Let there be no rabies here

There has been an outbreak of rabies among animals in Toombs County—that's not far from Bulloch County.

And to head-off the possibility that this outbreak might reach into our county the county commissioners, with the State Health Department, will begin a fox trapping operation in the county tomorrow. It's success rests upon the cooperation of our responsible farmers with the supervisor of the program. They can call or contact the Bulloch County Health Department and the supervisor will be sent to assist the fox-trapping on their property.

Let's not let rabies get into our county.

What good can come out of this?

If Mr. Kennedy's proposal for a $1.25 minimum wage should become law there will be many a small businessman to reappraise his position.

Where he is now beset by ever increasing production costs and ever increasing overheads, the increased minimum wage could be the proverbial straw to break his financial back.

Where, under the present minimum he barely makes ends meet, he is providing employment. But if he is forced to pay a higher minimum wage his business will be unable to stand it, and he and his employees all go down.

What good can come out of this?

"On my honor

I will do my best..."

It was on February 8, 1910, that the Boy Scouts of America officially began. And yesterday, February 8, 1961, Boy Scouts of Statesboro joined the Boy Scouts of the nation in observing their fifty-first anniversary, using the theme of "Strengthen America... Character Counts."

In Bulloch County there are 350 boys and 150 adults who participate in the Boy Scout program. And so it is during this Boy Scout Week, February 7-13, that we pay high tribute to these young people and their leaders.

There is a great objective embodied in the Scout Oath, "On my honor I will do my best:

To do my duty to God and my country and to obey the Scout law;

To help other people at all times; To keep myself physically strong, mentally awake, and morally straight."

The community is a better one because of this oath subscribed to by 500 of its young boys.

There are ways to help their pay

Everyone in our state government is in a dither over the problem of providing a salary increase for the teachers of Georgia without injuring the taxpayer, already hurting and about to be hurt more by our federal government.

Why not let's dump the scores of frills in our government, including some in our department of education. We know and you know there are hundreds of places where money can be saved to help provide the teachers a raise, if our politicians had the courage to put our government on a firm and sound financial basis.

Elder Hendricks recalls old times

Unless you know Elder J. Walter Hendricks, the book would not claim much of your interest upon casually glancing at it's dust jacket which features a huge cross rising from the horizon with a Holy Bible in the foreground and a bottle of ink holding an old fashioned quill and a barn and silo in the background. Even to his friends the title, "Autobiography," wouldn't mean much. But the give away is in the top right-hand corner—"Elder J. Walter Hendricks, Sr."

The Primitive Baptists' outstanding preacher, teacher, writer, citizen, has used part of his 87th year to putting his experiences in writing and now they are in book form.

His recollections, compiled under chapter headings such as "Going to Market," "The Old Fashioned Singing School," "Breaking Up the Bumble Bee Nest," "Drunkness and Such Like," "Smoking, Chewing, and Using Tobacco Otherwise," "Some Tough Pigs' Feet," "The Case Grinding," intrigue the reader and lead him to reveal in delightful stories of the old times.

For those who love to recall the good old days, Elder J. Walter Hendricks' Autobiography is a gold mine.

It's not easy to do; ask any golfer

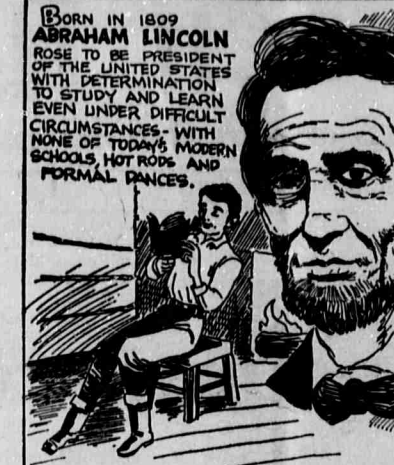

Lady Luck's "Hole-In-One" is reserved for only a very few golfers. And those who are allowed one in a lifetime are considered the favored ones. Those who are allowed two in a lifetime are the special favored ones. But those who are allowed three of these Golf Aces are indeed golf-dom's elite.

Last week Harry Minkovitz of Savannah, who finds time to play some of his golf at the Forest Heights Country Club in Statesboro, is one of those upon whom Lady Luck has smiled broadly and with favor. He has scored three of these rarest of all golf-dom's feats—the Hole-In-One.

On May 3, 1959, Mr. Minkovitz scored his first hole-in-one on the General Oglethorpe course in Savannah. Then on January 19, 1961, he sank another hole-in-one on the Beauclair Course in Jacksonville. Then on Wednesday, February 1, his third hole-in-one came while playing on the Mary Calder course in Savannah.

We congratulate Mr. Minkovitz upon his phenomenal accomplishment.

CHRISTIANS DON'T MAKE SENSE!

WHEN, AT THE AGE of thirty, Albert Schweitzer resigned his position at the University of Strasbourg; turned his back upon a pulp ministry; forsook his beloved Bach and organ; and entered medical study to train himself as a missionary to Africa, his friends would have said he was insane. They cried: "It doesn't make sense!"

J. B. Phillips translates I Corinthians 2:14: "But the unspiritual man simply cannot accept the matters which the Spirit deals with; they just don't make sense to him, for after all, you must be spiritual to see spiritual things."

THIS STATEMENT seems to indicate that people ignorant of spiritual matters are not competent to judge the acts of spiritual men. Dean Inge, discussing his musical capacity, told: "I could not tell the difference between the music of God and the music of the devil. I could save the world from sin, but I could not save the world from sin."

Why, then, should Christians cringe at the criticism of those who do not understand? If someone objects that religion doesn't make sense, then the Christian answers: "That is the story of religion. Such a charge Christians accept gladly. With Job they say: 'Oh, that I had the indictment written by my adversary. Surely I would carry it on my shoulder; I would bind it on me as a crown.'"

Christianity has never made sense to a parcel-wielding

THE LAYMAN and The Church

THE PERSONNEL of any church consists of the clergyman, with perhaps, a mass of assistants and the laity which is everybody else. Presumably, the laity goes to church to improve contact with God.

Whether they do this successfully is a matter known only to each individual concerned. However, from the amount of time spent discussing money, property and similar subjects one might get the idea that the laity is primarily interested in improving God's contact with secularism.

This attitude need not be condemned. Better that we try to understand it. To do this, the laity must understand that we are laymen. First of all, we are human beings. As mortals we are permanently enmeshed in all the stresses of life, emotionally, physically and mentally.

SECOND, we are citizens. This is the person we show to the world, our image on display. As citizens we are working, spending the majority of our time doing one thing, earning a living. We live in a maze of calculations: figuring, budgeting, planning, counting. We regiment ourselves and regiment each other through groups, institutions, companies, and governments. Our motto is "organize or perish."

Third, we are spiritual beings. It is not surprising that, along with our desire for spiritual refreshment, we carry into the church our fears and anxieties, our dread of material insecurity and our passion for organization.

So the church gets that indispensable board of directors, complete with a chairman, a school with a superintendent and a faculty, a kitchen with cooks, it gets committees, budgets, allotments, menus, and a curriculum, a catechism, music, and all the paraphernalia of a religious institution.

THE CHURCH in many ways becomes a hybrid, a mass of families mated with a corporation. People seeking spiritual solace within big business. The members are compassionate but they are critical and cautious. Trusting at the same time, suspicious.

In short we are simply being ourselves, managing the church like we manage everything else. There is nothing wrong with what we are doing. As a matter of fact we are doing a pretty good job. The steady growth of church membership, the magnificent buildings, the bales of fine church literature, the vigorous religious training program for our children, the great schools and universities for young ministerial students and anyone else who desires an education and foreign missions attest to a task well done.

Our Soil and Water

By E. T. "Red" MULLIS

For almost ten years I have been trying to get our cooperation with the Ogeechee River Soil Conservation District here in Bulloch to do their drainage work when it was dry. For almost ten years this plea went unheeded for the most part. When it was dry they thought they didn't need ditches, and when it was wet, drainage equipment couldn't do the work.

I am now happy to report that during last fall and this winter right up into January 1961, we had a perfect combination for getting drainage ditches constructed. Our co-workers were ready (after the wet spring last year), the crops were off the land and the weather dry. Another important factor in getting this vitally needed work accomplished was the ACP plans approved through the ASC office. The ASC Office manager, Miles F. Deal, and the County ASC Committee composed of V. J. Rowe, Henry R. Brannen Jr., and Carl Bishop deserve a lot of credit.

This teamwork of technical help from the Soil Conservation District, financial assistance from ACP and cooperation of conservation equipment contractors, C. O. Bohler, Rudolph Rusing, Creasy Brothers, I. A. Brannen Jr., Harvey Driggers, Ernest Carter, Harry McCormick, W. D. Sands and others made possible the construction of over 10 miles of various types and sizes of drainage ditches during the last three months.

Those farmers completing drainage systems recently in Bulloch County are J. K. Williams, Arthur Nubb, and Robert Cox in the Denmark community; the late Mr. C. J. Martin in the Nevils community; Mrs. R. E. Aldrich, H. L. Rushing, and T. J. Harville in the Emitt community; Mrs. Ollie K. Conover in the Register community.

Have home-grown seeds checked for germination

By ROY POWELL
County Agent

Many of you may plant home-grown seed for certain crops this year. Having this seed tested for germination before it is planted could save you considerable time and effort.

You can have home-grown seed tested free simply by sending it to the State Seed Laboratory located in the State Agriculture Building in Atlanta.

If you wish to make use of this testing service, send your seed to this laboratory now. Some types of seed such as Pansola Bahia must remain in cases to furnish reports on germination and purity in just a few days.

In sending in a sample of seed you want tested, be sure to include your complete name and address. Surprisingly, this is often forgotten. Upon receipt of the seed sample at the State Seed Laboratory, an acknowledgment will be sent to you. If you do not receive this acknowledgment within 10 days, check with the seed laboratory.

WHAT IS MORE FARMING? Modern farming is the nation's biggest industry. It employs 7.4 million workers, more than are employed in the steel industry, or the automobile industry, or transportation and public utilities combined.

Investment in agriculture exceeds $20 billion, equal to three-fourths of the value of current assets of all corporations in the United States, or three-fourths of the market value of all corporation stocks on the New York Stock Exchange.

The investment in agriculture represents $21.30 for each farm employee, as compared with $15.90 for each worker in the manufacturing industry.

FINENESS OF LIME Many questions are asked by farmers each year concerning limestone requirements of their soils. One frequent question is: "How much lime should I use?" The answer is: "It depends on the soil and the crop." The fineness of limestone is important. The fineness of reaction is largely dependent on the surface area of the limestone particles.

The finer the particles, the greater is the amount of surface exposed to solution.

For quick effects, pulverized limestone that will pass through a 100-mesh screen is desirable. This product will react with the soil during the first few months of application.

Limestone particles passing through a 20-mesh screen and held on a 100-mesh screen will dissolve and become available within a year or so. Particles larger than a 20-mesh screen have a very slow effect in the soil.

One of our coldest days we awoke to grey, cold skies and a frozen, bare earth. We could not help remembering what one science book had to tell about just how long we could survive on earth without the sun. It was a weird sort of supposition theory story telling about each detail (in case the sun ceased to be). (1) Remembering this story, the earth didn't look beautiful — it looked frightening and cold. No, it didn't even seem treacherously beautiful.

WE ASKED Jane, our faithful helper, if she wasn't ready for a warmer weather. Her reply was a philosophical gem. "Not until Winter is over. In the winter months it's supposed to be cold."

Well, last Saturday we knew the sun had not deserted us. The earth was covered with ice. It was quiet and except for a crunchy sound now and then. But the sun was shining gorgeously on the icy trees and earth. There appeared to be millions of diamonds.

WE KNEW Mr. Sun had not deserted us. We were not the only ones who knew this. The birds held a beautiful concert and such music we'd forgotten there was music in the world. The birds seem to always be the first to know that Spring is on its way. Somehow on this day, we felt it in our bones in spite of the bare, cold, icy earth.

Broiler Meeting

A Broiler Housing Symposium will be held at the Georgia Center for Continuing Education, Athens, February 22.

This meeting is planned primarily for broiler producers, but the information presented will be of such nature that egg producers can secure considerable benefit from attending this meeting. Information will be basic and applicable to the market egg enterprise the same as to broilers.

Outstanding speakers have been obtained for this meeting. They will discuss such topics as broiler nutrition, broiler housing and ventilation, broiler health, broiler marketing and other equipment.

Preparation for planting Now is a good time of the year to get planting machinery in tip-top condition before planting season.

Planters should be assembled and checked for excessive wear parts and then thoroughly oiled and greased. Fertilizer hoppers should be thoroughly cleaned and covered with this coat of soil until ready for use. To determine if rust is causing gears to bind, planters can be operated by hand.

In selecting corn and other seed for planting, take into consideration the plates that are available for the size and shape of seeds being purchased.

If this preventive maintenance is taken, it can aid in smoother operation at planting time.

TRANSPLANT TREES PROPERLY Of the many peacocks, apple, fig, peach and other fruit trees planted each year around Georgia homes for shade and fruit, about one-half die during the first year. Among the reasons for this high mortality rate are: drying of roots before planting, improper care after planting, and a poor job of transplanting and watering.

HERMAN TALMADGE

Reports From WASHINGTON

THE PROSPECTS FOR preserving freedom of debate in the United States Senate are not quite as dismal as the narrow margin of the recent vote to send the issue to the Rules Committee for study would seem to indicate.

While a switch of two votes could have resulted in rewriting Senate Rules on the spot last month, the situation was altered with the change in Administration. The difference between then and now is Vice President Lyndon Johnson who, when Senate Majority Leader, wrote the existing rule requiring two-thirds of the Senators voting to cut off debate and specifying that debate on proposed rules changes is subject to that requirement. Former Vice President Richard Nixon, presiding as a "lame duck," had announced his intention, if given the opportunity, to declare that rule unconstitutional and to hold that a majority of the Senators voting could end debate on rule changes.

SINCE MR NIXON did not get a chance to establish a politically-expedient precedent that rule could be imposed on the whim of the Vice President and in view of Vice President Johnson's authorship of the present rule on limitation of debate, there is good reason to believe that, whatever the Rules Committee may recommend, Senators who are opposed to destroying the Senate's vital role as one of the checks and balances of constitutional government will have ample opportunity to talk the issue out before the country when it comes up again.

It was obvious from last month's vote that opponents of free debate did not have sufficient strength to write a majority cloture rule but they were close to having a majority for limitation of debate by three-fifths of the Senators voting. The fact that there is no constitutional basis or parliamentary precedent for silencing Senators by 60-percent vote gave added strength to the argument that serious study by the Rules Committee was indicated and needed.

IN 1957 I had the honor to serve as Chairman of a Special Subcommittee which conducted the most exhaustive hearings ever held on this subject. I insisted on getting opinion from the grass roots and of the 132 individuals and spokesmen for organizations with national memberships heard more than three-fourths were opposed to any change in the rule governing debate as then written — a rule even more stringent than the one now in effect.

It was my conclusion at that time that the American people recognize the United States Senate as the last-remaining guardian of their liberty and their constitutional right to govern themselves and they do not wish the hands of their Senators tied in the discharge of that solemn duty. Nothing has happened in the intervening four years to indicate any change in public sentiment and citizens of all areas would be well advised to so express themselves to the Senators from their States.

THIS IS the third in a series of articles based on information found in a booklet published by the National Education Association, entitled "Will Your Child Get A Quality Education?"

The first article dealt with the question, "What are the ingredients of a quality education?" and the second article with the first ingredient, quality teachers. We are now going to discuss quality curriculum.

A QUALITY CURRICULUM can help your child develop sound health habits and constructive recreational interests. A quality curriculum with quality guidance will help your child make intelligent decisions about his behavior, his school program, and his career. Authorities recommend one guidance counselor for every 250 to 300 high school students. How is your child's school in this respect? What do you know about the different courses and activities offered in your child's school? Do you have things here that other schools do not? Do others have worthwhile programs that you do not? Why not use your next PTA meeting to ask these and other questions on your mind about your school program? Become an informed parent, and help your school attain and maintain a quality curriculum.

A WIDE VARIETY of experiences in his school curriculum will help your child find

Last week we had another freeze. It was not as severe as the one the week before last, but there was real beauty to behold when the sun came up on Saturday morning and shone on the pine trees, white and glistening with ice. The trees dropped only a little with this freeze and as far as I know there was no damage caused from this freeze.
