Under the Radar: Learning to Pay Attention to 21st Century Literacies

What new understandings of "text" and "composing" will students bring with them to the college classroom in the next decade--especially those students operating within electronic communication environments? Are teachers of English composition--grounded by their education and values in the environment of print--prepared to work with these understandings in productive ways? To help graduates develop new understandings of these terms that may go beyond our own? How does (and how will) our profession respond to such challenges? ■

Dr. Selfe will also present a plenary session at 3:00 p.m. on visual and multimodal texts in the composition classroom.
