Bo Hagan, Ex-Blue Devil On Tech Coaching Staff

Mrs. Lingo HDC Contest Winner

Harold (Bo) Hagan of Savannah, formerly of Statesboro, has been named on the freshman backfield coaching staff at Georgia Tech, according to an announcement Sunday by Tech Athletic Director Bobby Dodd.

He resigned his post as head football coach at O'Keefe High School in Atlanta.

Hagan's duties at Tech will be to handle freshmen backfield candidates and take scouting assignments for the varsity, Coach Dodd said.

Young Hagan was rated as one of the most talented ball handlers in the South. He played with the University of South Carolina team and in 1949 he quarterbacked his last Gamecock team.

The new Tech coach played football with the Statesboro High School Blue Devils in 1941 and 1942. In 1941 he played halfback with "Coot" Vandiver as coach, and in 1942 he was captain when "Red" Lingo was coaching. Others playing football with Hagan were Belton Braswell, Waldo Martin, Zack Smith, John Darley, Harold Hagan, Red Brown, Bill Aldred and J. G. Martin.

William R. Donaldson, gunner's mate, 3-C, USN, of Route 3, Statesboro, Ga., recently visited the Camp Wood Rest and Recuperation Center in southern Japan, located near famous Mt. Aso, one of two active volcanoes in Japan.

Both the ladies are active home demonstration club members. Mrs. Lingo belongs to the West Side club and Mrs. Brannen is a member of the Jimps club.

Moose Lodge To Be Formed

A lodge of the Loyal Order of Moose is being organized in Statesboro, with 40 membership applications in on Tuesday of this week, according to Geo. W. Banks, of Columbus, Ga., membership director, here helping with the new organization. A membership of 100 is required for a charter.

There are 39 lodges of the Moose organization in Georgia with a membership of over 16,000. There are more than 22,000 lodges in the English speaking nations with a membership of over a million.

The Moose order is an American fraternal organization with 63-year history of service and family protection. The order supports a home for members of the family of deceased members at Mooseheart, Ill., and a home for aged members and their wives at Moosehaven, Fla.

The order is non-political and non-sectarian. It is a patriotic organization demanding unqualified loyalty to the United States and profound respect for the flag.

Mrs. Lee stated that those helping him with the charter membership expect to secure the required 100 this week.

Poultry Winners

Frankie Deel and Martha Sue Smith were top 4-H club poultry contestants at the show held last week and won the right to represent Bulloch county at the State Fair in Macon October 15 to 20.

Runners-up in the contest were Jimmy Ridgen, Waldo Waters and Gail McCormick. H. W. Bennett, extension poultryman judging the contest, placed these three lots second because a few lice were found on the birds.

Wilbur Waters, Clarence Miller and Shelby Dean Frawley were in the third group since their birds had not yet come into production. Sears, Roebuck and Company gave the county 1,000 chicks in the spring and they were delivered to 10 clubbers. They fed them out and returned to the county agents 12 pullets to be sold, the money from which will be used to buy chicks for 10 other clubbers next year.

T.C. to Open With Less Students; Expanding Building Facilities

Georgia Teachers College will open the 1951-1952 session with fewer students but with expanding facilities.

Georgia Teachers College will open the 1951-1952 session with fewer students but with expanding facilities.

This will be a reversal of a pattern the college generally has known since it began awarding degrees in 1929, that of an increasing student body but little, if any, additional equipment.

The Freshman Class, reporting Sunday, is expected to number 100, the smallest group since the low war year of 1942. War-time demands on manpower, addition of the twelfth grade this year in many high schools, and the lack of a military or naval unit at the college are responsible.

Total resident enrollment in the college, President Zach S. Henderson says, may reach 600, with an additional 210 students in the Extension Division and 300 in the Laboratory School.

Last year the aggregate college registration, stimulated by the installation of Saturday and evening classes, was 894, larger for any regular session. In the recent summer quarter, 1287 were enrolled, as compared with 1346 for the previous Friday night, September.

Potentialities for growth are significant, however, in an outlay of more than a million dollars for new buildings, costing $340,000, should be completed by 1954. Governor Herman E. Talmadge recently broke ground for a $384,000 men's dormitory, and an archery and tennis building for an approved armory and gymnasium to cost $225,000.

Despite the decrease in the student body, the college will operate on a slightly expanded budget of $900,000, including an increase in salaries by the University System from $180,000 to $270,000. It will retain all teachers at an average salary increase of 10 percent and will charge the student $20 more for the year.

Academic innovations will include a two-year college course for industrial technicians and in the Laboratory School a kindergarten as a twelfth grade.

The Alumni Association has announced its objectives for the year as a project for an east entrance to the campus and a campaign for institution of master's degree study at the college.

Freshmen will register on Wednesday morning, seniors on Wednesday afternoon, and sophomores and juniors on Thursday. Classes will begin on Friday. Registration for Saturday classes will be held at 9 a. m. this Saturday.

A Challenge For Us

THIS WEEK is one of especial significance to every Georgian—whether he lives on the farm or in the city. It is a week of challenge. This week has been designated as "Soil Conservation Week" a week to remind us of the tremendous stake we have in preserving the productivity of our soil.

To a great extent, Georgians depend upon the soil for a living. To a greater extent, we here in Bulloch county look to the good earth for our existence.

This dependency makes a week such as this of great importance to every one of us. The Herald, in presenting a special "Soil Conservation Week" edition, believes there is something every one of us can do in promoting better soil conservation. We feel there is a lot to be done. We hope you will see the importance of Education as an important step. With the articles found in this week's Herald, we hope to educate you, to a degree, concerning soil conservation.

If, on your farm, or your neighbor's farm, just one step is taken toward conserving that valuable soil, then our efforts will not have been in vain.

We believe in Georgia.

We believe in Bulloch County.

We believe in soil conservation.

We commend "Soil Conservation Week" to you as a subject for thought, for discussion with your neighbors, for action on your farm. There is a lot you can do.

You can develop year-round pastures, to "Keep Bulloch Green." During winter months, lush, green pastures will provide food for healthy, growing cattle. They will make for richer milk, heavier beef, greater production. Greater production means greater monetary returns. More money helps everybody—farmer, merchant, businessman, banks, and government.

You can utilize worn-out, washed-out land. Putting a few extra acres to productive use will eventually pay off. Idle land is like idle money—it brings profit to no one.

You can preserve land that is being washed and eroded away. Terracing is not expensive in the long run. Rich topsoil washed into river bottoms is lost forever. Keeping your topsoil at home helps in many ways.

You can develop ponds. Ponds make easy watering for cattle. They provide water for irrigated farming, which has been tried in South Georgia with good results. Ponds provide fish, which help fill a gap in food supplies. Aside from these values, ponds provide leisure-time recreation. Fishing in the quiet of one's pond, the cares of the outside world simply fade away, bringing relaxation so vitally needed in the rush of present-day civilization.

You can enrich your soil with cover crops. Planting to enrich your soil is not expensive. It pays large dividends if you stop to do a little figuring. You can give your farm a new lease on life by occasionally turning back to the soil more than you take out of it.

These are but a few of the ways in which you can help yourself and your neighbors by sound conservation practices. If you have problems, or need more information, your District Soil Conservationist will be glad to help. He can provide you with up-to-date advice. He is anxious to serve you.

"Soil Conservation Week" holds a challenge for every one of us.

"What are you going to do about this challenge?"

Salute The Farm Bureau

IN ANOTHER EDITORIAL this week we have indicated that these seven days—from Monday, September 9, through Saturday, September 15—have been set aside as "Soil Conservation Week." We think it significant that part of this same period—September 10-15—has been designated as "Farm Bureau Week" in Bulloch county and Georgia.

Whether or not this was intentional, we do not know. But we like the idea. Our Farm Bureaus have done much to promote conservation. They have promoted sound farming practices. They have been important elements in our communities.

We believe the Farm Bureau to be one of our most important organizations. Georgia and Bulloch county farmers have been given a greater voice in national agricultural affairs through the Farm Bureau's efforts. As a result, farmers are enjoying a prosperity and a standard of living they have never before experienced.

We believe that, in order to maintain this voice, which will in turn help maintain this prosperity, the Farm Bureau membership must remain high.

We feel that membership in the Farm Bureau is vital not only to farmers, but to business and profession people of our community. As an agricultural community, which we primarily are, every one of us has an interest in sound agricultural practices.

During "Farm Bureau Week," we urge your support for this organization. It is made up of people you know. You belong—or, if you don't, you should.

We join with others in saluting the Farm Bureau during this "Farm Bureau Week."

An Opportunity

To Talk About

Others' Children

By VIRGINIA RUSSELL

A FRIEND OF MINE said that she was so glad to hear that I was going to teach school this year. She said she had some children other than my own to talk about. I asked her if she wanted me to lose my teaching job right off the bat.

But the temptation to write my new children is really too great and I'll have to take the chance. The children at home are delighted that I have some more family now to worry about. They think this added concern will take the heat off them.

There is only one drawback in writing about my foster children—there are too many to give each one the individual attention he deserves, and in such short space, too.

A schoolroom of children is like a big family. There are no two children alike in looks or temperament. There are some who are larger because their growth periods have come sooner than others, and because some will never be as large as others.

In my room there now—back in the nursery sound asleep, with a couple of more red-headed, freckled-faced little boys—and just as cute as they sound. Already one is able to see one or two who will have to be given much extra work because they finish up assignments in a hurry. There are two or three who sing very well and are most unselfish about their talents. They gladly share them with others, and I have seen no signs of jealousy among the rest.

There are the mischievous two or three who want to be good and have pulled their chairs away from the others so as to rid themselves of the temptation to talk, laugh, etc.

There are the lively ones and there are the quiet ones, the former taking up one's time and the latter needing to be goaded into action. There are the blue-eyed ones, the brown-eyed ones, the blonds and brunettes ones, tall ones and short ones—all different in so many ways.

But in one way they seem alike. They all are eager, expectant, and anxious to work and learn; maybe not always about sentences and multiplication, but about life. They all are alike in another respect—they want to be loved, even though they may show it in a thousand different ways.

It is a glorious experience to begin a school year with a roomful of school children, even though you may feel as helpless as you do with a new baby. In fact, next to being a mother, being a school-teacher is about the most sacred and challenging job a woman can have. I am happy over my new children, and they are every one wonderful!

ROGER HAGAN ELECTED BULLOCH 4-H CLUB HEAD

Roger Hagan became Bulloch county 4-H Club president Saturday afternoon as Miss Beverly Brannen completed her term of office.

Miss Brannen served for a year as president and saw the Bulloch county enrollment go up to fourth in the state, with 611 boys and 517 girls. During the year, 10 district winners were named and four chances remain for taking state honors in October.

It was like a champ turning the club over to a champ when Miss Brannen asked Roger to take over. She has just won the district honors in cotton and its uses and is trying for state honors. Roger has won the grand championship with his calf this year, won district honors in the rifle contest, and, with his brother, Raymond, took top honors in the pasture contest.

Other officers for 1951-52 as elected in the summer, but just now taking over are: Miss Patsy Edenfield, girls' vice president; Raymond Hagan, boys' vice president; (he is also district boys' vice president); Bobby Thompson, secretary and treasurer; Miss Beverly Brannen, secretary; and Miss Janice Deal, reporter. County advisors for the year are Mr. and Mrs. Delmas Rushing, Mr. and Mrs. Rufus G. Brannen, and Mr. and Mrs. K. D. Wilder.

The following points a valuable lesson. It is worth reading—and keeping. It is regretted that the author is unknown; otherwise, he would be given credit.

DADDY PLEASES WITH DRIVERS TO WATCH TOTS

Today, my daughter, who is 7 years old, started to school as usual. She wore a dark blue dress with a white collar. She had on black shoes and wore blue gloves. Her cooker spaniel, whose name is Coot, sat on the front porch and whined his canine belief in the jolly of education as she waved good-bye and started off to the hall of learning.

Tonight we talked about school. She told me about the girl who sits in front of her, the girl with yellow curls, and the boy across the aisle who makes funny faces.

She told me about her teacher who has eyes in the back of her head, and the trees in the schoolyard, and about the big girl who doesn't believe in Santa Claus. We talked about a lot of things—tremendously vital, unimportant things, and then we studied spelling, reading, arithmetic—and then to bed.

FRIENDS ATTEND CONCERT BY MISS HELEN ALDRED

Miss Helen Aldred, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Aldred, who for many years were residents of Statesboro, was presented by the Piano Teachers Club of Savannah at the first of their fall concerts.

Miss Aldred received her high school certificate in piano from Statesboro as a pupil of Mrs. Virginia Lee Hilliard. She won the state music contest which entitled her to a scholarship at Wesleyan Conservatory.

Miss Aldred performed brilliantly and the music critics were enthusiastic and very appreciative and laudatory in their newspaper comments.

Those from Statesboro who attended Miss Aldred's concert were Mrs. Virgil Lee Hilliard, Mrs. J. H. Floyd, Miss Marie Wood, Mrs. Joe Tillman, Miss Queen Collins and Miss Marjorie Crouch.

Former teachers, Prof. Joseph Maerts of Wesleyan Conservatory and Miss Bernice Frost of the State School of Music were in the audience.

B & PW CLUB REPRESENTED AT WASHINGTON MEETING

Miss Ann Williford returned on Tuesday last from Washington, D. C., where she went as a delegate from the Statesboro Business and Professional Women's Club to the Southeastern Regional Conference of B & P. W. clubs. The conference was held at the Shoreham Hotel. Forty-two delegates from Georgia were in attendance.

Miss Williford says that Georgia was the most outstanding of the social affairs during the conference. There were 500 delegates from the United States.

BETROTHAL DINNER

On Wednesday evening, September 5, Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Waters entertained at their lovely new home on Lake View road with a betrothal dinner honoring their son, Sgt. Hal Waters and his fiancée, Miss Shirley Walters, of Macon.

Covers were laid for the honorees; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Walters and twin daughters, Joan and Janet; St. Waters, Ann Waters, Frank DeLoach and Mr. and Mrs. Walters.

Guests were served a four course turkey dinner.

Later in the evening, other guests dropped by to meet the honorees. Miss Joan Walters, 16, a piano student of Dr. Joseph Maerts, director of music at Wesleyan Conservatory, played continuously in response to requests.

SENIOR WOMAN'S CLUB IN FIRST FALL MEETING

The Senior Woman's Club will meet Thursday afternoon, September 20, at 8:30 o'clock, at the club room.

MR. COLEMAN ADDRESSES STATESBORO GARDEN CLUB

The Statesboro Garden Club met Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Hazel Smallwood, with Mrs. Charlie Robbins as co-hostess.

Mrs. Sam Strauss and Mrs. Harry Spack were in charge of the program.

Leode Coleman, guest speaker, had been invited to discuss bulbs. After a discussion on bulbs, which the women declared both practical and very interesting, Mr. Coleman went far afield and cleverly maneuvered into a new discussion which held the women spellbound. He suggested that the lady gardeners put the man in the house in the back yard—not in the doghouse, but in the middle of a flower bed. Yes, like Markham, he portrayed "The Man with a Hoe."

The women were at first apprehensive on the defensive. The flower garden was being invaded. But as Editor Coleman, in his inimitable manner, developed his theory, the women settled down and frankly agreed that the man in the house should be allowed at least equal rights, if not priority, in this business of gardening for beauty. Only time will tell if the husbands of these women will be converts to the cause. In the meantime, Mr. Coleman is being quiet, very quiet.

Those present were Mrs. Henry Ellis, Mrs. Irma Lee, Mrs. Howard Neal Jr., Mrs. Buford Knight, Mrs. M. C. Cowart, Mrs. Harry Brunson, Mrs. Hugh Arundel, Mrs. Brunson, Mrs. Sidney Lanier, Mrs. Lawrence Mallard and Mrs. Johnny Thayer.

Devils food cake and ice cream were served as refreshments.

Some of the Aspects of Soil Erosion

By W. C. HUGGINS
Representative of S. C. S.

Soil erosion, the bodily displacement of soil by water and wind, is as old as agriculture. When the land surface was first bare of its protective vegetation—as it had to be under cultivation—the soil was exposed to the abrasive action of the elements. In a natural undisturbed environment the soil is protected from erosion by its vegetative cover with its canopy of leaves, its stems, ground cover of litter and underground network of binding roots.

But man relies for sustenance on the products of the soil, and he struggles to wrest the land from nature to produce those products. Often his conquest of the land has proven disastrous, resulting in extreme impoverishment or complete destruction of the soil resources on which he is dependent for food, clothing and shelter. It has been said that so direct is the relationship between soil erosion, the productivity of the land, and the prosperity of the people, that history of mankind, to a considerable degree at least, may be interpreted in terms of the soil and what has happened to it as a result of human use. Abuse or neglect of the land that sustained the populace and commerce is believed to have played a major part in the decline of civilization now extinct.

Erosion Spread.
In the United States, physical, economic and social circumstances have contributed to the spread of soil erosion at a rate perhaps unequalled in history. Physically, more than three-fourths of continental United States is subject, in some degree, to some form of erosion process, when the land is exposed to the effects of wind and rain. The early colonists in this new world entertained an illusion of everlasting land abundance, with axe and plow he rolled back nature's protective mantle of trees and grasses on these vulnerable lands, laying them bare to the effects of wind and rain. He left widespread soil erosion in his wake as he "wore out" one farm and moved on to clear up another lying westward. Once he arrived on the west coast and then he realized that there were no more new farms to occupy. He would have to start rebuilding those that had been "worn out" and abandoned.

The extent of land damage caused by soil erosion during America's brief period of exploitive land use, ranging from the most part from about 50 to 100 years, has been shown by reconnaissance surveys of the United States, excluding mountains, mesas and badlands, approximately 282 million acres have been either ruined or severely damaged by soil erosion. An additional 775 million acres have lost from one-fourth to three-fourths of their topsoil. Out of a total of 414 million acres of cropland, 50 million acres had been ruined for cultivation, 50 million acres were severely damaged, 100 million acres had lost one-half to more than three-fourths of their topsoil and erosion was beginning on another 100 million acres.

Three Billion Tons
Estimates, based on reliable measurements, show that together, water and wind erosion remove not less than 3 billion tons of soil from the croplands and associated pastures of the nation every year. Also that some 730 million tons of solid matter are carried annually into the Gulf of Mexico by the Mississippi River alone.

This 3 billion tons of wasted soil contains the equivalent of some 90 million tons of phosphorus, potassium, nitrogen, calcium and magnesium; of this 43 million tons represent phosphorus, potassium and nitrogen, the principal ingredients of commercial fertilizer. This is more than 90 times the amount of these elements of plant food used in the United States as commercial fertilizers during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1934.

No other process or combination of processes is so destructive of valuable soil and its nutritive constituents as erosion. By comparison the removal of plant-food constituents by cropping and grazing is relatively small. But more important than the loss of plant-food constituents is the loss of the soil itself. Erosion removes the entire physical mass of the soil—crops remove only selected parts of the soil; the immediately soluble constituents upon which they feed.

Effects Widespread
The physical effects of water erosion are not confined to the loss of soil. They extend to adjacent lower areas far and near, as well as stream channels, drainage ditches, reservoirs and harbors where a large portion of the material removed from eroding lands comes to rest—unwanted and not needed. Much good bottom land has been ruined by this erosion debris. It has also contributed to increased flood damage along many streams.

From an economical and social standpoint the implications of soil erosion are extensive and important. Any process which destroys the productivity of the soil can exercise only an adverse effect on an economy that depends fundamentally upon the soil. Erosion is such

It will take more than 'cussin' to stop 'em!

Dowse Donaldson In Key Position In Atlanta

Dowse Donaldson, son of a pioneer Bulloch county family, now holds the key position in Atlanta's city council.

As chairman of the powerful public works committee and a member of other important committees of council, the white-haired, blue-eyed Alderman Donaldson is primarily responsible for major improvements now being made in Georgia's rapidly expanding capital.

He has even been mentioned as a possible successor to the popular William B. Hartsfield—one of his closest friends—another mayor of Atlanta.

Another of the many Bulloch county sons who has made his mark in the state and nation, Mr. Donaldson was born in the Excelleer family near Register in 1880. His family moved to Blackshear when he was 14, but he is related to several hundred other Bulloch county citizens. His father was William Donaldson. His mother was Mrs. Sarah Virginia Dekle Donaldson.

A prosperous cemetery operator, Mr. Donaldson was appointed to the Atlanta city council in 1946 to fill an unexpired term as alderman from the Fifth Ward, which includes the fashionable Ansley Park section. He was reelected in 1949.

Almost from the day he first took his seat in council, Alderman Donaldson has been in the forefront of every council debate.

He was a leader in the successful fight to extend the Atlanta city limits, a program that will triple the city's land area next January 1.

As chairman of the public works committee, he has been chiefly responsible for resurfacing most of the city's downtown streets, for a major sidewalk widening program, and for improvements in the city sewer system.

He is also on the city police committee, the board of firemen, the health committee and the committee that supervises the southeastern fair.

The alderman's father was the oldest of 10 Donaldson children, all of whom remained in Bulloch county. Dowse Donaldson himself was the fourth of eight children.

After he finished Excelleer school, the family moved to Blackshear, where he went to the old Presbyterian Institute.

In 1906, at the age of 20, he went to Atlanta. He worked 18 months in a bank and then turned to the insurance business. From 1920 to 1925 he was general agent of the Southern States Life Insurance Company. He then bought out a tire company which he operated until 1934.

In that year he acquired all the stock in Greenwood cemetery, which he developed into one of the finest cemeteries in Georgia. It is the second largest in Atlanta and one of the largest in the state. Some 15,000 persons are buried in the cemetery. It has 300 to 400 new burials each year.

His sister, Miss Abbie Donaldson, who from Bulloch county, operates the cemetery office. He handles all lot sales himself. The cemetery covers 210 acres.

In 1914 Mr. Donaldson married Miss Fannie G. Mayson, who was the daughter of the late James L. Mayson, for many years Atlanta city attorney. Since 1921 they have lived at 820 Penn avenue. They have no children.

Mr. Donaldson is a charter member of the Atlanta Kiwanis club and is believed to be the oldest Kiwanis club member in point of service in the South. He has served the Atlanta club as secretary and treasurer in past years.

He is a past master of Gate City Masonic Lodge, a member of the Shrine and a 33rd degree Mason.

Mr. Donaldson has been an officer of Atlanta's First Presbyterian Church since 1918. Now an elder, he is one of the church's most influential members.

He has been active in Community Chest and Red Cross drives. Mr. Donaldson and his wife like to travel, and about once each year they return to Bulloch county to visit again Lot's Creek Church, Lake Church and other spots familiar to his boyhood. They also like foreign and transcontinental travel, having often visited New York and the West Coast. Recently they were in Mexico and Guatemala. Next year they plan a trip to Europe.

Although it has been more than half a century since William Donaldson packed his children into wagons for the trip from Excelleer to Blackshear, Alderman Donaldson still calls Bulloch county home.

Said he: "There is no place like it."
