OUR HEALTH
By K. R. HERRING
Digestive Troubles Traced To Irritated Nerves
The nervous system is an important factor in digestion. It regulates and controls the manufacture and secretion of various digestive juices. You can readily see the part it plays by performing an experiment on yourself. Talk to someone about foods you enjoy eating and does your mouth water. This is brought on by the brain relaying the message to the digestive glands in the mouth to secrete digestive juices in preparation for the food.

At present there is a great deal of talk relating to acid stomachs. There are many preparations offered on the market to neutralize the acid which is formed by over secreting glands.

Chiropractic adjustments remove the nerve irritations and restore the nerve supply to the glands so that they secrete the normal amount of acid.

Because of this close relationship between the nervous system and digestion, it is not advisable to eat while worried or tired but rather wait until rested.

Friday was "4-H Motto" day. The discussion was, "Making the Best Better," which was led by Mrs. Thelma P. Wright, area County Agents R. T. Churchill and M. C. Littles. This was followed by an address by Mr. W. A. Sutton, associate director of Agricultural Extension Service, University of Georgia. In his address Mr. Sutton said that Georgia is now celebrating her 50th anniversary in extension work, and pointed to the progress that has been made through 4-H Club work where the number has grown from 59 clubs in the beginning to more than 100,000 on this 50th anniversary.
