200 farmers at tobacco clinic

Dr. J. G. Gaines, pathologist at the Coastal Plains Experiment Station, Tifton, told the some 200 present last week for the tobacco clinic that the blue mold control recommendations for this year was the same as 1953.

He recommended the use of Virginia Gold or Hicks varieties, that for wire worms chlordane or aldrin in the transplanting water be used, use soil fumigants if needed to control root knot, put them in deep, 10 to 12 inches deep, using five to seven gallons of DD per acre, and that started solutions are helpful but that they had found that some two pounds of nitrate of soda per 50 gallons of transplanter water was most economical, or its equivalent.

Irrigation pays off on tobacco when water is needed, but Dr. Gaines has found that it is best to use about 1/2 inch of water of the time, even if it has to be put on twice in one week.

Mineral oil has not given them satisfactory sucker control at Tifton, he stated. The maleic hydrazide has given good results but must be used according to directions about the time tobacco is ready to top; top it out and spray it on with regular tobacco spray hitting the stalk any place with it does the job.

James Miles, in charge of the production of tobacco at the station, warned that too much fertilizer was as bad or worse than not enough on tobacco, both in the plant beds and in the field. Tobacco fertilizer is made up with some choline in it and when used in excessive amounts the tobacco takes up too much chlorine. He recommended that tobacco growers use from 1,000 to 1,400 pounds of 3-9-9 tobacco fertilizer per acre on the average Bulloch county soil; 800 to 1,000 pounds on the more fertile soils and from 1,200 to 1,600 pounds per acre on the poorer soils. A couple of tons of stable manure is also good for tobacco, he advised. However, he warned against the use of manure on tobacco lands.

Sub-soiling tobacco lands, the stiffer soils, about 18 inches deep has paid off at Tifton, Mr. Miles stated. The lighter soils have not paid off when sub-soiled.

Georgia farm population shows decline in last thirty years

Georgia's farm population decreased from 1,706,000 to 1,041,000 between 1920 and 1950, while total population increased from 2,911,000 to 3,445,000 during the same period. In 1920 the farm population was almost two thirds of the total state population, but by 1950 the proportion living on farms was less than one third.

This picture of decline in both number and percentage of people living on farms is fairly typical of the whole country, according to Walter S. Brown, associate director of the University of Georgia Agricultural Extension Service, who cites a recent report on farm population figures published by the Agricultural Marketing Service of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

For the nation as a whole, the total population rose between 1920 and 1950 from 106,088,000 to 150,697,000 people. The number living on farms fell during this same period from 3,974,000 to 23,058,000. While the total population was increasing itself by almost a half the proportion living on farms fell from slightly under one third to approximately 15 per cent.

Whereas about one American out of every three resided on a farm in 1920, only about one in six was a farm resident by 1950.

The proportion of people living and working on farms in the United States has declined rather steadily since 1910, the earliest date for which estimates of farm population are available, but the actual numbers have fluctuated up and down in response to war and economic influences, the report shows. Even the total numbers have trended downward in the long run, however, showing a reduction of 21 per cent in the four decades between 1910 and 1950.

"In spite of this drastic decline in farm population the total volume of farm produce has not declined. This is a definite tribute to the efficiency of modern farm people," Brown said.

Sub-soiling tobacco lands, the stiffer soils, about 18 inches deep has paid off at Tifton, Mr. Miles stated. The lighter soils have not paid off when sub-soiled.

ALL'S FAIR

By JANE
Well, this is operation day—big six from your old friend Jane. By that I mean, I'm out and ready for work again. The switch is from the Bulloch County Hospital, back to the Bulloch Herald.

The operation was mighty fine as far as I can tell now. And the nurses at the Hospital, they're really divine—and how.

IN FACT there's a new spirit that you feel almost as soon as you become conscious. Miss Blakely is Emory instructor of four Emory University senior student nurses. They are: Miss Nancy Stewart, Jacksonville, Florida, assigned to the new wing first floor; Miss Shirley Kimball, Atlanta, first floor; E. Wing; Joanne Wainwright, Miami, second floor; and Edith Young, Jacksonville, Florida. These girls are smooth and capable. They direct all nursing aides and are worthy of their respect and admiration. Why they kept my room so straight, especially my bed, that I practically had to hide my Saturday Evening Post because they got so dog-eared. For one whole hour I was hunting "Queen Anne's Lace" and discovered I'd tucked it under my pillow.

They have a sort of streamlined system. They use the aides. Your dresser, your bed, by our bedside units are checked all thru the day for neatness, and finally I was upset. "What are they looking for? When I became able to walk up and down the corridors, I would find all my trivets stacked neatly and my bed all remade. I finally told them what they needed in my bed was a wax patient and not one like me. But one of the visiting girls confided, "Oh, say, we would love to get a club to sponsor our decorating just a few hospital rooms. We want color and light." And when it comes to nursing, you almost feel there's healing in their approval.

I am an easy convert: And when I'm well I'm an enthusiastic crusader. And please, Mr. Editor, give me just a spot to express my appreciation to those of you who practically overwhelmed me with cards, gifts and lovely flowers during my two weeks in the hospital. A certain dear lady pinned a corsage, a gift to her, on my pillow, and then she came back for it so that she could preserve it in a plastic case. From Mrs. Jones, Bell and Buck Land, of Jones the Florist, added the first gorgeous touch when they sent a dozen and a half red roses and while they were still gorgeous, came from Jones the Florist, a second arrangement, in the mood of Spring. I cannot continue the listing of flowers or cards, but no star on opening night ever felt so happy and humble than I. A remembered story from the Christmas season.

Mrs. Hampton Brannen upon occasions had been invited to Florida to visit her brother and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Eula Proctor, so this Christmas she accepted their invitation and her sister-in-law gave her a beautiful diamond ring and matching wedding band.

CHRISTMAS IS OVER NOW
BY FATHER JOHN GARRY
Perhaps we have been wondering when we were going to take our crib down in front of St. Matthew's Church. You may have thought we were just too lazy to take it down till yesterday. Actually, though Christmas is not over till January 13 yesterday.

Christmas is not just a day. It is a season. Santa Claus takes off to the North Pole with his trusty reindeer after December 25. But Christ doesn't go anywhere. He is still with us, our little baby God.

It may be that we, some of us, think that Christmas is over because we do not hear Christmas music on the radio after December 25. The stores do not advertise anymore. All the Christmas shopping is done now.

So they take down their decorations; and they count their earnings. But Christmas is a religious feast. It is not like a play or a ball game. When they are finished that is the end of it. The feast of Christ's birth is too big to flash past us that fast. We prepare for His advent during the weeks of Advent. He comes to us at Christmas as a little babe. Now—He is here. He is still with us. The Liturgy of the Church keeps recalling the tremendous truth that Jesus is now one of us. It takes us a while to realize the full implications of that fact. It takes time to sink into our souls.

We don't get tired of reading the Gospels. But we could not stand reading a novel twice. Christmas is too beautiful a feast to dispense with in just twenty-four hours. The Magi, or Wise Men, are part of Christmas. And their feast, the feast of the Epiphany, or Little Christmas, is Jan. 6. We have eight days after these big feasts to get the full measure of grace that the feast holds for us. We have time to meditate on, and digest the wondrous scene portrayed by the crib. We get till Jan. 13 to extract all the joy and inspiration from this most heart-warming of all the feasts of the year—Christmas.

Bulloch County FARM NEWS

Farm Bureau

J. H. Wyatt elected president of Brooklet Farm Bureau

J. H. Wyatt was named president of the Brooklet Farm Bureau Wednesday night. Mr. Wyatt has been an active member of the Farm Bureau for some 15 years and has at various times served as president of the local Farm Bureau.

He knows Farm Bureau from all the levels it works. He succeeds John C. Cromley who had served two years.

John N. Rushing Jr., was elected from secretary to vice president and William Cromley named secretary.

Frank Dooley, livestock disease specialist from Fort Worth, Texas, discussed the various methods of preventing livestock diseases and pointed out that "an ounce of prevention is still worth more than a pound of cure."

Mr. Dooley showed a film on parasite control, both internal and external, on all classes of livestock, featuring the use of phenothiazine for controlling worms.

Antibiotics are grand and have a prominent place in the livestock program, but they are not the answer to the livestock disease problems. Mr. Dooley declared. These products help prevent disease, but they do not cure it. They are only a temporary relief.

Mr. Wyatt gave a brief report on the recent national Farm Bureau convention that he attended, pointing out that the Southern group made some excellent gains in a voice in the national organization and gained the vice president's position in the election. He also evaluated the possibility of the revised allotment resolution and expressed the belief that Congress would increase the acreage right off and the allotment would be allocated to those farms hurt worst by the recently issued allotments.

W. C. Hodges gave the Midland group a similar report Thursday night and expressed the belief that if the south maintained its present attitude, and increased its membership, the policies of the American Farm Bureau Federation as a whole could be brought more in line with the thinking of the Southern farmer.

Copies of the resolutions adopted at the recent county Farm Bureau meeting were presented and discussed.

The agricultural outlook for 1954 was a part of these programs, and printed copies of the Georgia outlook report given to those present.

NEW BERMUDA GRASS FOR SANDY PASTURES

By W. TAPP BENNETT Director Agricultural Development, Central of Ga. Railway.

Dr. Glenn W. Burton, of the Georgia Coastal Plains Experiment Station, Tifton, has "hit the jack pot" again.

It was Dr. Burton who developed Coastal Bermuda grass at Tifton and it has now been announced that a companion grass, silvopasture Bermuda, was released during the summer of 1953 to some 40 farmers who could qualify as certified Swannee Bermuda can be used for pastures on deep sands, such as abound on scrub oak and palmetto sand ridges, where Coastal Bermuda is not best adaptable. On these deep sands, with annual applications of some 50 pounds of nitrogen per acre, Swannee will produce from 10 to 20 per cent more than Coastal Bermuda.

Swannee grows tall enough to be cut for hay or silage and compares favorably with Coastal in palatability, disease resistance, and drought resistance. About the same practices are recommended for establishing and maintaining Swannee as for Coastal, with annual applications of 30 to 50 pounds of nitrogen per acre.

Swannee can be increased with additional nitrogen applications. A well-established stand of Swannee will probably impose deep sandy lands by adding some humus, but it is not believed that Legumes can be grown in combination with

The project must be operated according to the laws of the State and Federal Governments. Statesboro's program is financed by a Public Housing Administration loan for a maximum of 90 per cent of the cost of the project, plus the balance of the cost.

There are some of the major provisions of the Acts of Congress and the State Legislature affecting public housing:

Sears VP gets service award

Charles H. Kelstad of Atlanta, a vice president of Sears, Roebuck and Company, in charge of the company's Southern territory, was awarded the Good Citizenship Award for 1954 by the National Retail Dry Goods Association in New York last night. It was announced to him by Mrs. Miriam Hunter, manager of the local Sears mail order office.

Mr. Kelstad was awarded a silver plaque in recognition of his services as chairman of the National Red Cross. The accompanying citation paid tribute to his part in "directing the blood donor service which provided over 13,000,000 pints of blood for the armed forces during World War II. It added that "Mr. Kelstad's ideal of a blood and blood derivatives program for all the people has inspired not only millions of other volunteers within the American Red Cross, but has had a marked effect on the development of facilities to make blood available through other groups."

Oren Bacon Day is held at Esila

Oren Bacon was observed at Esila School Friday night by some 50 people from the District in appreciation for the part J. O. Bacon, division engineer for the State Highway Department, played in procuring the new road from the old Dublin road to Pembroke.

The road was completed during the fall and is now in use. This road was sorely needed in the community.

Carl Her, acting as master of ceremonies, stated that the new community sincerely appreciated the part Mr. Bacon played in helping to get the road through the community and that they had joined together to have a dinner in his honor and to present him with an engraved letter case as a token of their appreciation.

J. H. Hutch and his family prepared and served the bountiful turkey dinner at 7:30 p. m. It was not until 7:30 p. m. that Mr. Bacon knew what the score was on the dinner. Frank O. Miller, mayor of Pembroke and editor of the Pembroke Journal, had invited Mr. Bacon, his wife and mother, over to his home for the dinner. When the Bacons arrived, Mr. Miller took them along with Mrs. Miller to go out for dinner. No member of the Bacon family had ever dined at what was in store for them until they had arrived at Esila School and seated for the dinner.

T.C. Dramatic Club seeking old 78 records

The Dramatics Club and speech classes at Georgia Teachers College this week asked the people of Statesboro for donations of 78-r.p.m. phonograph records and old news and picture magazines.

The records are needed for supplying background music for the stage and radio productions by The Dramatics and the magazines are needed by the debaters for gathering material for debates.

Miss Dorothy Few, instructor in dramatics and speech, says she feels sure practically every household has a stack of old magazines around, and that many people have unused 78-r.p.m. records now that the other speeds are so popular.

"We can make good use of these records and magazines," said Miss Few, "and we'd appreciate any contributions. Anyone having records or magazines to give is asked to call 773-J1 after 5 p. m. or address a post card to Box 284, Collegeboro, telling where they may be picked up."
