

Get ready for July 4, '54

JULY FOURTH—Independence Day, 1953—is now nearly three weeks gone.

On that day, a few citizens of Statesboro and Bulloch county gathered in a public gathering place and heard the great document, The Declaration of Independence, read. They were impressed and inspired.

Now comes the time when plans should be drawn up for next year's observance of this national holiday.

For two years the Bulloch County Ministerial Association has spearheaded the responsibility for the Independence Day Program.

It was not their idea, when they conceived the annual observance, to assume the entire responsibility.

And so comes now a suggestion from a member of the ministers' association that a more general representative group of Bulloch county citizens assume the responsibility for the program in observance of Independence Day.

He suggests a standing committee—one appointed by the Ministerial Association to serve one year, one by the Statesboro Public Schools to serve two years; and one by Georgia Teachers College to serve for three years. We would add one from the Bulloch County Farm Bureau. As each term expires, a new member will be appointed.

Such a committee would truly represent Bulloch county.

The complete law of Moses was commanded to be read publicly before all Israel once every seven years: "And at the end of every seven years . . . thou shalt read this law before all Israel in their hearing." Deuteronomy 31:10-11.

The Declaration of Independence is not equal to the law of Moses, but it is a worthy document to be read before our people once each year and it is needed in these times of trouble through which we are passing.

Let's not put off this until too late to prepare for next Independence Day.

Why tie tobacco?

THE HERALD is 100 per cent in favor of any movement which is beneficial to the progress and well-being of this county and state. When wrong in our thinking we will readily change our minds when the error of our ways is pointed out in a convincing manner.

We have inquired of many men who are supposed to know the why and the wherefore for the life of us can't figure where the practice of farmers tying tobacco before putting it on the warehouse floors is of any benefit to them. Information we have from reliable sources indicates tobacco actually brings a higher price on the floor when not tied. If this be true what is there to be gained by the farmer going to all this extra trouble and expense.

Like we say, we are open for conviction, but until more understandable information is offered than that which we now possess we remain "again it."

—Nashville, (Ga.) Herald

It was a nice party

IT WAS a nice party and everyone had a wonderful time.

And out of it comes a lot of good will for Statesboro.

For you see a local lady gave a party and invited the wives of all the tobacco men on the Statesboro Tobacco Market to come and meet some of the ladies of Statesboro.

It was just a regular "hen-party."

There were refreshments on the terrace of the Country Club and a lot of talk.

The "girls" circulated around a lot and we don't imagine there was much heavy conversation—that is much discussion of the situation in Korea, or of the situation in East Germany—just a lot of small talk about who wore what at whose party, or "have-you-heard-but-don't-say-I-told-you" items.

And the wives of the tobacco men learned that the wives of Statesboro businessmen are just like them and that Statesboro's ladies are just as much a part of friendly Statesboro as are the menfolk.

Herald gets a new dress

NEVER SATISFIED with letting well-enough alone, the Bulloch Herald made some changes three weeks ago.

When we established the Herald back in 1937 we dressed our newspaper up in the then popular six-column format. Then in 1940 we put on the more modern seven-column dress, and adopted a new style headline system.

Then came 1949, and the Herald put on another new dress. We again changed our headline system to give it a brighter more readable look.

Then three weeks ago we dressed the Herald in another new dress—turn to the front page and you'll see that now your newspaper is sporting an eight-column format, with a new form of style of headlines, minimizing capitals in the heads.

Extensive tests made primarily by advertising typographers confirmed long-standing opinions that all-cap lines are difficult to read. Readability increased greatly when upper and lower cases were used in the elimination of caps within a sentence improved it still more.

We hope you like the Herald's new dress. It's for your pleasure.

Safety First

Don't wear yourself out and risk death by driving too far and too fast during your vacation. Our Georgia State Patrol asks you to take it easy and come back to your job rested, refreshed and in one piece.

When you drive on your vacation this summer, our Georgia State Patrol asks you to remember that traffic volumes are nearly 100 per cent higher than they were 10 years ago. Now, we simply cannot make the same speeds over the same distances and expect to do so safely. Please don't try.

Don't let your vacation activities kill you," says our Georgia State Patrol. Too many people try to cover too much distance in too little time, drive when drinking and drive when exhausted or sleepy. Please drive sensibly and get all the benefits of a holiday instead of traffic trouble.

Farm To Live and Live To Farm

Editor's Uneasy Chair

IF WE ARE to believe Frank Miller, he will never be any older than 60 years. Prior to his annual birthday party last Sunday at Needmore Farm, in Pembroke, Frank stated that this was to be the last of his birthday celebrations. For a great many years we have associated Frank's passing anniversary with his great birthday parties given at his place which he calls "Needmore Farm."

Since the one last Sunday, by his own admission, his last, he can never think of him being older than 60. With his zest for living he'll use up many more years, which we hope will be happy ones. THERE WAS NO air of the carnival or the festival as the tobacco market opened here last Thursday morning. The buyers, the warehousemen, the auctioneers, the farmers and their families knew it to be a serious business.

For some time we had been harboring a family which turned and bit the hand that protected them.

As we entered the door to our screen porch at home a yellow jacket, dived down from his home under the eaves of the porch, where he and his family had been enjoying the protection from the rains, the winds, the sun, and unleashed a vicious attack on us which left us with a puffed up cheek where his projectile entered with the first drive.

It was only a matter of moments when we lost our sense of neighborliness and destroyed his home and routed him and family.

If he had let well enough alone—we were not bothering him—he and his family would have enjoyed the seclusion of that protected spot the rest of the year.

But no—he had to become an aggressor. He made an unprovoked attack. And so now he paid the price of aggression.

Are you wondering who are the

We Wish We Had Written That

WHAT IS A WIFE?

A WIFE is the girl you married. She likes flowers, chocolates, smart clothes, and going places as much as the girl you married her. If you can't give her these, a kiss that says, "I love you," will do.

A wife is a steam laundry, a house-cleaning service, a cook, a commissary, and a lavatory attendant to your babies. She is a mother, nurse, counselor, and sock drawer. She is a detective and quickly locates the screw driver that you left right there three weeks ago and that the children have come to look for.

A wife is a magician. Your favorite shirt appears where she said it was when she comes to look for it, and in a flash she can produce order in a house that you and the children have run through with a bulldozer.

A wife likes your wounds, bolsters your ego, and has faith and persistence that make you move mountains. She is a safety valve when you must blow off steam at someone. She knows you as a small boy at heart who has never grown up, and that when you have a cold it is much worse than when she has a cold.

A wife must have the patience of Job, the wisdom of Solomon, the endurance of Atlas, and a sense of humor, but never, never show it when you are in a temper.

A wife spends the afternoon preparing your favorite meal for the night you ring at 6 o'clock to say that you are working late at the office. On week-ends she has lunch ready just as you have crawled under the car, runs the vacuum cleaner just as you've settled in your easy chair with the paper, asks you to fix something just as you are setting off for a game of golf.

A wife is the girl you married, although fatter or thinner—most certainly older. She might be even a bit dull. But look in the mirror, sir! Are you still the handsome, gay, carefree dog you used to be? Honestly now.

A wife understands you, needs you, loves you. In the world of men you may feel like crumbling limestone, but the minute you step through your door you are her Rock of Gibraltar.

SHORT STORY

As Mr. Jones rode along the highway, he became suspicious of the hitch-hiker he had picked up a short while before. Jones fumbled for his watch, found it missing. Becoming excited he reached into his glove compartment, produced a pistol and pointed it at the hitch-hiker.

Jones was careful as he brought the car to a halt, instructed the man to leave the car and hurriedly frisked him. The watch was in the hitch-hiker's watch pocket, the same railroad timepiece Jones had been wearing a short while package of mints in our desk drawer to kill the messy tasty ones we put in our mouth. We've made a cost check and have found that out of an average bag sometimes more than half were bad peanuts. So we've quit buying boiled peanuts—as much as we love them.

Carlos is one year older . . . tomorrow. And to prove it his better half is giving him a birthday party. Here's the way the invitations read:

"Hi Folks: Grab your hats, and join me at Dasher's Lodge at Elkhorn on July 24 for a grand old time. The Mooks are gonna fry my hide. Carlos is one year older . . . er. We'll celebrate from 7 p. m. 'till you've eaten your fill and are tired. Let me know if you can make it and how many plates I should reserve."

The invitation is signed "Sam Baskin," care of the Mooks. A talking fish is issuing the invitation.

"observers" who pick out the "Drivers-of-the-Week" for the Lions Club? So are we.

All we know is that an adult driver and a youth driver are selected each week. We do know that the things the observers look for are careful observation of all traffic ordinances, safety practices, and driving courtesy.

We suggest that you make yourself a "Driver-of-the-week" every week, whether an "observer" is watching or not. It'll make for safer driving for us all.

Are we wrong in believing that the boiled peanuts this year are not as good as they have been in years past?

Our experience so far this summer leads us to the conclusion that this is true.

The last several bags we've bought were strictly for the birds. We spotted two shirts as juice squirted from the peanuts as we opened them. We now keep a few more.

Jones returned to the car and left the hitch-hiker stranded on the lonely turnpike. He was relieved that his watch, a valuable railroad timepiece, had been recovered. He drove to his home and got out.

Jones' wife met him on the porch. "I thought you would be late tonight, dear," she said. "I thought you would be late because you left your watch at home this morning."

MY FAVORITE STORY

Two men fishing on a pier had varied luck. When one of them commenced catching quite large fish, he unhooked them and promptly threw them back in the water. After a time the other fisherman, having had no bites and appalled at the action of the more fortunate one, asked, "What's the big idea?" To which the other replied, "They were all too big to fit my pan." —Don Parker, Guyra, Australia.

A sentimental woman was married to an unromantic man. One evening she said to him with a sigh:

"Would you mourn for me if I were to die?"

"Oh, yes," he mumbled, "of course I would."

"And would you visit the cemetery often?"

"Certainly," he said with a little more animation, "I pass it on the way to the golf course." —The Spickman, Van Buren, Maine.

Strickly For The Birds—but it's for humans too

BY VIRGINIA RUSSELL

Perhaps the homelier birds mothers tell them not to envy the handsome cardinal. Maybe the wise mothers tell their less precocious children to observe the dashing cardinal with his beautiful, red coat and see how much sorrow comes from his good looks.

The members of our church watched a cardinal as he dovetailed his reflection in the windshield of the car. His little beak came a daily affair and he fought his mythical enemy each time until he was bloody.

This cardinal's nest was very near the parked car and doubtless the good-looking bird felt that he was protecting his little family.

Just after the eggs hatched the "human" family was away for five or six days. The first thing we did on our return was to peep in the nest. There lay one tiny bird, dead. The other two were gone. The nest was unharmed which made us think that an animal had not done the work. Boys might have, but we'd like to think that there are no such boys. Instead, we imagined that the poor bird just moved his family away from that "man," since he couldn't get rid of the enemy any other way. At any rate, a family of young cardinals is feeding and bathing in the yard, one month from the bird's disappearance. We enjoy thinking that this may be the same family.

Let's go back to the good-looking male cardinal and his intelligent attitude toward other good-looking males, even though they be just reflections. After telling the above story to a sister-in-law, she told us a similar one. She, too, observed a family of cardinals whose nest was built near a parked car. This cardinal's bloody war was waged with an enemy who stayed in the hubcap of the car's wheel.

One morning she watched him as he brought his mate along. The mate sat nearby as he jealously guarded his nest. His sister supposed that the cardinal had shaken his claws at his wife, as though to say that he wanted her to see him and the fellow for good. And as though the lady had just discovered what a silly fellow she was married to, she hovered in the air above him like a helicopter for a few seconds, shook her tail vigorously, and flew off in great disgust.

This episode was so alarming to our sister that she hurriedly covered the hubcaps of the car with dark paper. She greatly feared that a bill of divorce would result from this mirror-raised war.

The baby cardinals are like the human males in another respect. We observed a baby bird, male, we're sure, take a bath. He lit on the very edge of the bird bath and shook himself in a frenzied sort of way, never once coming in contact with the water. But above him on the branch of the tree was his mother giving directions. So he moved in a little closer and shot himself stirring up a drop or two of water. The mother was still there, so he plunged in, as though he'd drown but at least he got it over with.

Yes, we've observed many characteristics in the bird family that remind us of our featherless and wingless folks, the human family.

Bulloch land suited to trees

In Bulloch county of the Ogeechee River Soil Conservation District a list of overall conservation needs shows there are quite a large number of acres of land suited to growing trees.

In the past we have tried growing cotton and corn on a lot of this land with limited success. In short, we have tried almost everything except the Land planted to trees has an immediate increase in value that will more than off set the cost of planting. At the end of the first five years the land value is usually more than double. When the trees reach 12-15 years the first thinning for fence posts and pulpwood will bring a cash income of $20 per acre.

Tree seedlings can be bought from the Georgia Forestry Commission at a price not to exceed production costs. Industry, especially pulpwood companies, offer a limited number of seedlings to farmers. The Ogeechee River Soil Conservation District has detailed soils information that shows whether the land is excellent, good or fair for growing tree crops.

ALL'S FAIR

One of the sweetest moments of Ann's thrill-packed days... is a small white bride that will recall sweet memories always... Aunt Mat has kept for Ann in the breathless final hours... A record of her romance; sentimental as "Hearts and Flowers"... I wonder if that moment Ann and Earl posed before the pin... Was the time when Cupid with his arrow their hearts did entwine?

In all of our expressions of admiration for the bride, I want to pay tribute to Lottie Remington for her task of love. Last week when I had scribbled caught up with my work, I sat down on the edge of my bed. Never one time thinking that I would maintain that uncomfortable position, practically enthralled, for a matter of three hours. I had three huge scrap books, each slightly smaller than those large dictionaries that were placed on a large stand specially built to hold the huge book in the room school houses of our day. Yes, Ann's scrap books are large and they are wonderful! In the continuity of material, the illustrations, done with such artistry, and the painstaking and loving care that preserved the little mementoes. On page one, for instance, pasted along with good wishes for baby is a picture of the late Dr. A. J. Mooney. There Ann is all dressed up for her first day in Sunday school, for birthday parties, for school plays, always her report cards, her Sunday School certificates, her visits to camps, pictures with her sisters, the whole family. In three volumes, Lottie has preserved the tangible evidence of so many happy times. From birth through grammar school. Book two is High School, highlighted by Ann's acquaintance with the new boy in town, Earl Swickard. Then came proms with roses or carnations sent by her date.

SOCIETY

Book three depicts those glorious days in College and it was still Ann and Earl, but the flowers for dances were now orchids which Lottie preserved in celophane bags. What a close mother-daughter relationship there's must have been. For wherever Ann went, the camera was sure to go. Pictures sixteen pictures at seventeen—and now that Ann and Earl were married yesterday, Wednesday, July 22, Lottie will depict her loneliness as she completes the third book—Ann, the Bride.

A wonderful shining happy day for the days of her youth. And from Jane comes the wish that beauty, happiness and truth may follow the husband and wife all the days of their life. AND NOW come our travel: ers. Just back Friday from a tour of 18 states, and for some thing extra, a dip into old Mexico were Dr. and Mrs. D. L. Davis. In conversation with Lavenia I got the high spots in their tour which included a visit to Lavenia's brother, Jack Sittin at Akron, Ohio. They visited Boulder Dam. Saw the Grand Canyon, which naturally she made no attempt to describe, visited Los Angeles and San Francisco, taking in the zoo and museums there. They were amazed at the gambling done at Reno and their most thrilling moment came as they went over the Berthout Pass, 11,314 feet above sea level, in Colorado. Lavenia said that she had thought the Smokies were tremendously high until they motored over this pass. She saw Indians in New Mexico living in little round huts, and back in the States, even saw cliff dwellers and the sheep herders. Through the hot lands in Texas they were proud that they had installed an air conditioner for their car. They traveled on to Cincinnati, Knoxville and back to Statesboro, after traveling one month and a day. As ever, JANE.

MARTIN—JONES
The marriage of Miss Carolyn Yvonne Martin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. P. Martin, to Harry Norman Jones, son of Dr. W. D. Jones and the late H. N. Jones, was solemnized Sunday, July 5, in the fellowship of the new Baptist Church, under the double ring ceremony in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends. The bride, given in marriage by her father, was charming in her ballerina-length gown of white nylon tulle over satin. The bodice was fastened in back with covered buttons. The yoke and puffed sleeves were of tulle. The full gathered skirt came to a point in front. Her veil of imported illusion was shoulder-length and was caught with seed pearls to a cap of Chantilly lace over satin. Her gloves were of Chantilly lace. She carried a white bride's bouquet of pink and white roses. Her only ornament was a strand of pearls. Miss Shirley Jones, sister of the groom, was maid of honor. Her dress of emerald green silk organza was styled with puffed sleeves, and off-the-shoulder neckline, and a full ballerina-length skirt. She wore a matching picture hat, gloves of pink Chantilly lace, and carried a bouquet of pink flowers. The bridesmaids were Miss Shirley Owens and Miss Sara Frances Driggers. Miss Mary Ann Robinson, niece of the bride, was junior bridesmaid. Her dress was of white tulle, and carried a bouquet of pink flowers. Miss Owens wearing green. Miss Driggers, yellow, and Miss Robinson, lavender. They were matching picture hats, white lace gloves, and carried bouquets of flowers which matched their dresses. Eva Ray Robinson and Neysa Martin, nieces of the bride, were flower girls. Their dresses of blue net and taffeta were floor length and had sweetheart necklines. They wore bandeaus of shirred net, wristlets of pink carnations and carried baskets. Robert Lanier, cousin of the groom, was best man, the usher-groomsmen were Calvin Driggers and Donald Strickland. Mrs. Martin, mother of the bride, wore a dress of navy blue lace, navy accessories and corsage of white carnations. The groom's mother, Mrs. Cone, wore navy accessories and a white carnations with her dress of navy crepe. A reception at the home of the bride's parents followed the ceremony. Pastel gladioli and other summer flowers were used in decorating. The bride's table was covered with a hand-made cloth of Madeira linen and had the three-tiered wedding cake as its centerpiece. The cake, wreathed with white net ruffles and white flowers, was topped with a miniature bride and groom. On either end of the table were lighted candles in crystal candelabra.

AMONIA REMOVES STAINS
 Clothing specialists for the Agricultural Extension Service say that spots of discoloration caused by perspiration may be removed by holding the affected area of a garment over a bottle of amonia. Alkaline fumes help bring back color faded by acid in perspiration.

VIDALIA CITY LIMIT BETTER HOME TOWN

"Here's a Sign Of Progress!"
 Says Mrs. William F. Ledford of Vidalia
 "It means that my town is competing in the Champion Home Town Contest. We've already completed several important projects for community improvement, and we are hard at work on others. This year Vidalia is in to win!"
 Win or lose the prize money, a town is bound to benefit by entering the contest. Results are as tangible as a new hospital... better schools... paved streets... a swimming pool.
 Not one of the 251 participating towns can lose! That's why Georgia Power is proud to sponsor the Champion Home Town Contest for the fifth consecutive year.

"Speed is the main killer in traffic," says our Georgia State Patrol. The faster we go, the more distance we need to stop, the harder it is to turn or swerve and the less time we have for quick decisions. In addition, if we have an accident, the more severe it will be.

Family life specialists say it's a good practice to keep a flashlight under a child's pillow. If he's frightened in the night, he can flash it around and be assured.

Clothing specialists for the Agricultural Extension Service suggest a plastic vegetable bag as ideal for packing toilet articles in your travel bag.

Clothing specialists have this hint for preventing a double thread from snarling. Knot each end of thread separately instead of trying the ends together in one knot.

1953 Champion Home Town Contest

MANCHESTER Copies of a special Champion Home Town edition of the town paper were auctioned off at a community meeting recently to raise money to pay for a scrapbook. Bids ranged from one to six dollars.

Here's a word for bicycle riders from our Georgia State Patrol. Please remember cyclist are required by law to follow, as far as possible, exactly the same traffic rules as those laid down by motorists. They are required to have a light and reflector. A bike has little chance in a collision with an automobile.
