It was reassuring to see

WE WANT to assure the citizens of Bulloch County that there is one U. S. Army General who is watching out for our dollar. One U. S. General who is concerned with the training, the health, and the morale of our young men being trained into fighting men for our nation.

He is Major General G. S. Meloy Jr., Commandant of the Infantry School, and Commanding General of the Infantry Training Center at Fort Benning, Columbus, Ga.

On a two-day visit at Fort Benning last week with a group of newspaper publishers and editors we saw the Army taking our youth and turning them into strong, healthy, fighting men.

During our visit we caught the spirit of the enlisted men. We glimpsed the concern of the junior officers for their men.

We found a genuine interest of the field officers in the training and instructing of the men about to become the defenders of our nation.

And we liked what we found and observed.

There is a new concern for the taxpayers' dollars. Everywhere we found signs of economy and attempts at savings, and getting the most of what they have. In the kitchen, the mess hall, in the barracks, in the class rooms, in the administration and in the field. It was reassuring to see the cost consciousness which is apparent everywhere on that great post.

This consciousness was symbolized at the end of our visit when a young man, an officer candidate, came from his barracks and played a Scotch bagpipe, as a group of other officers did an impromptu Scotch Reel.

Though we were the guests of the General during the two days we paid for our sleeping quarters and our meals while there, except for one meal when we were the guest of the officers on Friday evening, at the Main Officers' Open Mess. We were told there that the Officers Club is entirely a private setup. The building by funds furnished by the officers from their assessments. The food served, the entertainment furnished, all, is at no expense to the taxpayer.

Maybe we were exposed to the better part of the post, you say.

Not so.

It would be hard for even a Major General in the Army to hide much from the prying eyes of 80 newspaper people representing the best weekly and daily papers in Georgia. We talked to enlisted men, junior officers, field officers. They gave us the "Word."

And we are reassured.

We want no turnpike

IF WE ARE to believe some of the reports coming out of Atlanta, we may expect that proposals will be made in the present session of the General Assembly for the construction of a toll road or turnpike through Georgia from the Tennessee line at Chattanooga to the Florida line south of Valdosta, a distance of about 375 miles.

Talmadge administration forces, shy of toll roads because of a defeat suffered at the hands of turnpike opponents two years ago, may nevertheless offer a new parkway bill if the climate seems right.

Governor Talmadge is known to look with favor upon turnpike prospects, but he probably will not risk sponsorship of legislation unless he sees a good chance to succeed in passing it.

Aside from the actual cost for construction and financing and maintenance it would cost Statesboro and Bulloch county dollars. It is already established that the most likely route would be along U.S. 41 from Chatanooga, Atlanta, Griffin, Macon, Valdosta into Florida.

It would split the state into two parts. The turnpike law does not require the turnpike authorities to provide access onto and off of it from and to lands on either side of the turnpike owned by one person. A farmer could not enter the through-way even though his property abuts the right-of-way. Many state highways and county roads would dead end at the turnpike right-of-way.

A turnpike through the center of Georgia would favor a few people who hope to profit from toll road construction.

If a turnpike or toll road should be constructed through Georgia it would be used by tourists who could afford to pay the extra cost. And those who pay to use it would spend little if any thing in Georgia except for what purchases they make on the turnpike itself. In view of the fact that it is customary for turnpike authorities to establish business monopolies on turnpikes, it follows that citizens in other sections of Georgia with heavy investments in restaurants, hotels, tourist courts, hotels, would suffer terrific losses.

To us these are simple, common sense reasons why we should discourage a turnpike to divide our state. There are others, but they run into the problems of financing such a project, and are hard for us to understand.

We hope our representatives from all Georgia see the turnpike

Weather makes good subject for conversation

By VIRGINIA RUSSELL

Weather is a subject for conversation any day. The kind of weather we've enjoyed of late would and could and does cause much talk. The dogwood trees on South Main, the maples, oaks, and other trees in the woods would stir the soul of the least artist.

Forgive us for being so personal but there is a letter from our second son who writes home about the weather. South Georgia can understand a youth's feeling toward snow, we thought you might enjoy it also.

"I am writing home this afternoon, because as I look out the window I see the snow on the roof and in the yard. The snow was the most beautiful thing I have seen in a long time."

Friday morning at 4 a. m., November 2, snow began to fall in Washington, D. C. This was the earliest snow fall in Washington in about thirteen years. It moves me so I kept thinking.

"It snowed this Friday morning. And it seemed to me, God had just sent it."

Especially for me.

"I woke Friday morning at six o'clock as usual. I was dressing for school when Aunt Ben called to me to look outside at the snow. I called back to her that anybody knew that it didn't snow this early in the year but that she had a fine joke, she just couldn't fool me. She insisted she wasn't joking and that news on the radio said it had been snowing for two hours. I still doubted, opened the blinds in my room, and peeked out. There on the ground was a veil of white snow covering the ground, and the flakes still slowly floating down. Some people may have looked on the snow in an unhappy manner but I felt a warmth inside that seemed to bring the One who sent the snow down closer to me."

"I left for school and as the snow flew into my face, I felt the thrill of really seeing it snow. The boys at Gym complained about the 'Washington weather,' except the ones from the New England states and the Northwestern states. They started telling about their snows. I didn't let them know that I was a boy who could remember having seen snow only twice in my life. I was overjoyed to see it snow."

"I gazed long at the beauty that the snow had brought. There was Longfellow sitting in the little park off Connecticut avenue. His stone hands covered with snow, and on his head a new white cap."

"There was the Capitol grounds all white, with children building snowmen. The once green mall, now beautifully white, with Washington's monument reaching toward the sky. The White House filling its name to the full promise."

"The once wide streets and sidewalks were gone. Only ruts, where cars had toiled to move, remained. The parked cars had the new '54' snow lines, where snow had covered them."

"There were the children, whom I think the snow was sent for, riding on their sleds, making snowmen, having happy snowball fights. The little girl up the street, who had been hit by a car a week ago, now well, was with her daddy, happily building a snowman."

"Yes, I shall remember this snowfall. For it covered a big and moving city with a beautiful blanket of white, which seemed to say to me, 'be still and see the wonders of God.'"

"Love,"

"BILL."

We were touched by the letter but we'll be interested to know how long his enthusiasm for snow lasts. Of course, we forget, he's only eighteen now.

STOP—LOOK AND THINK!

Be it known that LEODEL COLEMAN having been duly inducted into the ranks of the newspaper profession, and designated an honorary doughboy.

G. S. MELOY, JR., Major General, U.S.A., Commandant.

Date—13 Nov., 1953.

And so we, with nearly 80 other newspaper people, became an Honorary Doughboy at the Infantry School at Fort Benning.

Becoming a "Doughboy" was a "rough deal." It followed a "rigorous" training schedule which began Friday, November 13, at 12 o'clock, when members of the Georgia Press Association met at the Billingsley quarters on the base. We signed in, got our quarters, and instructors.

First Lieutenant Samuel L. Lewis Jr., signed us in and assigned us to First Lieutenant Bender of the 508th Airborne Division. We found our quarters and began our training.

Chow came first. We were loaded in three big buses and transported over to the Third Army Food Service School. The chow was wonderful—just like home.

The real training began when we reached the Tower Area where we were to become "grandstand" paratroopers. We sat there and went through the entire routine of getting our "parachute training." There was the physical conditioning, how to fall, how to approach the door of the plane, how to stand in the door, how to jump, how to "one thousand... two thousand... three thousand..." and rip our chute open.

By now we were worn out and the General gave us a rest before chowtime.

We were the guest of General Meloy at the Main Officers' Mess.

There we met and talked with General Omar N. Bradley, former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and now chairman of the board of the Bulova Research Laboratories.

It was while at chow that we were all awarded our "Doughboy" certificates, showing that we were indoctrinated in Infantry weapons, tactics, and techniques.

After chow we danced. And then to bed.

REVEILLE AT 6:45

The General was not kidding when he made us "Doughboys." At 6:45 we were shocked out of a gentle sleep by the sound of a bugle. (We simply thought we were having a nightmare carried over from our old Marine Corps days), but when a Pfc. came through the barracks where we were billeted booming "All right all you knuckleheads, rise and shine!"

Then the shock was eased as a band marched up and down the area playing "Sweet music" at 6:45 a. m.

There was much grumbling among the newspaper doughboys—the General didn't indoctrinate us in this phase of the training.

But we did make it—in time for chow.

Then over to the Automotive department to learn how to care for all the vehicles used in the army.

We finished this phase of the training with a demonstration on the $32,000, 12 cylinder engine, which propels a $250,000 tank.

Now the training got tough. We were transported to Buma Hill where we were to participate in an Infantry-Tank Team Attack.

It was something for the books.

A platoon of those $250,000 tanks, five in all, was lined up with their drivers wearing beautiful yellow scarves. A tough looking Captain gave us the word. Then "BOOM!" a tank fired a round and every "Doughboy" in the newspaper army hit the ceiling. Then came a demonstration of how the tank and its crew work as a team. It was reassuring to see how closely they work together—the man on foot with just a rifle and the big tank with tremendous fire power.

And so we became familiar with the infantry-tank team in attack.

We found ourselves glowing with new pride for the men in the service.

We found General Meloy gracious, understanding, and on the ball. We found that his junior officers, his field officers, his sergeants, his privates, and his enlisted men respected and liked him—and he liked them.

The young officers who "assisted" us in our indoctrination were fine men, enthusiastic in their service to our nation.

Lieutenant Colonel Rinkor, public information officer, accompanied us. Major Fido made all the arrangements for the visit and directed the tour. Assisting him were several junior officers—Lieutenant Lewis, Lieutenants—Lieutenant Whit-teman, Captain Woodard, and others.

Mrs. Kinkor proved a wonderful hostess to the ladies on the staff. A group of WACs was attached to them.

We were impressed. The Infantryman is our man from now on.

Our Boy Scouts...

The results of a recent "boy fact survey" staged in the elementary schools of Bulloch County proved to be a challenge, not just to Dean Paul Carroll, chairman of Boy Scout organization and extension, but to every citizen in the county.

The number one question asked by the boys seemed to be: "When can we join the Boy Scouts?"

The Scout units now organized in Statesboro, Brooklet, and Stillton have opened the doors of Scouting to many boys. The survey brought to light, however, that there are over 45 boys (11 and 12 years old) in Portals who are waiting and wanting to join the Boy Scouts; in Nevils there are over 30; in Register over 30; all asking to join the Scouts.

Who are they asking? What are they waiting for? They are asking YOU Mr. and Mrs. Citizen for leadership and counseling. They are waiting for your church or school, Farm Bureau or civic club to sponsor a Scout unit and give them a place to meet with their adult leader for a program of Scouting and all it has to offer them. Whether these boys are your own sons, or the sons of your fellow citizens, it is up to you to see that they, along with the hundreds of boys to follow, have the opportunities of Scouting, a chance to keep themselves "physically strong, mentally awake, and morally straight."

It is up to you to help your community to "Be Prepared" with a group of Boy Scouts who are: Trustworthy, Loyal, Helpful, Friendly, Courteous, Kind, Obedient, Cheerful, Thrifty, Brave, Clear and Reasoning.

Take advantage of this golden opportunity to "Do a Good Turn Daily" and organize a Scout unit in your community—do it today. Remember—it is better to build boys than to mend men.

boy" certificates, showing that we were indoctrinated in Infantry weapons, tactics, and techniques.

After chow we danced.

And then to bed.

REVEILLE AT 6:45

The General was not kidding when he made us "Doughboys." At 6:45 we were shocked out of a gentle sleep by the sound of a bugle. (We simply thought we were having a nightmare carried over from our old Marine Corps days), but when a Pfc. came through the barracks where we were billeted booming "All right all you knuckleheads, rise and shine!"

Then the shock was eased as a band marched up and down the area playing "Sweet music" at 6:45 a. m.

There was much grumbling among the newspaper doughboys—the General didn't indoctrinate us in this phase of the training.

But we did make it—in time for chow.

Then over to the Automotive department to learn how to care for all the vehicles used in the army.

We finished this phase of the training with a demonstration on the $32,000, 12 cylinder engine, which propels a $250,000 tank.

WRAPPING MEAT FOR FREEZING

Satisfactory wrapping material for meats to be frozen. "Blast" metal "freezer" foil, various plastic or synthetic films or bags and special heavily waxed paper made for the purpose. Press the wrapping close to the meat before sealing to give out as much air as possible, food preservationists say.

MEATS FOR THE FREEZER

If you prepare and package meat for your freezer remember that sanitation is a must. Don't let meat go into your locker carrying a load of bacteria that may increase rapidly when the meat is taken out and thawed. Freezing does not kill all bacteria that cause spoilage or affect the flavor of meat.

Community Center Recreation Roundup

The puppet show featuring "Hippity Hop's Varieties" held at the center on Saturday morning of last week was a big success with nearly 200 in attendance. The show was so good that plans are already being made for a return engagement next year. A new show is being organized now for next year's presentation.

The members of the H.G.L. Club and their guests, over 100 strong, celebrated their Annual Sadie Hawkins Day program at the center on Saturday night. The girls all took box suppers which they shared with their guests. Each girl had to catch her guest in traditional Sadie Hawkins fashion. Everyone had a swell time.

The two troops had an invitation from Mrs. Durden and enjoyed a hike down to the river from the lodge after which they played games and ate lunch.

Attention all Knot Holders. Don't miss the meeting this Saturday night from seven to nine at the center. All boys 8 to 12 are invited to join the club this week. There will be games and stunts, a TV show and hot dogs.

MRS. DELOACH HOSTESS TO HOME EC. TEACHERS AT DEMONSTRATION

On Thursday afternoon, Mrs. DeLoach, home economics teacher of the Statesboro High School, was hostess to the home economics teachers in this area in the home economics department.

The social room was decorated with autumn arrangements. The color of walls, ceiling and drapes were very attractive, and on the bulletin board were two specimens of the excellent sewing done in the classes. A bright plaid dress designed for a little girl, probably No. 2 size, was the work of Teresa Foy who carried the dress to Augusta this weekend for her niece, Betty Foy Sanders. The other specimen on the bulletin board was a cashy stripe blouse in the latest fashion, the work of Jane Carr. Billie Jane Foss brought the attractive flower arrangements. Punch and sandwiches were served.

MRS. NABERS HOSTESS TO MAD HATTERS

On Thursday afternoon, Mrs. Ed Nabers entertained her bridge club at her home on Carmel Drive.

The winter season was reflected in the use of a dried arrangement, and lovely vases of roses and chrysanthemums. Date nut loaf, topped with whipped cream, was served. Coca-Colas were served after the games.

Mrs. S. M. Wall, with high score, received a crystal vase. Mrs. Sidney Lanier received a wall planter for low. Out prize, a glove holder, went to Mrs. Ernest Cannon.

Others playing were Mrs. John Strickland, Mrs. Harry Brunson, Mrs. Robert Blund, Mrs. Jimmy Redding, Mrs. Bernard Scott, Mrs. Al McCullough, Mrs. Gene Curry, Mrs. Jim Spiers, and Mrs. Brantley Johnson.

TALLY CLUB

Mrs. Charles Brannen entertained the Tally Club at her attractive home on North Main street. A dried arrangement of potted plants were used in the decorations. Mary served her guests a dessert course and coffee.

Ben Turner, for top score, received a dried arrangement. Mrs. Tiny Hill received a woven red cornucopia for low. A wall planter went to Mrs. John Goodie for cut. After the games Coca-Colas, nuts and cheeses were served.

Other players were Mrs. Chatham Alderman, Mrs. Register, Miss Betty Lane, and Miss Betty Lane.

STATESBORO GARDEN CLUB

The Statesboro Garden Club met Tuesday at the home of Mrs. J. C. Hines with Mrs. Claude Howard as co-hostess.

Red roses and barberry were used in the decorations. Pecan pie ala mode was served.

Mr. Gordon Franklin and Mrs. Buren Altman brought attractive fall arrangements. Mrs. Louis Ellis was in charge of the program.

The guest speaker was Leodea Coleman who spoke on the "Planting of Bulbs." His suggestions and advice were helpful. The ladies enjoyed the humorous approach which made the lecture most entertaining.

Twenty Garden Club members were present.

JIMPS H. D. CLUB

On Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 10, the Jimps Home Demonstration Club met with Mrs. Emmett Scott on South Main street.

Miss Janie Warnock gave the devotional. Mrs. Scott presided at the brief business session.

Miss Joyce McDonald, assistant home demonstration agent gave a demonstration on drying in aluminum foil. Plans were made for a Christmas party.

The hostess served delicious refreshments.

SAFETY!
A Tradition... and a Fact

Safety is more than a tradition with the Central of Georgia, it's a fact, proven over millions of miles of fast, dependable transportation. And here's further proof: The Central recently received national recognition with the presentation of the E. H. Harriman Safety Award for its record in the safest year in railway history.

Top honors went to the Central for its classification of carriers in the Southern District.

To you, as a passenger, the Central's safety record means peace of mind and a smooth, relaxing trip, no matter what the weather. As a shipper, it means careful handling of your freight. Next time you travel or ship, remember that you're in safe hands with the Central.
