

Up She Goes For Two Of Our Own

WHEN A MAN is recognized in the community which he has moved into, in which he works, and has adopted as his home it reflects with credit upon his home town and the folk who reared him.

This week such recognition comes to two men who received their rearing and early training in Statesboro and Bulloch County.

And for them we toss our hat high into the air.

We're proud of them because they are Bulloch County people being recognized by those with whom they are now associated.

Ralph Mallard has been named by the directors of Associated Industries of Alabama to serve as chairman of the committee which will direct the observance of Alabama Industry Days scheduled for April 27-May 2. This observance is an annual event staged on a state-wide basis in cooperation with the Alabama Press Association and its member newspapers. Its purpose is to acquaint the public with the vital role industry plays in the community.

Ralph has been a resident of Anniston since 1928. He graduated as a textile engineer at Georgia Tech and began working with the Lenoir Thread Company twenty-five years ago.

He has advanced with the company until he is now assistant manager of the company's plant at Blue Mountain, Ala. He is active in both civic and church affairs. He is a member of the Anniston Kiwanas Club and a member of the city council of Blue Mountain.

Edwin Beasley has been given statewide recognition by the South Carolina Association of Soil Conservation District Supervisors for his work in soil conservation education.

As the special guest of the supervisors recently he was presented with a certificate which reads:

"In recognition of your outstanding leadership in developing and activation an educational program in the Cherokee Soil Conservation District, through which has been instilled in the minds of boys and girls a genuine realization of their dependency on soil and water, and the urgent need for the conservation of these natural resources, and for your cooperation with the local Board of Supervisors in promoting their Greater Service Program, the South Carolina Association of Soil Conservation Districts presents this certificate of appreciation."

Mr. Beasley, in addition to his job as principal of the Mellichamp school in Orangeburg, S. C., serves as an advisor to the education committee of the Orangeburg County Soil Conservation District Supervisors Program for Greater Service.

Mr. Beasley's achievements in the field of conservation education was the subject of feature stories in the Orangeburg newspapers and the magazine section of the State, published in Columbia, S. C.

And so it is with great pride that we throw up our hat for Ralph Mallard and Edwin Beasley.

What they are doing in their adopted homes reflects with great credit on their real home — Statesboro and Bulloch County. Congratulations!

The Fight Is On

THE BULLOCH COUNTY Health Department is going to war against flies and mosquitoes again this year.

Since the department began using D.D.T. as a weapon to fight flies and mosquitoes they have built up a resistance to the weapon.

This year the department is stepping up the concentration of DDT from three and six-tenths per cent to five percent and it is believed that the fly kill will be greater than it has in the past.

This spray program has become a part of the health department's program to make our community more enjoyable in which to live.

However, for the past two or three years there have been complaints questioning the effectiveness of the program in providing protection against house flies.

The program was originally instituted for protection against the malaria mosquito, but people thought of it and still think of the program as one to eliminate house flies.

Health authorities know that DDT is still very effective against the mosquito, but they have learned that the common house fly has the ability to develop a certain degree of resistance to practically all insecticides over a period of time. The fly cannot develop complete resistance to any chemical insecticide, but it can develop a resistance to prevent complete extermination. It is estimated that DDT will kill about 65 to 70 per cent of house flies that come in contact with the residual spray on the walls or ceilings for a long enough period of time.

Because of these findings the department is increasing the concentration of the DDT up to five per cent, thus building up its effectiveness to kill.

Dr. W. D. Lundquist, Commissioner of Health of the county health department points out that the best protection against the dirty house fly is the preventing of breeding. This means breeding places near the home should be cleaned up. This, in addition to the spray program, will win the war against the dirty things.

Mr. Lundquist states that the program got under way on Monday of this week in the southern part of the county.

Added to the program this year is the use of chlordane spray in the barns in the county. This part of the program is done for the cost of materials and labor and is confined to Saturday mornings.

Farmers wishing their barns sprayed should notify the county health department.

ment or Mr. Thomas Simmons who is supervising the program.

We believe that complete cooperation with this program will result in a more comfortable summer here in Bulloch County.

The fight is on!

And Much Fun For All

TODAY our neighbors over in Screven county are winding up a two-day Livestock Festival in which they combined work with play.

For eighteen years they have been putting on a livestock show and sale — just like the ones we put on here in Bulloch County.

But this year our neighbors in Screven added something new — a Rodeo, with parade, a Rodeo Queen, and all the fixings.

The county leaders got together and argued: "What could be more in keeping with our Livestock show and sale than a Rodeo?"

And so it came to pass.

Yesterday afternoon they held the Fat Barrow and Pure-bred Hog Show. Then there was the Livestock Festival Parade in which fifteen beautiful floats paraded the streets of Sylvania. Last night one of Screven county's prettiest girls was crowned Queen of the Rodeo. Then there was the Rodeo Calf scramble, pig chase.

This morning the Fat Cattle Show was held.

This afternoon the cattle and hogs were sold at auction.

Many prizes were awarded. Many dollars were put into the pockets of livestock farmers.

Many dollars were spent in the stores of Sylvania.

And much fun was had by all.

A Good Job Done

WE COMMEND the people of Statesboro for their wholehearted cooperation with the members of the Lions Club during their two-night broom sale. Officers of the civic club report that the sale was completely successful.

We commend the Lions Club upon their idea of selling something of value and using the profits for their civic projects instead of making a direct appeal for contributions.

A home always needs a broom and knowing that the profits from the purchase of one goes into a worthy project gives added incentive to buy. And everybody's happy.

When Every Man's A King

ALL'S FAIR by Jane

Another thrill-packed weekend with parties for the bride. Who, in drifted Brussels lace and satin, stood with Mooney at her side. . . . They pledged their love eternal even as the desert sands. . . . As solemnly exchanged their gold wedding bands. . . . The words of "Until" and "Thine Alone" enthralled the wedding guests. . . . While lovers listened and visioned their romantic quests. . . . When they too shall stand before the preacher and promise to. . . . Love, cherish and obey. . . . As did Dorothy Flanders and Mooney Prosser on their wedding day.

POT AND MOONEY made a smart getaway from the "chasers" as they left for Florida. They will return on May 3 and occupy a brand new apartment on Donohoe street, whose decor they were privileged to select. The exquisite pure Irish linen cover combining cut work embroidery and hand drawn lace used on the bride's table was loaned for the reception by Mrs. Aubrey Brannen. Lingo bought it in Panama City, Panama, C. A. as they came through from a visit to South America.

BROTHERLY LOVE

How's this for brotherly love? Max Edfield is the proud possessor of a season ticket for the ball games at Pilot's Field, a gift from his brother, John, of Thomasville, Georgia.

MRS. ED KENNEDY was greatly relieved Monday morning when she received a letter from Agnes Kennedy with news of the tornado that brought death and destruction to Columbus and near-by towns. Agnes wrote "It's a miracle that I escaped. Billy and I were riding home and didn't know any think about it until later. It struck only three blocks from us. We had left a window up and it didn't even rain in. Billy worked all night at the Saint Francis Hospital. Huge moving vans were twisted like pencils. Windows were blown from cars without even turning them on. I have never seen such destruction. The only inconvenience we had was a flat tire."

HAD THE PLEASURE of visiting Robbins Packing Company's new office building, the week. To say it's lovely is too trite. It is imposing and yes, it's lovely. The walls are pastel green and the floors are rubber tile. In the outer office we met Jim Dossy, accountant, Mrs. Harold Brannen, Clerk, and Pat Quattlebaum, bookkeeper. A beautiful painting of magnolias and cardinals, the work of Clara Mathewson, caught and HELD my attention. Clara Mathewson is Pat Robbins' grandmother and she lives in Augusta. In Mr. Marion Robbins' office (President and General Manager) the massive and elegant birthplace. Dot was scheduled to be in Paris Monday.

AS BIG AS LIFE and surprisingly handsome is the new oil painting of Alfred Dorman in the music room of his home on Savannah Avenue, but destined to grace the office of the Georgia Wholesale Grocers Association in Macon. Alfred Dorman is the founder of the Association and served as president for four years. Alfred and Willie are vacationing at Hot Springs, Ark., for three weeks.

JOAN GRIFFIN captured coveted title "Miss Dublin" twice in a row. She is employed in the Sea Island Bank and studies voice at Teachers College. This time Joan was quite husky-voiced with a cold. Hurrying from work Joan, accompanied by her cousin, Jane Averitt, made it to Dublin just before the floats were lining up for the parade. Her mother had her evening gown ready. Joan hastily dressed and was whisked away to join the parade. On the stage for the talent show, she had the audience with her from the time they realized that horseness didn't daunt her. Neva Langley, "Miss America," sat directly in front of her and encouraged her with a nod and a smile, and Joan's own amazement the words "If I could Tell you of my Devotion" came out clear and mellow. Neva Langley really captivated Joan, with her natural charm and great talent. Joan says she isn't ambitious when it comes to being Miss Georgia. She is sufficiently thrilled to represent Dublin and enjoy the wonderful entertainment at Columbus, Ga.

We Would Like To Adopt the Slogan 'Do it Now'

BY VIRGINIA RUSSELL

The postman brought us a letter from the eldest son. It contained great news — He informed us that he had adopted a new motto — "Do it Now!" He went on to tell us how doing right now had simplified his living and made his work more efficient and effective. We were so grateful to have a son of this house adopting such a slogan. For this house moves crabwise three-fourths of the time and snailwise the other fourth of the time.

This news caught the Head of the House working desperately on some work that had to be ready for a meeting Sunday night. We had saved some work for Saturday that had to be completed by Monday morning. We had told us we'd do it Saturday. We'd tried hard to do it by bits at school, but there is never a minute to be found at school (a teacher hardly has a free lunch period).

Saturday came but the only day-a-week maid didn't, so we failed to get the school work finished Sunday afternoon. We went to work to pull the ox out of the ditch. The work should have been done on a typewriter, but the Master of the House beat us to it. We had to hand print until we had writer's cramp.

Just as we were getting to a point where we could see the end of the task, the front door opened and there stood our man, home from his meeting. With him was another male of the species. Both were hungry. Couldn't we just peck up some eggs, fry some bacon, and make some coffee?

Finally the work was completed and we found ourselves repeating over and over, "Better make that 'Do it Now' our motto, too."

All of which made us recall a story our mother-in-law told us about her days as a bride. On an occasion, just after she was married, she went to her parents home to help prepare a big meal which they had planned for the new husband, he to follow the next day (by horse and buggy), arriving in time for the meal to which neighbors and friends had been invited. The next evening all the guests assembled but no groom. Husband. Finally, after a long and dreary wait, everyone (except the missing man) ate. But just as the guests were departing, up drove the lost husband. The almost frenzied young wife rushed out and cried, "What happened?" The husband calmly replied, "I found a ditch in the yard and moved it." He was bitten by a Do-it-Now urge at the wrong time.

If we could ask for a virtue that neither we nor our household possess, it would be the Do-it-Now virtue.

Just imagine! We'd have two or three articles down at the newspaper office in advance. We'd have all our work up to the minute, and there'd be nothing nagging us. The house would have already had its cleaning. There'd be no weeds in the yard. The clothes would be washed — oh, yes, and ironed. We'd be sitting calm and collected and clean and pretty, with orderliness everywhere. The school papers would be checked.

To contemplate such is glorious, but it is more practical to get to work — The supper dishes aren't washed, and the midnight hour approaches. We'd better attempt to begin to — Do it Now!

Rains Prove Need For Soil Program

Recent heavy rains in Bulloch and surrounding counties have pointed to a great need for more and better soil and water conservation measures on the land. More protection, whether permanent pastures, terraces, ponds, trees, etc. is needed. If all the land could be used according to what it is best suited and treated according to its needs, a permanent agriculture would result.

It has been interesting to note that the farm ponds designed and built according to engineering specifications of the Soil Conservation Service has not been damaged by the heavy rains.

An irrigation system has recently been designed for 3 1/2 acres of tobacco and 30 acres of corn on the farm of Lehman Franklin, a cooperator of the Ogeechee River Soil Conservation District near Clito, Simon Krook.
