

You Just Can't Be Sure

LAST NIGHT you sat down to your supper—a beautiful piece of steak. You commented on how luscious it was.

For breakfast this morning you had sausage with your eggs. Big, fat, succulent lengths of tastefully seasoned sausages—and you went to work in a happy frame of mind.

And in the middle of the morning your wife visited her favorite meat market, looking for a nice roast for your lunch. And, last night while enjoying your steak, it never entered your mind to question the condition of that piece of meat before it was prepared for cooking. When your wife selected it she chose it because it was a nice looking piece of meat. Or, if you selected it, you only visualized it as it would appear before you, surrounded by rich, red steak juices. Your wife was—you were—convinced of its quality by the word and reputation of your butcher.

And at breakfast this morning your thoughts were not bothered with worries of what pieces of meat went into the grinding of your delicious sausages. The confidence you have in the meat market from which the sausages came eliminated such worry.

And the roast that you will eat at lunch today or tomorrow will be tender and tasty. And there's no time lost in wondering of the course of events which brought it before you.

And we're not ones to disturb your feeling of confidence in your butcher, nor to set you to worrying about the meats you eat at your table.

Nor are we ones to cast shadows over those who channel meats into our markets and homes here in Bulloch county and Statesboro.

Yet you buy and eat meat every day which come from the hoof to you with no assurance that it is, or was, free of contamination.

You buy and eat meat every day which goes through no semblance of an inspection to determine its healthy condition.

You can't know the condition of the animal when it was slaughtered—you can't know for sure if it were free of tuberculosis—if it were free of cholera—if it were free of abscessed liver.

You tell yourself you don't have to be sure. You are sure of the man who sold you the meat, and that's good enough for you.

Read the following facts and then tell yourself you are sure.

For a nine-month period, from March 17, 1949, to December 1, 1949, at Robbins Packing Company, recently established slaughterers and meat processors, Dr. Arundel, meat inspector for the company, condemned 1,205 abscessed hog livers and 22 abscessed hog shoulders and hams.

During that period he condemned six hog carcasses because of hog cholera, 2 for pneumonia, one with tuberculosis, 2 with erysipelas, and eight for cryptorchid.

And during the same period Dr. Arundel condemned four abscessed shoulders of beef, six abscessed livers, one carcass with tuberculosis, one with tapeworm and one with septicaemia.

Up It Goes Again!

THERE IT GOES AGAIN! Our hat, we mean.

We've tossed it high into the air again. Mrs. H. V. (Miss Pearl) Franklin's living room, the most improved living room in Bulloch county and the first district, has been declared to be the most improved living room in the State of Georgia.

And yesterday at noon, Rich's of Atlanta, one of the South's largest department stores, gave her a $200 gift certificate and a big luncheon in their Magnolia Room, to prove it.

And her daughter, Ruth Rebecca (well, o.k., Mrs. Ward Morehouse), of New York City, and her son, H. V. Franklin Jr. (we bet he had a time), was with her.

Last year it was a Bulloch county kitchen that was declared the most improved in the Georgia Power Company's kitchen contest—improved by Miss Janie Warnock, and Miss Ester Warnock.

And, so, it was sort of expected that a Bulloch county living room would be declared the most improved in Rich's living room contest.

And it was just plain natural that Miss Pearl and H. V. Jr. should win it. We congratulate them and wish them many happy hours in their lovely living room.

The Highway Board

THE ANNOUNCEMENT by Gov. Herman Talmadge that he plans to insist on a constitutional highway board at the January session of the Legislature is encouraging.

As outlined by the governor the plan he proposes calls for a five-man constitutional highway board in contrast to the Gholston plan which calls for ten from each congressional district.

The governor's plan also differs from the Gholston plan in that the one he offers provides for the appointment of board members by the governor and the other provides for their election by the Legislature. In both plans terms of members would be staggered.

We sincerely hope that Gov. Talmadge and Senator Gholston can reach an agreement on a highway plan that will incorporate the best features of each of the proposed measures. Gov. Talmadge is committed to a highway board removed from political control and Senator Gholston is perhaps the best informed citizen in Georgia on the best non-political setup.

He has been a one-man movement for highway reform.

Whether the Legislature adopts the Iowa plan as proposed by Gov. Talmadge or the South Carolina plan as proposed by Senator Gholston, a reorganization system substantially better than the present system should be approved. As The Atlanta Journal recently quoted a spokesman at a Mississippi highway meeting, "What we need is not more money for our roads, but more roads for our money." A non-political board should help toward that objective.—Baxley News-Banner.

Vehicle Inspection

STATE INSPECTION of all automobiles to keep unsafe off the highways is one way to help cut the awful traffic toll in human deaths and injuries. Governor William Preston Lane, of Maryland, told his fellow chief executives in a recent conference.

Presiding at a round table on highway safety and motor transport regulation, the Maryland governor recommended uniform traffic codes and state inspection of vehicles as means of combating the highway slaughter.

We hope Georgia legislators will get the idea and put such statutes on the law books of our state.

We need especially a vehicle inspection law and a driver's financial responsibility requirement.

We're glad to see that Governor Herman Talmadge is calling a state Conference on highway safety.—Cobb County Times.

Tree of Perennial Beauty

The Editor's Uneasy Chair

This year toyland will be a joy to parents too. There'll be dolls that won't break and clever mimics (clever enough to make house-cleaning fun).

And construction toys will equip junior to serve an apprenticeship in carpentry or bricklaying... they're that real.

Realism reigns in toyland. A toy dog really barks when you pull his leash; his mouth pops open to reveal a set of terrifying (but harmless) set of molars. Baby dolls aren't made-up of be beautiful; they look like newborns with wrinkled red faces and all.

And many of the babies have soft, baby skin.

Baby dolls go on having realistic habits (some of them burp) and they're now provided with the much-needed diaper service container. It's a pink plastic can that stands about knee-high to a 2-year-old. It contains a gauze lining (like its life-size model) and the lid opens with a pedal control.

In tune with current grown-up taste, there's a ranch style doll house with a set of plastic telephone that talks back to whoever picks up the receiver. The voice on the line sounds like the noise some dolls make when they cry.

Another telephone rings like crazy when you punch a button by the dial. A key buried in the side of the phone is responsible for the noise.

Junior size vacuum cleaners still whirr, whine... and clean. Young domestics will find themselves making a clean sweep of the floor.

When you plug the toy into a wall socket, electricity makes an actual track vibrate and the vibration makes the tiny cars move. The cars will go on running indefinitely. There are no springs or winding apparatus to get broken.

Cowboys and Indians can rove the neighborhood prairie in all the glitter expected of a Saturday afternoon. Costumes are sparkled with elaborate gun and holster sets. Some encrusted with jewels like costume bracelets.

One particular holster set for boys who climb fences in the Western manner, clamps the gun and holster together. The gun is released by touching the metal catch on the outside of the holster.

That we never ate pheasant while there. The conversation was still in progress when the doorbell rang. An air mail special delivery package had arrived. In it? Horace, there were two pheasants all dressed for cooking. The pheasants were from South Dakota and were sent by a man Dr. Brown had met when they were both patients at Duke University Hospital. This week Dr. Brown and his friend, Mr. White, of South Dakota, will meet again at Duke Clinic.

RUSSELL EVERETT, after bidding farewell to some teeth that have served him long and well is in the process of getting accustomed to dentures. The first night he wore his plate, Lulu remarked the next morning, "I'm sure an glad you've got your plate. You didn't snore all last night." "Snore, the d--," retorted Russell. "I reckon I didn't. I stayed awake all night and held them. I was afraid I'd snore. They make the body ache," and with big plans for future days, our minds shouldn't drift into useless reveries or worry our bodies into sickness.

Someone has said the grand essentials of happiness are "something to do, something to love and something to hope for, and it's so. Keep that spirit!

KEEP THAT SPIRIT

The weather hasn't been Christmas weather here at all, but everyone is getting the spirit. People are acting gay and the smiles you see on every face indicate the joyous season of Christmas is rapidly approaching.

Events are transpiring daily on every sidewalk in the nation that won't recur again until another holiday is in the offing.

The other day, Dean and I sat in Sullivan's Ford and cranked impatiently until the battery was too tired to groan again. A man driving a telephone truck stopped to help and we quailed the car into the street, where he proceeded to give us "bumper-to-bumper" service. We took off with a burst of smoke and had no more trouble.

At the War Tire Company, an attendant noticed a peculiar noise which we had been reluctant to mention to each other. Honestly, it sounded the way it's said when we left on our honeymoon. A lug had worked loose on the right front wheel and the man cheerfully jacked the hub cap off and tightened it for us.

Driving from Macon, where Birdie met us last week after Ann and Edward Slams had given us a lift from Waycross, I was stopped just inside the city limits of Thomaston by two massive state troopers. It seemed that our tail lights were out and that I had also been hitting 60 off an on—"but not too much," he said generously.

Mother was muttering that a local service man had checked the car before she left and I was frantically searching for that elusive slip of paper called a driver's license. I told Trooper Harrison that Thomaston was our destination and must have been too eager to get home.

Beth came out from under Birdie's fur coat, blinked a pair of heavy eyes, and, deciding there was nothing she could do or say at a time like that, promptly stuck the middle two fingers of her left hand in her mouth.

I had never been stopped before and the wall of that siren in my ears rocked my foundation. They were very nice. The main thing was the lack of lights on the rear of the car and, since we were nearly home, they just "warned me." But they were so gracious about the whole thing.

Seems people are just more considerate now. Maybe they're not really nice—maybe everyone just takes more time to be friendly.

It seems we realize that all men are brothers. The beggar in the street gets coins in his cup instead of disapproving glances or total disregard. Grocery and dry goods clerks don't seem so bored with their work.

Cheerful greetings are exchanged by complete strangers and no one feels foolish or forward. We laugh gaily over incidents or accidents that would have galled and disturbed us two months ago.

It's just wonderful. Little excitement is a grand thing for everybody. You know, it all boils down to anticipation. If we had something really exciting planned ahead every month of the year, we'd get the same reaction. We need a certain amount of stimulation before we can get the cozy glow that comes with joyous anticipation.

Something to plan ahead for—something to get excited about—something to stir our imaginations and inspire us to do, to dream. Such projects would keep us young, alert and alive. Shakespeare said, "It's mind that makes the body ache," and with big plans for future days, our minds shouldn't drift into useless reveries or worry our bodies into sickness.

Someone has said the grand essentials of happiness are "something to do, something to love and something to hope for, and it's so. Keep that spirit!

Business and Professional Women Hold Emblem Breakfast at Jaekel Hotel

The December program of the Stateboro Business and Professional Women's Club, arranged by the Public Affairs Committee composed of Zula Gammage, Florida Gernant and Pearl Deal, included an Emblem Breakfast at the Jaekel Hotel Sunday morning, December 11, at 9:30 o'clock, and a Christmas party at the Forest Heights Country Club on Monday evening, December 12, at 7:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Helen Knight Smothers, president of the Georgia Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, of Columbus, Ga., was the speaker at the Emblem Breakfast. About forty persons attended the breakfast and heard Mrs. Smothers' beautiful talk on the club emblem. Guests of the club included six members of the new Burke County Business and Professional Women's Club, of Waynesboro, Ga., which is being sponsored by the Stateboro club; Miss Ruby Brown, district chairman, of Millen, and a number of prospective members.

Miss Ann Williford, president of the Stateboro club, presided at the breakfast and introduced the state president, Mrs. Smothers. Miss Imogene Flanders offered a morning prayer, and Miss Edna Laik, of Georgia Teachers College, with Mrs. Waldo Floyd as accompanist, sang two selections, "I Shall Not Pass Again This Way Today" and "The Birth of a King." At the close of the breakfast they, in a body, attended the 11:30 o'clock service at the Methodist Church.

ELABORATE BANQUET AT COUNTRY CLUB
The Christmas party, which is an annual affair of the club, carried out the Christmas thoughts and meaning in every detail. Gleaming red lighted candles, interspersed between each group of red Christmas balls on a silver leaf, the center ball as place card, down the entire length of the T-shaped table, was an inspiring sight. A table in front of the huge fireplace, the mantel of which was

LOVELY PARTIES THURSDAY HIGHLIGHT SOCIAL EVENTS

Mrs. B. A. Daughtry and Mrs. Grady Bland were charming hostesses at morning and afternoon bridge parties Thursday at the home of Mrs. Mary Webb, second vice president of the Georgia Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, of Douglasville and Atlanta, was the speaker of the evening. Her message, which was delivered in a most pleasing and effective manner, was timely and well received. Miss Webb was introduced by Zula Gammage, who is state treasurer of the Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

At the morning party prizes were won by Mrs. Devane Watson, top score (dusting powder); Mrs. Perry Kennedy, low score (a card table cover), and Mrs. Glenn Jennings (a satin lined glove box).

Morning guests were Mrs. Z. Whitehurst, Mrs. Lloyd Brannen, Mrs. Jack Carlton, Mrs. Hugh Arundel, Mrs. Cliff Bradley, Mrs. D. L. Davis, Mrs. Inman Deale, Mrs. Hubert Brannen, Mrs. Emmitt Akins, Mrs. Frank Olliff, Mrs. J. P. Foy, Mrs. Grady Attaway, and Mrs. Perry Averett.

For the afternoon party, members of the As You Like It bridge club were guests. Mrs. Joe W. Brown received perfumery for high score; Mrs. Jim Spiers was given a bridge table cover for low; and cut prize, a satin lined glove box, went to Mrs. J. T. Clements.

Others playing were Mrs. P. C. Parker Jr., Mrs. Frances P. Brown, Mrs. Olliff Boyd, Mrs. J. E. Bowen, Mrs. Tom Smith, Mrs. Billy Cone, Mrs. Sidney Smith, and Mrs. R. W. Muney.

MRS. SEWELL HOSTESS TO THE THREE O'CLOCKS
Mrs. Howell Sewell was hostess Wednesday afternoon to the Three O'Clocks at her home. Yuletide reds and greens were the colors of the decorations. Red roses and chrysanthemums were the flowers used. A desert course was served.

For high score, Mrs. George Johnston was given a Christmas tree cake, iced in white and showered with snowy coconut with red and green cherries and glazed pineapple furnishing a realistic Christmas lighting effect. Mrs. William Smith received a decorative ball of date nut bread; a similar prize went to Mrs. J. P. Foy for cut. Banana bread for second cut prize went to Mrs. Fred Blitch.

Others playing were Mrs. Henry Blitch, Mrs. R. J. Kennedy Jr., Mrs. Bob Donaldson, Mrs. Will Woodcock, Mrs. Sam Franklin, Mrs. W. A. Bowen, Mrs. Leodel Coleman, Mrs. H. D. Everett, Mrs. Everett Williams, Mrs. Loy Waters, Misses Elizabeth Sorrier and Dorothy Brannen.

PHILATHIA CLASS HAS CHRISTMAS PARTY

The lovely home of Mrs. T. E. Rushing, with artistic Christmas arrangements throughout the rooms thrown together for the occasion, was the scene of the annual Christmas party of the Philathia Class of the First Baptist Church.

The mantel in the living room was transformed into the Little Town of Bethlehem, complete with chapel and homes, fir trees and snow, and the manger scene with its animals. There were the Star and the Wise Men and the Babe in the Manger. Clouds floated over with tiny angels in them. The dining room table, ovelaid with lace, had a pillow arrangement of angel hair at one corner, with lovebirds, red berries and silver foliage and "Christmas" spelled out in silver, was illuminated by silver candles in low silver candelabra. The mantel in the dining room showed Santa and his reindeer racing over snow clouds and ice-capped mountains. Innumerable white reindeer and fir trees were used in this scene.

Hostesses for the party were Mrs. Frank Olliff, Mrs. Wallis Cobb, Mrs. Arnold Anderson and Mrs. George Groover.

Class members exchanged gifts. A party plate was served to about forty members of the class.

R. A. Macon, of Atlanta, visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Macon, last week end.

SOMETHING FOR NOTHING?

Our Government has nothing to give that it does not, first or last, take from the people who produce or earn. Taking from some to give to others can be the beginning of loss of freedom. It is only by working and saving as individuals that we can produce lasting benefits for all. A growing account in the bank, built up by systematic deposits out of earnings, represents the kind of security for which industrious and thrifty American citizens are constantly striving.

Lab Hi Student Council Meets

At its last meeting the Student Council completed plans for the improvement of the girls and boys restrooms.

Each homeroom is to be responsible for the restrooms for one week. A committee from the council will grade the rooms and post the score on the bulletin board. The plan is already in operation with the seventh grade leading off in the care of the rooms.

The council has also perfected plans for fire drills. The first fire drill was held on December 1, and others will be held each month. Mr. Yewell Thompson stated that the first fire drill was a great success with the entire building being cleared in 40 seconds.

KNOT HOLE CLUB

The Knot Holes completed their Christmas toy gathering last week. The toys they gathered were turned over to Don Coleman, of Statesboro High School Industrial Arts class, where they were repaired, painted and distributed to underprivileged children of this community. They are now working with the Girl Scouts in preparing a box of canned foods for needy families.

Tomorrow night (Friday) the H.G.L. Club will hold its annual formal dance at the Community Center. Members of the club and their dates are expecting a wonderful time. The Center is already decorated in the Christmas spirit.

ATHLETIC ASSN. FORMED
Under sponsorship of the Statesboro Department of Recreation the Statesboro Athletic Association has been organized. It will include both men and women. George Haggins has been named president and John Godbee executive secretary. Jack Tillman is secretary and Fuller Hunnicutt is treasurer.

Reba Barnes will serve as president of the women's division and Sue Hunnicutt and Julia Davis will act as secretary and treasurer.

Reba Barnes will serve as president of the men's group and Reba Barnes is in charge of the ladies group. Dues have been set at $1.00 group. Dues are $1.00 a month.

A large number of ladies were in attendance and the cutting out of aprons was the feature of the afternoon. Mrs. R. P. Miller presided over the business session at which plans were made for an oyster supper on December 29 for the members, with their husbands as honor guests. After a number of contests, refreshments were served, consisting of hot dogs, jelly-rolls, cocoa, roasted nuts, and minis. The time and place of the next meeting will be announced at a later date.
