Golfers Plan For Three Matches

A joint meeting of the golf committee and greens committee was held at Forest Heights Country Club recently at which time it was decided to hold several functions in the near future, among them being a "Jokers' day" on January 23 and a Scotch foursome on January 30. On Wednesday, January 23, two teams will be chosen, the captains being Bill Peck, captain of Team Red and Jake Hines, captain of Team Blue. Players will be matched according to their handicaps. The losers of the team matches will set the winners up to a buffet supper in the evening. Wives are invited to dine with the golfers.

A Scotch foursome, is planned for the following Wednesday afternoon in a Scotch foursome match. A male and female couple a team which is matched against another two female and male. Each member strokes the ball alternately and the two female have the fewest strokes in the match.

A big field is expected for both functions and members interested in participating are urged to contact Chas. Robbins Jr., golf committee chairman, or Mrs. Sam Struss.

Golfers are reminded that their course is in the best shape it has ever been in, and are urged to take every advantage to enjoy it. Activities such as blind bogies and blitzes are weekly affairs and have proved highly successful.

DANISH STUDENT ENROLLS AT TEACHERS COLLEGE

The newest foreign student on the TC campus, Peter Norborge from Aarhus, Denmark arrived on Sunday night, January 13. Mr. Norborge is an exchange student being sponsored by the International Rotary Club.

Those who like to get acquainted quickly will be interested in the fact that Mr. Norborge is not exactly a stranger to the "red hills of Georgia." He came early to Monticello, where he graduated from high school in 1949. From Monticello, he went to Abraham Baldwin College, Tifton, where he completed two years of work in June, 1951.

His years at Abraham Baldwin show his talent and leadership, for last year he was elected president of the sophomore class and was chosen as the most talented in his class.

That Peter has a sense of humor was demonstrated early by his statement, "Oh, Norborge is a very simple name to pronounce."

First Federal Savings and Loan Assn. Celebrates 15th Anniversary

H. Z. Smith was re-named president of the First Federal Savings and Loan Association at their annual meeting here January 16 and that night members of the board of directors and officers of the association celebrated with a fifteenth anniversary dinner at the Forest Heights Country Club.

Money and other lavish decorations filled the dining room of the club as officers and directors, along with newspapermen, officers of local banks and their wives heard President Smith tell of the rapid progress made by the association since its organization in 1936.

At that time the association started with $5,000 and today the liabilities are over one and one-half million dollars. Smith reviewed the growth of the association and extended a welcome to the guests.

J. B. Averitt, supervisor of loans, was master of ceremonies and kept the evening lively with a variety of stunts.

Mrs. W. G. Cobb and Charles E. Cone were presented prizes as top winners in the "most embarrassing moment in my life" contest. Leodel Coleman was a prize winner in the evening's stunt competition.

In the morning, members of the association re-named H. Z. Smith and L. M. Durden as directors to succeed themselves. Other members of the board are D. B. Turner, C. E. Cone, L. E. Tyson, J. R. Averitt and George M. Johnston. Following the members' meeting the board re-named the same officers: H. Z. Smith, president; Charles E. Cone, vice president; Mr. J. B. Band Gets New Horn For Concert

When the Statesboro High School Band presents its annual Winter Concert on Thursday night, January 31, it will be sporting a brand new bass horn, according to Band Director Guyton McLendon.

It is hoped that the participating sponsors by the citizens of Statesboro and Bulloch county will provide enough funds to pay for this new instrument, one of the most expensive used in the band. It has been badly needed for several years Mr. McLendon said. Ed. Hotchkiss, senior, will play the new horn in the concert next Thursday night.

Because of the growing enrollment at the Statesboro school, Blue Devil Band is now rated as a class B band. This up-rating places the band in the class with Tifton, Albany, Gainesville and other schools of the similar size.

The band director explained that this means a higher standard of performance will be demanded of the band and that it will now be playing more and more difficult numbers with better instrument.

The concert next week is free to the public and the members of the band are hoping that a large audience will fill the high school auditorium to hear them perform.

Mr. McLendon added that appreciative audience should wonder if the young musicians, and they put on a better performance.

This Is Commendation Week

WHEN we finished writing our editorials this week we noted that we had done nothing but commend our people, do nothing but toss our hat high into the air.

We were surprised that we had not blown our top about something, and you know there's plenty over which to blow our top.

But we could not ignore these things which we feel are worthy of commendation. It is part of our obligation to this community to praise where and when praise is due.

So we ask that you take off your hat and toss it high with us:

Congressman Preston—He's For Lower Taxes

Our hat stays in the air while shouting "hurray" over the things our Congressman, Prince Preston, does, and the stand he takes on issues.

This week we toss it just a little higher over his firm stand on economy in our national government.

In his public speeches while he was home he expressed himself with conviction—for economy in our government.

In a statement published last Sunday, Congressman Preston said flatly, "This Congress isn't going to raise taxes." As a member of the appropriations committee, he said he is in favor of cutting back instead of adding on to the already high tax burden.

We appreciate our Congressman going to bat for the harassed taxpayer.

We appreciate his recognizing the terrific waste that exists in our national government and that the great need is not for more taxes, but the honest distribution of the taxes we now pay.

And we commend him on his stand.

Henry S. Blitch—He Wins Another

Henry S. Blitch has added "Man of the Year in Bulloch County Soil Conservation" to his list of accomplishments as a farmer in this county.

In special ceremonies here last Friday, he, together with farmers from Screven, Tattnall, Candler and Evans counties, was recognized for outstanding work done in soil conservation in the Ogeechee River Soil Conservation District.

Last year Mr. Blitch was named a Georgia Master Farmer, one of the highest honors to be bestowed on a man of the soil.

We join with Bulloch county in commending Mr. Blitch.

Our Future Leaders

THE BOY SCOUTS of America in this area are conducting their annual budget campaign. Every civic-minded citizen should be proud to know that his or her contribution in the past has "paid off" in dividends of young men, trained for citizenship.

Scouting has for more than 40 years carried forward a program, attractive to boys, which has produced a generation of several million men of good moral character, men of whom America can be justly proud. Many of these Scouts of yesterday are men of prominence today in all major fields of business and the professions.

The Scouts of today are America's leaders of tomorrow. We must do all in our power to support Scouting, so that more of our boys may become members. In the words of General Dwight D. Eisenhower—"The Boy Scout movement merits the unstinted support of every American who wants to make his country and his world a better place in which to live."

Invest today in America's future leaders.

Keep Them Marching

THE MARCH OF DIMES is on again. The drive this year takes on new significance with the announcement only two months ago by Basil O'Connor, national foundation head, that progress toward the development of a vaccine to prevent polio was definitely on the way toward perfection.

A contribution to the March of Dimes is a contribution to a cause which takes

It's he and his kind who make this county the best in the land.

Jim Hays—He Puts

Out Newsy Letter

Last week we received the first copy of the Newsletter of the Statesboro and Bulloch County Chamber of Commerce.

It's cover wishes all a Happy New Year. The inside pages are filled with newsy items about Statesboro, Bulloch county, and their doings. It features improvements by our merchants and developments in business and industry.

We commend Jim Hays, secretary-manager of the county's businessmen's organization, on the good job.

Statesboro PCA Now Owns Itself

Up goes our hat for Josh T. Nessmith, secretary-treasurer of the Statesboro Production Credit Association; his assistant, A. Francis Trappell; and their board of directors, J. H. Smith of Bulloch, John H. Moore of Bulloch, Henry H. Durrence of Evans, W. D. Sands of Evans and J. Harry Lee of Bulloch.

For 18 years they have worked along with the PCA until January 2 of this year when they became the first association in Georgia to be completely member-owned.

During its 18 years the SPCA has made 8,846 loans for a total of $5,163,245, with a loss of only 1,021. The total net worth of the organization is $174,519 and the 985 members own $77,925 worth of stock.

We commend the officers, directors and the 985 members on their progress. It reflects with credit upon Bulloch county and her neighbors.

First Federal Now Fifteen Years Old

Up goes our best-up hat on the fifteenth anniversary of the Statesboro First Federal Savings and Loan Association.

On Thursday night of last week officers and directors and a few invited guests gathered to celebrate the fifteenth anniversary of the association.

Since 1936, when it started with $5,000, it has grown until today it shows loans of over one and one-half million dollars.

Made up of entirely local people, it has earned a firm place in Bulloch county's and Statesboro's parade of progress.

We commend the officers and directors of the First Federal on doing a wonderful job of filling a need in our community.

second place to none and since money donated by Americans in recent years has paid off in concrete results, which are now on the verge of producing a vaccine, the incentive should be all the greater.

We urge every citizen of Statesboro and Bulloch county to keep the March of Dimes marching.

GIVE!

Automobile Title Law

THE STATE of Georgia needs a motor vehicle certificate of title law, and quite badly. In the year ended August 31, 1951, there were 4,405 automobiles in nine Southeastern states and 1,109 (25%) of them were stolen in Georgia. In the same period, same area, there were 2,427 automobile fires, many of them incendiary, and 496 (20%) of them were in Georgia. Mississippi and Georgia led in automobile fires and neither has a title law. Other Southeastern states without title laws are Alabama, and South Carolina. It is the general belief that absence of title laws brings in operations of automobile thieves from other states.

A Georgia title law would reduce thefts, cut down traffic in stolen cars and parts, and greatly improve the tracing of stolen, abandoned or embezzled vehicles. It would help reduce crime generally, since automobiles are involved in a majority of all crimes. Such a law also would protect innocent buyers of stolen cars and reduce rates for automobile fire and theft. It would protect the legitimate auto sales and financing field. A bill providing a title law will be before the present session of the legislature. It calls for favorable action.

Peace Still Has a Meaning

ALL'S FAIR . . . . . By Jane

The Bankers and the Press all joined in hearty Wednesday evening as the First Federal Savings and Loan Association observed their fifteenth anniversary with a dinner at the Forest Heights Country Club.

The table held all the glitter of the days of the Gold Rush, centered with Golden Rapture roses with bunches of grapes trailing the length of the table with clusters of yellow mums scattered here and there, while all over the table was money—gold money, not real, of course, or there would have been a mad scramble here in '52 like the 1840s. Barney Averitt, loan supervisor, was the master of ceremonies. Horace Smith, president, made the address of the evening.

Then came the fun, with everyone present relating their most embarrassing moment. Charlie Cone, vice president, set the record with his moment. In building up to the moment, he went back into his childhood which seems to have stretched out into his teens. Yes, how many of our present teenage boys can say, along with Mr. Charlie, that they were dressed until they were fifteen? Well, Mr. Charlie told the assembled dignitaries that he wore dresses until he was fifteen. He never heard of pajamas until just before he was married and the late E. C. Oliver called him aside and said, "Now Charlie, I want you to come around to the store. Now that you are getting married, you want to buy some pajamas." Charlie's curiosity knew no bounds. Timidly and fearfully, he made his appearance at E. C. Oliver Company to make his first acquaintance with pajamas. He didn't know what to expect. One thing was certain—he didn't expect them to be silk. Nor did he expect a two-piece garment. Up to that time he had worn night gowns or night shirts. Right there we leave the story which grew better all the time, but there are other embarrassing moments that we want to relate. Get Mr. Charlie to take it on from where he left off.

Mrs. Wallis Cobb's embarrassing moment came early in her first housekeeping experiences when she bought a single sweet potato. She won the ladies' prize. Mrs. Leroy Tyson told a rather singular experience that embarrassed her greatly. It happened in Savannah as she shopped downtown. She was standing at a counter, her back to the aisle, when a woman threw her arms around her and both were shocked to learn that it was a case of mistaken identity. Only 30 minutes later, as she was walking out of another store, a woman rushed up to her and kissed her heartily. Yes, it was the same woman.

Now, Bob Donaldson's most embarrassing moment did take place as part of his initiation at the University of Georgia. The boys took Bob out to a park in Athens after dusk and proceeded to remove his figure of his college friend and fellow countian, he began to scream for a doctor. When Leodel came to he was surrounded by the family of the girl and Brett. Embarrassment enveloped him, and he shudders over it to this day.

Leodel Coleman came up with this (Note to Editor: Let this stand as is.) My boss suffered. I believe you'll concede that "suffered" is the correct term to use. His most embarrassing moment came in 1923 when, as a student at Georgia Tech, he and the late Britt Franklin, son of Mrs. H. V. Franklin of Register, went by cordial invitation to visit a charming girl and her parents in what was considered the best residential case in Atlanta. So much they knew, but they were not prepared to be met at the door by a butler who said, "Come in, gentlemen."

After a reporter hunts here and there, there's really no one embarrassing moment. The boss disagreed because his most embarrassing moment came since he's been editor of The Herald. That one we won't let, as accustomed as we are to hearing plenty in our roundup of new.

We leave the bankers and their embarrassing moments with this story which shows that bankers are human. So are bank tellers—pretty smart people around a dollar Eagle eyes they're supposed to have. But a teller accepted an item for collection. It was cleared by the local office of the depository commercial bank. But that bank's head office returned it with nothing about them. He feels that good music, good plays, etc., do us no good unless we are prompted to do some act of kindness, if it is no more than speaking kindly to one another. But an act must take place when one has a sentiment. By all means, he insists, keep the act of effort alive.

After studying awhile with James, I begin to feel with him that it is vastly important for young people to fashion their characters in the right way by forming the right habits.

And it is possible to change one's ways, I believe. I agree with my friend that one's mind can be turned off as one turns off a light switch. Try it and see for yourself.

Worried About Something? Stop Thinking On It

By VIRGINIA RUSSELL

A FRIEND of mine said to me that she could turn off her mind as she did a light switch. She went on to explain that, if, for example, she ever found herself worrying about something she couldn't change, she simply stopped thinking about it. Her statement took me somewhat by surprise, and I pondered over it for days. But, more than that, I tried it, and believe it or not, it worked.

"Could it be that worrying is a habit?" I asked myself one day. "Surely, habit doesn't grip the moods of the mind as it does those processes related to physical activities. Or does it?" I queried myself.

Alone in the study I searched for something that had been written on the subject, and found it in the writings of William James, the philosopher, who was a semi-philosopher. He said that "worry" is a habit, but who recovered by reading Reminiscences of free will and decided that the first expression of his free will would be to believe in his free will.

In his discussion of habit, James begins with the Duke of Wellington's exclamation, "Habit is second nature! Habit is ten times nature!" From this he proceeds to a presentation of illustrations of those habitually marked creatures of habit, the soldier, the cavalry horse, the menagerie tiger.

James believes that the youth, he under twenty, forms his personal habits, especially those of vocalization, gesture, motion, and address. The man between twenty and thirty forms his intellectual and professional habits. By the time they are twenty-five, James continues, professional mannerisms begin to settle on the young doctor, the minister, the lawyer. By the time a man becomes thirty, the habits that are formed are not likely ever to be changed. And of this James says: "On the whole, it is best he should not escape. It is for the world that in which he is by the age of thirty, the character has set like plaster, and they will never soften again."

Yet, in spite of his belief in this plaster-like setting of character, James feels that one can break an old habit or form a new one, and he spends some time in showing his reader how this may be done. There must be, he declares no "tapering-off" procedure, but a sudden, definite, and complete initiation of activity. Once resolved, a person must act immediately. "Seize the very first possible opportunity to act on every resolution you make, and on every emotional prompting you may experience in the direction of the habits you aspire to form," says Mr. James.

To put this in a common everyday affair, if I think of my sick friend, then I must go right that moment and write her a note or, better still, go to see her. For James believes that one's character is not improved one bit if he has the finest intentions and does nothing about them. He feels that good music, good plays, etc., do us no good unless we are prompted to do some act of kindness, if it is no more than speaking kindly to one another. But an act must take place when one has a sentiment. By all means, he insists, keep the act of effort alive.

After studying awhile with James, I begin to feel with him that it is vastly important for young people to fashion their characters in the right way by forming the right habits.

And it is possible to change one's ways, I believe. I agree with my friend that one's mind can be turned off as one turns off a light switch. Try it and see for yourself.

Mrs. Edge Addresses Woman's Club On Problems of Youth

"Gifts We Bring Our Children" was the title of an address made by Mrs. W. W. Edge at the regular meeting of the Statesboro Woman's Club Thursday afternoon of last week, January 17, at the Community Center.

The program was based on the subject, "Gifts We Bring Our Children."

Music was furnished by Dr. and Mrs. Zach Henderson and daughter, Anne.

The full text of Mrs. Edge's address follows:

"I can't show you a film. Even the most powerful microscope will show only a blank. But my subject deals with the most important thing in all the universe—the soul of a little child."

"When we see a newborn baby, biologically speaking, we are looking at a little animal, 90 percent water, 10 percent minerals. All but what we can't see is the soul of a human being, just sent from Heaven by the Great Creator—came without being consulted about his wishes. He brought into a home that he would never have chosen."

"Someone has said that all children should know three heavens: the one he came from, one in which he lives, and the one where he will spend eternity. The kind of home he comes into will largely decide the last two; the Great Creator has taken care of the first."

"Blessed is that little one who comes into a fine, religious home, where a good mother greets him with outstretched arms. Not necessarily a rich and beautiful home, where God is, and they will also be found love and goodness."

"Remember the Babe born in a cow stable."

"As to our audience: most of us have reared our children. After rearing seven I know very little about children—much less than I know before I started out with my first one 48 years ago. They continually surprise me, for I never know what they are going to say or do. They are much like the proverbial cat."

"To those of us who no longer have our babies in our arms—but always in our hearts—let me say: Let's ask time to turn backward in its flight, and make our children little again, just for a short period."

"Job, that wonderful man, noted mostly for his patience, but who embodied within himself all the most admirable attributes of a perfect person, made this statement when all this children had been taken from him: 'When I had my children with me.'"

"So, let's pretend. Then we can all be on the same level—those mothers whose young ones have flown from the nest—the others whose fledglings are still safe and sound."

"The time that a mother has all her children as her very own is really so very short, especially in retrospect. The preschool years... those short six years are the days when a child's character is really formed, and the foundation for education is really laid."

"But with school come other influences; and as maturity comes, the buoyant youthfulness is poured out into queer-shaped jugs that will not hold all the youthful dreams and hopes and aspirations. Then a mother can only love her children and pray for them, and hope that her teachings will hold them safe."

"So let's enjoy our children while they are small. 'I can't tell you how to make a success of children. There are too many complications—too many influences—and so much is up to the child himself. Each child has his own ego—his own entity—and each is a hardheaded individual.'"

"Very few mothers are prepared for motherhood. First babies are usually thrust upon us, and we know so little about them, except to love them, and love isn't enough. Even dumb animals love their children, and know by instinct the things which we must be taught by others or by sad experience."

"The schools of the future are going to train all girls in the 'art of motherhood,' the greatest work in the world. When that day comes, the psychiatrists will not need to tell us that many first children are brilliant, but maladjusted to life, because their mothers were not prepared for parenthood."

"Some wise man has said: 'God couldn't do everything, so He made mothers.'"

"My subject is 'Gifts We Bring Our Children,' especially preparing them for citizenship. Let me give my ideas about these gifts."

"First—Good parentage. Healthy bodied, clean minded, Christian-hearted, broad in outlook people. Remember, children can't choose their parents."

"Second—Health. There is no use to talk about health, because last 10 years the whole country has gone health-minded. I don't know how we old mothers ever raised our children to maturity."

"Third—Education in good literature. A background in the knowledge of good books is the right of every child."

"Fourth—Obedience. At this point, the child psychologists will differ with me."

"I am not talking about arbitrary commands, where the parent merely wants to prove who is boss. The child is keen to sense the injustice of such orders, and is within his right to defy them. But obedience is the one that children must observe all their lives—in school, in the army, as citizens."

"There are prohibitions and inhibitions all through life—the do's and don'ts which make living livable. The sooner a child learns these lessons the fewer kicks and pricks he will undergo through life. The world will straighten your child out if you fail."

"Fifth—Politeness, unselfishness, kindness. Our children must be taught to 'mind their manners.' The object of all education is to teach the child how to live his own best life and to be in harmony with his fellow citizens. 'Live, let live, help live.'"

"Sixth—Tolerance and respect. Tolerance for other people's beliefs, and respect for all men."

"In the muck of snobishness, prejudice and hate the seeds of war are sown."

"Seventh—Teach your child what success is. Not merely money. Horace Greely used to say, 'Go West, young man, go West.' Today most parents say, 'Make money, son. That's the important thing.'"

"Of course, money is necessary in life; but the constant pursuit of it will warp the soul."

"The great of the world never had money. Martin Luther was the son of a coal miner; Shakespeare couldn't pay his grocery bill. The Son of Man had no place to lay His head."

"Who is successful? That man who makes the world a better place because he lives in it."

"Eighth—To be a good citizen. To feel that it is an obligation for him to vote; that it is his duty to be an active citizen, that he must fight vice wherever he finds it. Of course, politics is rotten and will continue to be till the best of the citizenry goes in to help."

"Ninth—World Citizenship. We old mothers had to tell our children that to be good United States citizens. Today we are world citizens. Two world wars, transportation, radio, interchange of students, and others."

"Today, with Tennyson, we say: 'The thoughts of men are widened with the process of the suns.'"

U.S. Needs Civil Defense

VOLUNTEERS ARE RESPONSIBLE FOR PROTECTING THE HOME FRONT

(This is the eleventh of a series of articles on civil defense, based on the booklet "This Is Civil Defense" prepared by the Federal Civil Defense Administration. It may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C., for ten cents.)

By MILLARD CALDWELL
Federal Civil Defense Administrator

All persons experienced in work having to do with health or medicine, others who can be trained in special weapons defense (against atomic, biological, and chemical warfare), are needed for the civil defense health service. Their big job will be to care for the injured, and protect the health of a city after an attack. In addition, many more volunteers will be needed for various duties under the direction of professional people, such as doctors and nurses, in the local civil defense organizations.

The health service also needs unskilled labor. Help is needed for such duties as washing laboratory glassware and mopping floors. In fact, no matter what you do, health service can use you in the vitally important civil defense work of saving lives. If an enemy attacks one of our cities, many persons will find themselves without food, clothing, money, and shelter. The health service provides such things and aids in locating missing persons, caring for infants, the aged, and the infirm. It also gathers and passes on news of people who are separated from their families, contacts relatives in other cities, refers families to places where they can get special help, and registers those persons who must have individual care.

Other volunteers are needed for clerical work, to keep records of the ill, the injured, and the dead, to aid in the procurement of blood for the blood service under the charge of the American Red Cross, and to be trained as assistants in laboratory work.

Training courses available. Training courses, under competent instructors, are available in the various branches of this civil defense program. Women, by background and experience, are well qualified for both these services and are urged to take a special interest in them.

JOHN DEERE DEALER to ENTERTAIN FARMERS and THEIR FAMILIES

"GALAHAD JONES"

WITH RICHARD CRANE, MARJORIE LORD, ELIZABETH PATTERSON, AND JONATHAN HALE

A full length feature picture, "Galahad Jones," will highlight the parade of entertainment to be staged for farmers and their families who attend the 18th annual John Deere Day show on Friday, February 1, 8:30 a. m., at the Georgia Theatre. "Galahad Jones" centers around a farmer's son, recently graduated from law school, who thwarts the efforts of a big time crook to profit from his political connections. It is a present-day problem picture with a moral and plenty of laughs for good entertainment. Richard Crane, playing the part of "Galahad Jones," is ably supported by Marjorie Lord, Elizabeth Patterson, Jonathan Hale, Ed Brophy, and four other Hollywood personalities. Five other new pictures are included in the fast-moving program, according to Don Thompson, a John Deere Tractor Company representative. One of the films, "The Big Payoff," features Tom Gordon, head of the memorable Gordon clan, who has been so popular in previous John Deere Day pictures. Another picture, "Oddities in Farming," is patterned after last year's popular film of the same name. "What's New for '52" will acquaint those in attendance with new John Deere implements and is sure to prove of interest to every farmer and his family. "The March of Harvest Time" and "Voice of Experience"—the two movies that complete the program, deal with subjects close to the heart of every farmer. Admission will be by ticket and farmers who have not yet received theirs may obtain them by calling in person at the Bulloch Tractor Co. Farmers are urged by Don Thompson and Joe Robert Tillman to get their tickets early. The show starts at 8:30 a. m.

Preventing Livestock Diseases Is Main Topic at Farm Bureau Meetings

Preventing livestock diseases was the theme of the three Farm Bureau meetings last week.

Frank Dooly, livestock specialist from Ft. Worth, Texas, led the discussion on livestock at Esala on Tuesday night. Nevils on Wednesday, and Register on Thursday night. He was assisted by James Young of Macon and S. L. Lanier, local druggist.

The story and use of phenothiazine as a worming agent was told in a motion picture, shown, according to USDA specialists in the story, that this drug gets more worms from more kinds of livestock than any other such drug on the market.

Mr. Dooly stated that several organizations were now processing the material, so widely used for worming livestock, and that it could be procured locally without difficulty.

He recommended that pigs be wormed with phenothiazine when about seven to eight weeks old and again at 14 weeks of age. He also believes it would be wise to keep some of it in the protein or mineral mixture from time to time.

Young cattle are just as adversely affected by worms as hogs and this specialist urged that cattle be wormed at about three to four months of age and that it would be well to keep the material before them in the salt from time to time.

If hogs and cattle are kept free of worms and lice, many of the diseases they have could be prevented. These parasites lower the vitality of the animals to such an extent that they contract various diseases much more readily than they should. Even heavier losses are experienced in vaccinating hogs for cholera if they are infested with worms and lice.

All cattle just naturally get lousy this time of the year and usually are infested with worms. Hogs always get lousy during dry weather and unless some special method is used they also naturally get wormy at about three months old, Mr. Dooly stated.

This specialist recommended an immunization program about as strongly as parasite control work. Vaccinating young animals against known local diseases is simply good insurance—a cheap insurance, Mr. Dooly said. Putting off these vaccinations usually gets the farmer in trouble, and one these diseases break out the losses of livestock will probably be heavy, he said.

Never leave grubs or worms in a cow's back. Dust or spray them with rotenone so they will be killed before they lower the vitality of the cattle, he urged.

This section of the country has a longer grazing season than any other section in the nation, but the warm climate and usually wet weather cause more parasite infestation and the need for more control work, according to Mr. Dooly.

Many of our hogs contract nutritional diseases in this area, especially when on only peanuts or corn. Much of the enteritis in hogs can be prevented if they are fed minerals and a protein supplement.

Esala and Register served barbecue suppers and Nevils a ham supper. Miss Irene Groover provided music for the Nevils supper with an accordion. Neil Bowen, local PMA fieldman, asked that all the ACP listing forms be returned to the PMA office by February, if a soil building allowance was expected.
