two years ago he carried all but three counties against his opponent.

Your Opportunities

In Industry as a Technician

By DON HACKETT
Professor and Head of Industrial Education Department
Georgia Southern College

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is one of a series of articles prepared by Dr. Donald F. Hackett, professor and head of the Industrial Education Department of Georgia Southern College, designed to inform young people of the opportunities as technicians. It is an adaptation and a quotation, in part, from a National Association of Manufacturers publication "Your Opportunities in Industry as a Technician."

If you did nothing all day but count the new inventions, discoveries and startling advances that science and technology have made in your lifetime, you would have made an old man before reaching "E" for electronics. Each year the United States Patent Office issues more than 80,000 patents on new and improved ideas for doing things. Automation, atomic energy, industrial chemistry, electronics and many other fascinating technologies are teaming up to give us more service and a higher standard of living than ever before. If all goes well, we will be 100 per cent better off twenty-five years hence. There is, however, one big question mark, one flaw in the crystal ball.

There just are not enough technically trained young people - people who like mathematics, theoretical and applied science and who enjoy new work and hard work - people who are able to turn the theories and ideas, the drawings and sketches of scientists and engineers into useful, workable products and processes. This is the job of the technician.

This article, series of articles will tell you how some of the more recent scientific miracles came about. (It. They) will tell what you should do right now to prepare for any one of fifty or more technical occupations ranging from aircraft construction to tool design and nuclear laboratory work.

If you are a senior in high school, the time is almost gone for you to make a career choice. If you are in the junior high school grades, you have four or five years to make up your mind. In either event you should put the yard stick to your aptitudes and abilities now and begin to plan your future.

If you plan to become a technician, you will probably have to go on after high school for at least two years of additional schooling to earn a certificate or an associate degree. After that, you may learn that to become an engineer or scientist. If so, you would join the twenty per cent of all technicians who make such a discovery and continue their studies in engineering or science.

As a technician, engineer or scientist, you would find that you would have a big hand in tomorrow's wonder world.

NewCastleHDClub observes HD Week

By MRS. D. D. ANDERSON
Mrs. G. B. Bowen and Mrs. Gordon Anderson were hostesses to the New Castle home Demonstration Club at the club house, Tuesday afternoon, after some group singing Mrs. Bowen gave the devotional, using as her theme "Leadership Responsibility."

During the business meeting Mrs. Gear, the agent present, made several announcements. H. D. Club Week will be observed May 1 through the 7. Our Club members decided to observe it by visiting the Willingboro Convalescence Home and serving them with refreshments, taking magazine, and other gifts.

An all day meeting will be at the club house, on our regular meeting date, May 24, as work day. A covered dish lunch will be served.

Several of our club ladies entered the Dress Revue. In different categories, the winners were: Mrs. Delmas Rushing, church dress; Mrs. D. D. Anderson, street dress; Mrs. Delmas Rushing Jr., party dress; and Mrs. Johnnie Bowen, house dress.

Mrs. Delmas Rushing Jr., gave an interesting report on the county trip to Warm Springs and Ida Cason Callaway Gardens. Other members from our club attending were Mrs. G. B. Bowen, and Mrs. Delmas Rushing Sr.

All the ladies were delighted to see the club house had been painted.

Methodists meet at Denver conference

By REV. DAN WILLIAMS
Pastor, First Methodist Church

A conversation—which began as a joke—ended with my saying I would write a couple of articles on the General Conference of the Methodist Church.

The big news items are being professionally reported each day. So these columns will be informal accounts of one preacher's experiences and observations.

By accident I was able to visit the Chicago Temple on my way out here last Tuesday. The flight from Atlanta to Chicago was two hours late, causing me to miss my flight to Denver. This meant a delay of several hours—ample time to go into the city and visit one of Methodism's most famous churches.

Chicago Temple is located in the heart of the downtown Loop area. It has 22 stories and a spire of 568 feet high—the tallest church spire in the world.

Eighteen years ago Dr. Charles Ray Goff began his ministry there. At that time it was two million dollars in debt and about ready to close its doors. Today it is free of debt and Dr. Goff preaches to overflow congregations each Sunday.
