Citation Workshops in the Henderson Library

by Ruth Baker, Information Services Librarian

Are your students confused about citation styles, style guides and how or when to cite sources?

Please encourage them to attend one of the 'drop-in' Citation Workshops offered by library faculty in the Zach S. Henderson Library. In these workshops, students will:

- Learn what needs to be cited and what doesn't
- Learn how citations work, from the in-text citations/footnotes to the reference list
- Learn the parts of citations from various kinds of sources AND how to use Style Guides

Credo Information Literacy Modules

by Lori Gwinett and Lisa Smith, Information Services Librarians

Henderson Library has trial access to the Information Literacy Modules created by CREDO Reference. These modules have the potential to greatly benefit some key student cohorts, such as online students, or students who have limited access to campus. They are also a great resource for faculty whose class curriculum do not allow for class time spent in the library, or for follow-up after a library instruction session.

Information Literacy Modules cover topics for which a 'one-shot' (50 minute) presentation is insufficient, so that students have hands-on practice with skills in finding resources, or can get more specific instruction after viewing the videos prior to class. This "flipped classroom" environment helps the students get prepared for what librarians have to offer, and makes much more constructive use of the time students spend with a librarian.

The modules provide over 50 quality videos, tutorials, and quizzes. Topics covered include the following:

- Getting Started with Research
- Sources of Information
- Evaluating Information
- Presenting Research and Data
- Citations and Academic Integrity

These learning modules will benefit Henderson Library's Information Literacy program. They are:

- ADA Compliant
- Mapped to the new ACRL Information Literacy Framework
- Multimedia format
- Embeddable into Classroom Management Systems, LibGuides®, and Webpages

We would like to hear from! Your feedback on these modules is greatly appreciated. The library has a trial access until March 18, 2016 and if you would like to explore the Information Literacy Modules, contact the Information Desk at 912-478-5645 for access information.
