In addition to participating in all activities of this program, Mrs. Simmons will preside over all district group meetings for this district during the week.

Register FFA Boys Off On Vacation
Members of the Register Future Farmers of America chapter are taking time off from their duties this week to vacation at St. Simon's Island. The boys left Tuesday, June 14, and plan to return Sunday, July 19.

Among the activities scheduled for the week are a visit to near by Jekyll Island, and deep-sea fishing excursion.

A large part of the funds for the occasion was raised by the chapter members themselves. During the year they made money by operating Register's school.

The school bus was chartered for the trip.

Officers of next year's F.F.A. group are Eugene Bowman, president; Anderson Parish, vice-president; Sammie Little, secretary; Freddie Rushing, treasurer, and Harold Brannen, reporter.

MISS RUSHING—HART
Mr. and Mrs. Theron Kelly Rushing, of Register, announce the engagement of their daughter, Dorothy Frances, to Rex Hart, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Hart. The wedding will take place June 26.

Miss Rushing is a graduate of Statesboro High School and attended the Paris Beauty School in Savannah, and now has her own shop in Statesboro.

Mr. Hart served four years in the U. S. Army with two years' service in the Southwest Pacific with the 59th Amphibious Engineers.

Local Jaycees received copies of the Georgia State Roster this week. The roster lists the names, addresses, wives' names, and other facts about all members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce in Georgia. The booklet carries a list of the officers of each club.

BULLDOGS BOW TO CARDS
In the junior boys league this week, the mighty Bulldogs took their first defeat at the hands of the Cardinals. It was their first defeat in ten games. Max Roberts pitched the Cards to their victory, with Bobby Donaldson getting three hits for four trips to bat. Jimmy Jones caught the game for the Cards. Fountain and Preterious made up the Bulls' battery.

The Gold Bricks are still in first place position in the Junior League.

Jere Fletcher Hurls Second No-Hit Game In Junior Baseball League
Jere Fletcher, player-manager of the Dynamites, pitched the second no-hit game of the 1949 season when the Dynamites defeated the Cobras 4 to 1 last Thursday.

Fletcher allowed only one man to score when Catcher Rondel Wilson dropped the ball on a third strike.

Bobby Newton threw the first no hit the week before when the Gold Bricks defeated the Dynamites in the season's opener, 6 to 2.

College Students to Take Census of Statesboro

If people come knocking at your door next week asking questions, don't slam the door in their face. And when they tell you they are taking a census of Statesboro, don't think they are misrepresenting the facts just because it's not yet 1950.

The class in Principles of Sociology at Georgia Teachers College, under the direction of Prof. David Hawk, is completing plans for a census of the entire white population of the city of Statesboro to begin on Monday, June 20.

Student members of the class will act as enumerators in obtaining from residents in homes here, answers to a selected number of questions relating to residence, age, sex, and marital and educational status. From a tabulation of these answers they hope to obtain a scientific description of Statesboro's population.

Residents of Statesboro are asked to cooperate in making this survey possible. It promises to furnish both valuable practice to the students in learning at hand about a typical Georgia community, and a set of facts about the city itself which will be of value to all townspeople who are interested in community development.

The American Woman Abroad

(Editor's Note — Monday of this week Mrs. Mamie Hall Porritt, of Bradford, England, spoke to the Statesboro Rotary Club. We believe that the women of Bulloch county will find it challenging and that the men of the county will find it interesting. Here is the complete text of her talk.)

In a world that is changing faster than at any time in recorded history I want to talk to you for awhile on the American Woman Abroad—what impression she makes as she travels about the world—what she does and says—what impressions, experiences, and memories she brings home with her. Any knowledge I have on this subject began with an infant's textbook entitled, "Big People and Little People of Other Lands." On the first page of the book was the picture of a rickshaw and underneath was written, "Jump into a rickshaw and away we will go."

From that day until that lovely morning in May, 1925, when I arrived in Shanghai there was never any doubt in my mind but that some day I should really and truly "jump into a rickshaw."

"When I was small the following conversation was routine at mealtime, 'When I am big I'm going to China.' And my grandma would reply, 'Mamie, you know you are not going to China.' 'Oh, but Grandma, I am.' The dear old lady was still alive after I had been to China and come back home for two visits, and I might add that she had a warm chuckle in her voice as she had occasion to repeat the conversation to my husband.

The American Woman Abroad is a varied and difficult to describe as the photographs on her passport. Today, in all parts of the world "America" is a magic word.

I was once introduced to a class of small people in an English nursery school and the first question I was asked after they had been told that I had been born in America was, "Please Mam, are you a millionaire?" Had they not been of such tender age I might have taken them to a party in Burma the place cards were magazine cuttings that the hostess thought characteristic enough to identify, without name, her guests. Neither the guests nor the individual concerned had any difficulty in identifying one showing a girl waving from the prow of a ship and saying, "Goodbye, I'll see you at the end of $200."

When we go abroad we carry with us assurance and high courage and our Secretary of State always request in our passports that we be allowed to "freely to pass." Now this dignified phrase, it seems to me, carries with it responsibilities that I am afraid are not always assumed and I wonder if we are always as good ambassadors of our country as we might be. For one thing, we must not get the idea that because we are a great rich nation that we can walk roughshod over the customs and conventions of the countries in which we are guests. To us they may sometimes seem absurd but we must remember that they are probably hundreds of years older than our Constitution and Bill of Rights. That doesn't mean to say that we shouldn't be rightly proud of our own heritage but certainly we should demonstrate that heritage not with pomposity nor with humility—but with tact, goodwill and that something inside all of us that for want of a better word I shall call "warmth of humanism." And don't ever think for one single minute that even the "lesser breed without the law" won't recognize this "warmth of humanism" when they meet it. It's written in black and bold letters in our simplest actions. In China, for instance, we don't want to laugh when mourners carry food in a funeral procession. In England—certainly when we are sure of the political complexion of our associates, should one make fun of Queen Mary's hats nor of Princess Mary's legs. I am sure you are all familiar with the old story of the American who asked the Chinese when he expected the departed to eat the food they brought to the graveside. The reply was, "When they smell the flowers that you put on a new grave." And although Queen Mary's hats may not be a world-shaking question—the fact remains that to many she represents a link with some glorious history. And it well behooves us to respect that feeling—since we grew to greatness on the sails of the British Navy.

Another thing that is important—and that is an intelligent curiosity about foreign countries and peoples. I have always found that simple question, rather than facetious comment, evoke the kindest and most enlightening answers. Any attempt at silly ones is sometimes thrown back into the teeth of the questioner. Once on a bus I asked a lady she would kindly tell me the dividing line between Yorkshire and County Durham. She was rather an aggressive, unpleasant person, but once I had asked her a simple question she was determined that I should have the right answer. Before she was completely satisfied she had asked nearly every person in the bus for confirmation of what she thought was the dividing river and it was with scarcely suppressed pride that she pointed to it when we crossed it. When she left the bus at Darlington she turned to me and said: "Ee, lass, but ye are a nice American." A compliment I shan't soon forget—especially he rule of the word shan't soon forget—especially her use of the word REASONS FOR GOING ABROAD

And what are the reasons for our going abroad? Perhaps some of us have inherited the urge from adventurous ancestors. Some to accompany husbands and their posts of duty and perhaps a small few who have nothing better to do. Some go with the high and noble purpose of taking the story of a gentle Christ into the world's broad field of battle against man's inhumanity to man. The ones who go with a complete lack of interest in anything but themselves are the worst offenders. They are usually bored at home and would be bored in any of the fascinating spots on the face of this earth. These we can classify as "those to be endured." They compare everything and every place with the phrase "back home." I heard an American traveler shouting abuse at a Japanese waiter in a Kobe hotel when the charge for a packet of Camels was 30 cents. "In Hartford, Connecticut I only pay 15 cents." Madam is not in Hartford, Connecticut, was the perfect reply and it spoke volumes of what he actually thought of the lady. And although to some extent it might be understandable—it certainly shouldn't be wildly demonstrated. For the smiling attendant might suddenly wake up and say with perfect justification: "Why not go back to Hartford, Connecticut?"

As for the wives of business men—some are misfits and some are unsung heroes. In many out of the way places they have skirmished ahead of the army and preached in advance of the Church. They make homes in the outskirts of civilization and learn from experience to appreciate the way the other half lives. I met one girl in my travels whose husband was employed by the Burma Oil Company. They were the only foreign couple at their station. She said one of the things she did now to take a correspondence course in tap dancing. Now I leave you to draw your own conclusions of a girl who can do a thing like that. She came out of the jungle of Burma not only a good tap dancer, but also with a glorious feeling for life and living evident to everyone she met.

And I know some who have gone to early graves with nervous breakdowns in an attempt to change the centuries old custom of Far Eastern natives. There is a law—unwritten and unalterable—that a Chinese cook is entitled to five percent on all purchases for the kitchen. It is called "squeeze" and an "old custom." To an efficient housewife, it is, I suppose, monstrous—but my advice to new comers was to accept it—with a good grace. Your Chinese cook will not only claim it, he will get it. And if it is accepted and acquiesced in gracefully he will take mighty good care that tradesmen don't make too much profit at your expense. One foreign neighbor of mine was determined to put a stop to "such nonsense," as she called it. She did—for a month. For some unexplainable reason, her gas bill went up to $30 for the month—while mine remained a steady $5. The difference of $25 in those days in China would have accounted for five percent profit on a considerable quantity of cabbages and cauliflower. Another more sensible paid the cook five percent of whatever she brought into her kitchen. She, I might add, did not go to an early grave, but is now a successful journalist in London.

For the missionary there is usually hardships, danger and, sometimes, death—but there is a high and satisfying reward in the work they did. Of course, there are misfits even here—who somehow seem to miss the spirit of the Cross they represent. But Christ Himself had His Judas.

THE ADVENTUROUS ONES

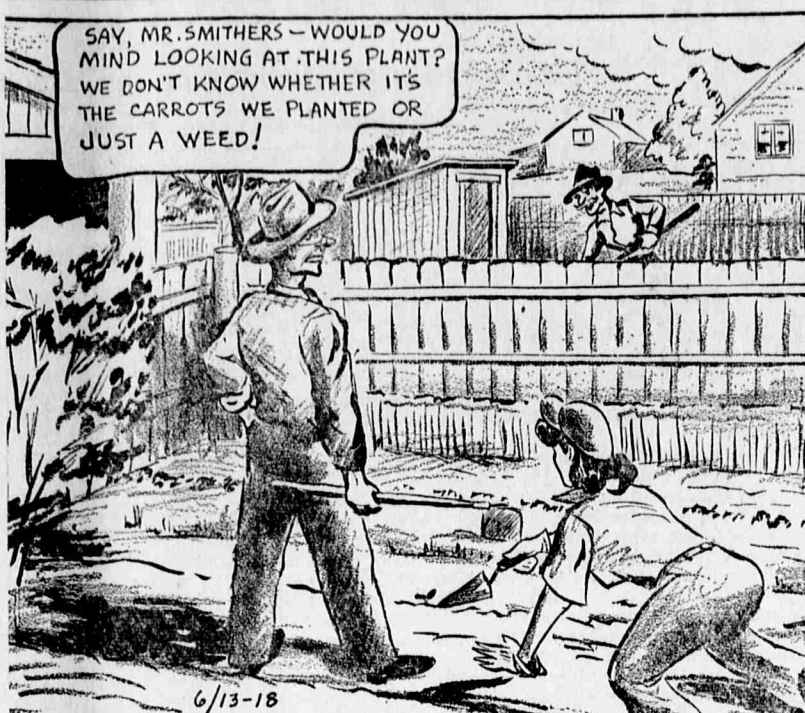

Now for the adventurous ones. They are, perhaps, nearest to my own heart. They conform to no strict pattern, but are the spiritual descendants of the pioneers. They are of the legion that was never strong and vary all the way from Anna Louise Strong and Rhona Prome to Sara Perkins, a schoolmate of mine. The scope for these wanderers abroad is less than it was 25 years ago. The shortening of the world's commercial lifelines is going on at a giddy pace. When I first went out to China, not many American women had attempted to make the trip to Kunning. During my last days out there I flew in and out of Kunning waiting to land because of an air raid alarm. Imagine our chagrin when we eventually landed and found that while the Japanese were bombing the town at 19,000 feet, we had been ducking in and out of clouds at 10,000 feet. Afterwards, my boss—who, at times, was in New York, asked me one day if George had ever told me about the time he was circling Kunning while the Japs were bombing it. There was heartfelt meaning in his reply: "I was with him."

To the adventuring woman abroad there attaches certain demands. Unless in her heart she can feel real sympathy for the people of the country in which she is living or traveling, she won't get very great returns for her adventure. She should move on rapidly until she finds a country that interests her to the extent of her sympathy. She might dance and dine in some of the world's most luxurious hotels—but she can do that at home. She might buy a ship's load of curios. She can likewise do that at home. But to stop in a wayside inn for a cup of tea—the cup so dirty you shudder for your insides—and to have a dear old Chinese coolie woman feel an existing sympathy and to have her stroke your hair while you are drinking your tea—seems to me to leave memories that linger ever so much longer. This applies not only to China. The world over this warm sympathy pays its own way. If I refer too often to China, I hope you will forgive me.

Now, the idea that all Americans are wealthy doesn't need much comment. Some over-tip and some try to buy out shops, lock stock and barrel and some even quibble about prices to an embarrassing to their hosts of duty and perhaps a small few who have nothing better to do. Some go with

The Editor's Uneasy Chair

Statesboro and Bulloch county have something that you don't find in other towns and counties.

And it takes a trip to prove these facts to you who have been around for such a long time. All the glories of our hometown communities are dimmed with familiarity.

But just take a trip—get a long way from home and you begin comparing everything with everything "back home."

You even develop into a sort of nuisance. For you are constantly "throwing" Statesboro and Bulloch county into the faces of your friends, or their friends.

Leaving here on Thursday morning of last week we made a trip into North Carolina, with stops in Columbia, S. C., and Charlotte, N. C., on the way up to Mt. Airy, N. C. On the way back we stopped in Chester, S. C.

Along the way, at filling stations and restaurants where we were asked questions so that we might toss in a casual statement like—"Now back in Bulloch county in South Georgia we have the biggest . . . the best . . . the finest . . . the most attractive . . . etc., and . . ."

All along the route we found the crops not as good as ours here in Bulloch county.

In the towns we drove through the homes are not so attractive as the homes in Statesboro. The business sections are not so inviting as the business sections in Statesboro.

In the rural areas the places are not the well-tended places we have in Bulloch county.

Friday was visitor's day for June. Intrigued by a paper of the state little thing, all walked in with brick like a medieval fortress, which we thought was a part of the landscaping and found it to be a very necessary part of the air cooling system at the Denmark Candy Company, halted us for a delightful visit at that place of business where the employers are all like one happy family and single - heartedly loyal to their boss, John Denmark, whom they declare a swell guy.

We were greeted by Willard (Mrs. John) Denmark—all the boys say when they encounter difficulties of any sort they go to her for advice and help. Jim Denmark has been a partner in the firm since 1946. About sixteen years ago these hustling young fellows cut into circulation quicker than any peanut vendor in Statesboro and their customers always came back for more. . . .

Willard and Rose Denmark assisted by Louise (Mrs. Archie) Hagan were hostesses at Open House and served punch, crackers and most delightful of all, Krackettes—which came from a very unimpaired - the boys say he is small cellophane bag and when foolishly found of Krackettes. I dropped in hot, deep fat produced fact, made himself sick eating

Of course all this is not true—except in our own minds. To be perfectly fair about the whole thing, citizens would find Statesboro and Bulloch county lacking in exactly the same comparisons we made.

But there really is something wonderful about Statesboro and Bulloch county that makes coming back home a thrilling event. . . .

comfortably, in Surry County, comfortably in Surry County, North Carolina, in the foothills of the Blue Ridge mountains. In a community eight miles from Mt. Airy in the home of Mrs. Nettie Allen, wife of the late Dr. M. Y. Allen, formerly of Georgia, and sister of the late F. N. Grimes, we found North Carolina almost as delightful as Statesboro.

Cool, quiet—with delicious eating properly spaced—we almost regretted leaving.

One afternoon was spent in the mountains on Cumberland Nob and in Roaring Gap. Part of one morning we visited the largest open-face granite quarry in the world, located near Mt. Airy.

Part of one afternoon was spent talking with the grandson of one of the original Siamese twins, who were settled in the Mt. Airy section of the county in the middle 1800s.

Try taking a trip sometime. . . it's good for the mind, body and soul.

We returned to Statesboro refreshed and keenly aware that after all there are communities in the nation just as good as Statesboro and Bulloch county. . . 1947 lives one house away and Beth and I were down there visiting.

This character came to the door with his line. His entering wedge was "I'm not working my way through college or anything like that. Haw, haw." Dean and I exchanged a sly look of amusement. He grinned continually in spite of his missing dentures and laughed heartily at his own remarks. In a few seconds, he was miraculously in the living room.

He had, what seemed to me, a good buy, so I signed. (And so did Dean.) We each took three magazines—all different—and plan to swap around. Before he left, he collected 90 cents and notified us that another man would come by late in the afternoon to check the deal and make sure we understood it. "They want to be sure," he added, "that I didn't promise you an automobile or radio, or anything like that. Haw, haw."

My next stop was at the North-side Drug and Grocery Store on the corner of North Main and group, not that I am a charmer, Parrish streets. It is a handsome but I sensed that they did it for their own protection. They didn't turn—real maple finish on the want Jane to come away from there armed with too much material for this column. I met Mose greeted by Bud Johnston and Almond - Old Man Mose, the blonde and blue-eyed Bernelle called him "cause he'd been around so long—three years. I believe—he is warehouseman. He is married and has three children. His brother, Claud, who delivers for romance - carries O'Henry's for him. Penn Brannen, married, with the company for nearly three years. Pernt was blistered from deep sea fishing. Says he baits his hook with Brock and candy. Joe Hagan, warehouseman, which came from a very unimpaired - the boys say he is small cellophane bag and when foolishly found of Krackettes. Five gallons of chips. There were three kinds and I tried them all, plain potato chips, potato with onion flavor (simply delicious) with fish. Seems like that ought to win a prize as a slogan—then there were delicate pink tomato chips. To my amazement we found that this candy company had for sale every kind of merchandise we could think of, except shoes and red flannel underwear.

I met all of the employees—they stayed around me in a solid group, not that I am a charmer, Parrish streets. It is a handsome but I sensed that they did it for their own protection. Dottie Hargrove's .DOTS.

We are settled. At least, as settled as we can get until we have a pay day. We never realized that moving was so expensive—express charges on various items, deposits made to get gas course, groceries and gas, and electricity turned on, and, of Our mattress came with our furniture and we slept on it Wednesday night. We were so exhausted from loading and unloading the trailer and the ride that just the mattress felt wonderful. Thursday, the man came with the springs, so we are coming up in the world by degrees.

If you've always lived in a house all to yourself, you can't imagine what pleasure I'm experiencing. After three years of existing in apartments, the joy and satisfaction of living in a four-room, one-floor house on a 70 x 150 foot lot is super.

Now, the apartments were fun. They were places to eat and sleep and play at housekeeping, but this is like being turned loose in fairyland. Maybe I'll get my fill of it like boys and girls who work in ice cream parlors, but it won't be anytime soon.

Although the house has been lived in before, it's only about nine months old, and I've been sitting in the windows scraping paint off glass panes with a razor blade and the spots are always on the other side. It's tedious, but I'm nearly around now.

The yard needs expensive attention, but for the time being, it is working it over with a lazy boy and a lawn mower. He has cleaned out a small plot of radishes and tomatoes left by former tenants and we are nursing zinnia plants along out at the front of the house.

Both used to be satisfied to play upstairs, but now it's "I want 'shunshine', Mama!" "door lock—open it, Mama!" So I turn off the iron and take her out. There's a German police pup next door who's fascinated at his own caught her trading bites of an old big pine cone with him yesterday.

Even the door-to-door salesmen give me a bang. I missed them all living on second floors. Only yesterday, a middle-aged man (with his top two front teeth missing) came selling magazines. Dean Howard Roberson (Miss GTC of Statesboro and Bulloch county . . . 1947) lives one house away and Beth and I were down there visiting.

Mrs. Filbert's varies a salad

7 delicious ways!

"I never knew I liked salads before!"
Yes, here's a human flavor! Tasty—because Mrs. Filbert puts fresh lemon juice in her mayonnaise. Rich—because she adds extra egg yolks. Delicious as is—and so easy to vary that even small fry gobble healthful salads up! Get Mrs. Filbert's today.

Look! . . . 7 tempting tricks with Mrs. Filbert's Mayonnaise! Same salad greens got brand new twist . . . taste wonderful!

- 1 Healthful! Mix with tomato juice.
- 2 Zesty! Add a few drops of Worcestershire Sauce.
- 3 Cool! Shred pineapple in Mrs. Filbert's.
- 4 Exotic! Add just a dash of curry.
- 5 Peppy! Add chopped olives—stuffed or plain.
- 6 Pink! Mix catsup in—half and half.
- 7 Delicious! Spoon Mrs. Filbert's right from the jar. M-m-m-m! Real fresh-off-the-eggbeater flavor!

Mrs. Filbert's MAYONNAISE

Just how high is "HIGH COMPRESSION"?

When the talk turns to cars and car engines these days, that's a topic you hear much about.

So it's fairly interesting to note that, even back before the war, Buick engines like this one were touring the testing grounds with compression as high as 10 to 1.

Even later than that this same big Buick power plant has been filling our engineers' notebooks with data on 8 to 1 compression ratios.

What has come out of this? Two or three interesting points.

First of all, that this Buick Fireball valve-in-head straight-eight already has a compression ratio that gets as much out of present fuels as any engine on the market.

Next, that these ratios can readily be stepped up to fit higher octane gasolines as they become available.

And probably most important of all, that high compression is only one measurement of a good engine.

There's the fundamental matter of engine efficiency—power output per cubic inch of displacement, engineers call it. On that score, Buick stands where it always has—just about tops in its field!

So we invite you to see your Buick dealer for a firsthand test of Buick. Take it in your own two hands and find out how good it feels, how full of get-up-and-go.

It won't take long to make it pretty clear that the place to get your order in is the place where you get Buick power.

Which means, in very simple words—better go see for yourself.

The fun you get from your car—the pleasure and satisfaction it gives you—are best measured in just one place—behind the wheel.
